MEANING OF TERMS

USED IN CLASSIFYING ANNOTATING CASES.

THE different expressions used to describe the effect of the annotating cases have the following meanings, and the classification of the annotating cases has been done strictly in accordance with these meanings. The annotating cases, except such as are classified as "Mentioned," are grouped according to the points in the case which they annotate: within these groups they are listed chronologically, except such as are classified as "Referred to," which come at the end of the group and are arranged inter se in chronological order. Cases which annotate the annotated case generally are grouped together after cases which annotate specific points, similarly arranged, and are followed by cases classified as "Mentioned" arranged chronologically inter se. The terms used in classifying the annotating cases are as follows:—

- "APPLIED" (Apld.).—This expression is used to denote the fact that the principle of law enunciated in the annotated case has been applied to a new set of facts and circumstances in the annotating case.
- "APPROVED" (Apprvd.).—This expression is used to denote the fact that the annotated case has been considered to be good law in the annotating case where the latter is in a higher court than the former.
- "CONSIDERED" (Consd.).—This expression is used where the remarks in the annotating case are devoid of adverse criticism and merely denote the giving of more or less careful consideration to the annotated case.
- "DISTINGUISHED" (Distd.).—This expression is used where the earlier case is not necessarily doubted, but where some essential difference (either on the facts or in law) between it and the annotated case is pointed out.
- "DOUBTED" (Dbtd.).—This expression is used where the court in the annotating case without definitely going to the length of saying that the annotated case is wrong, adduces reasons which seem to show that it is not accurate.
- "EXPLAINED" (Expld.).—This expression is used where the earlier case is not necessarily doubted, but the decision arrived at is justified or accounted for by calling attention to some point of fact or of law which is usually, but not necessarily, one not obvious on the face of the report.
- "EXTENDED" (Extd.).—Compare "APPLIED," supra.
- "FOLLOWED" (Folld.).—This expression is used to denote that the same principles of law are applied in the two cases. It does not necessarily imply that the facts are substantially identical in the two cases.
- "NOT FOLLOWED" (N.F.).—Compare "FOLLOWED," supra, to which it is the adverse.
- "OVERRULED" (Overd.).—This expression is used where the annotating case is on substantially identical facts with the annotated case and in a higher court and the rule in the latter case is held to be wrong.
- "REFERRED" (Refd.).—This expression is used only where the annotating case deals with the point of the Digest paragraph and is without comment of any definite character on the case annotated, and where there is no delicate shade of approval or disapproval which would justify the use of any of the foregoing words.
- "MENTIONED" (Mentd.).—This expression is used only where none of the foregoing terms apply. In other words, it is used only where the case annotated is cited on a point having nothing to do with the point in the Digest paragraph.

Part I.—In General.

NOTE.—In this Part Succession Duty Act, 1853 (c. 51), Customs and Inland Revenue Act, 1881 (c. 12), Customs and Inland Revenue Act, 1889 (c. 7), Inland Revenue Regulation Act, 1890 (c. 21), Finance Act, 1894 (c. 30), Finance Act, 1896 (c. 28), Finance Act, 1900 (c. 7), Finance Act, 1907 (c. 13), Finance (1909–1910) Act, 1910 (c. 8) are referred to as 1853 Act, 1881 Act, 1889 Act, 1890 Act, 1894 Act, 1896 Act, 1900 Act, 1907 Act, 1909–1910 Act respectively.

SECT. 1.—INTERPRETATION AND APPLICATION OF TERMS.

See, generally, 1894 Act, Part I., ss. 1–24.

1. Interpretation — Incidence of duties.] —

(1) Foreign bonds & certificates payable to bearer, passing by delivery, & marketable on the London Stock Exchange are, when physically situate in the United Kingdom at the death of the owner, liable to estate duty under 1894 Act, even though the deceased was a foreigner domiciled abroad.

(2) This provision [1894 Act, s. 2 (2)] adequately protects the representatives of a person dying domiciled abroad, for under the decisions already referred to the property of such persons when situated out of the United Kingdom would not be liable to legacy & succession duty (LORD GORELL).

(3) It may be noticed that it is equally clear that the effect of 1894 Act is to make all the property, wherever situate, of a person dying domiciled in this country, in respect of which legacy & succession duty is payable, liable to estate duty, although before the Act it would not have been liable to probate duty except so far as it was situate in this country (LORD GORELL).

(4) Legacy & succession duties fall upon the benefits received by survivors on their accession upon a death. Estate duty falls upon the property passing upon a death, apart from its destination. 1894 Act is in that respect analogous not to the Legacy & Succession Duty Acts, but to the old Probate Duty Acts, which it supersedes in so far as they cover common ground. No doubt the estate duty covers more than did the probate duty. Also it is possible, though no instance has been established in regard to personal property, that the probate duty may in some point extend beyond the ambit of the estate duty. But in the main the class of property once liable to the one duty is now liable to the other, & both proceed, not upon any assessment of benefit arising upon the death of this or that particular person, but upon the value of the property which passed upon the death of the deceased (LORD LOREBURN, C.).

(5) S. 6 (2) of that Act [1894 Act] expressly provides that exor. of deceased shall pay the estate duty in respect of all personal property, wheresoever situated, of which deceased was at the time of his death competent to dispose in delivering the Inland Revenue Affidavit (LORD ATKINSON).

(6) It appears to me to be clear that on the occasion of delivering this affidavit it was the duty of the Inland Revenue to see to it that estate duty was paid (LORD SHAW).

(7) The principle that domicile governs the liability to legacy & succession duties, has, as to personalty within the jurisdiction, no concern with the estate duty as it had no concern with the probate duties (LORD LOREBURN, C.).

(8) It is difficult, if not impossible, to suggest any case in which with regard to persons dying after the commencement of 1894 Act the new duty is not substituted for the old probate duties (LORD GORELL).—WINANS v. A.-G., [1910] A. C. 27; 79 L. J. K. B. 156; 101 L. T. 754; 26 T. L. R. 133; 54 Sol. Jo. 133, H. L.; affg. S. C. sub nom. WINANS v. R., [1908] 1 K. B. 1022, C. A.

4. — Substance of transactions—Not forms of conveyancing—1894 Act & Succession Duty Acts.]—LETHBRIDGE v. A.-G., No. 99, post.

5. “Death duties” — Includes succession duty.]—A testatrix directed “the death duties payable out of my estate” to be paid out of a specific fund:—Held: (1) this was an “express provision” within 1896 Act, s. 19 (1), so that the settlement estate duty on chattels settled by the will was payable out of the specific fund.

(2) A direction to pay “the death duties payable out of my estate” out of a specific fund, would, primâ facie, include all death duties, i.e., settlement estate duty as well as estate duty (SWINFEN EADY, J.).—Re CAYLEY, AWDREY v. CAYLEY, [1904] 2 Ch. 781; 74 L. J. Ch. 31; 91 L. T. 743; 53 W. R. 260.

6. — Although legacy duty expressly named.]—Where testator stated in his will “the following legacies I give free of legacy duty, which is to be borne by my residuary estate,” & then proceeded to leave numerous pecuniary & specific legacies to various persons other than his sister, & then devised & bequeathed his property at W. to his sister, & his residue to his trustees on trust to sell & pay, inter alia, his death duties, & the residue to certain residuary legatees:—Held: the words “death duties” must here be taken to include succession duty, & the earlier provision as to payment of legacy duty was redundant.—Re HAMPTON, HAMPTON v. MAWER (1918), 62 Sol. Jo. 585.

9. Duty payable in succession—On subject-matter of succession—1889 Act, ss. 5, 6.]—Under a marriage settlement, personal property, valued at the death of the settlor at £20,075 was settled (inter alia) upon the wife for life, & upon her children absolutely on their attaining 21 years of age or on their marriage. Upon the death of the settlor the wife succeeded to the life interest in the property. The value of her interest, taken on the basis of an annuity, was admittedly estimated at less than £10,000, & there being nine children entitled in remainder their several interests in the corpus of £20,075 clearly in no case exceeded £10,000. The trustees having duly presented one account for the several succession duties, all chargeable at the same rate of one per cent., the Comptroller of Legacy & Succession Duties claimed further “estate duty,” leviable under above sects., upon the value of any succession exceeding £10,000. The trustees declined to pay, on the ground that none of the beneficiaries individually succeeded to personal property exceeding £10,000 in value:—Held: estate duty was payable on the ground that the term “succession” in above sects. applied to the subject-matter of the succession, & not to the individual interests of the several successors, & consequently the corpus of the estate being valued in excess of £10,000, estate duty must be paid as upon a succession the value of which exceeded that amount.—A.-G. v. ABERDARE (LORD), [1892] 2 Q. B. 684; 61 L. J. Q. B. 615; 67 L. T. 588; 56 J. P. 806; 8 T. L. R. 653, D. C.

10. “Equitable charge”—Real Estate Charges

Act, 1877 (c. 34).]—The charge, created by Finance 1894 Act, s. 2 (1), whereby estate duty is charged upon property, is an “equitable charge” within 1877 Act. Where, therefore, land descended on an intestacy in 1904 to B., who himself died intestate in 1907 without having paid the estate duty, which became payable on the death of his predecessor:—Held: above Act applied, & B.’s heir-at-law was not entitled to have the land exonerated from payment of the duty by the personal estate.—Re BOWERMAN, PORTER v. 1908] 2 Ch. 340; 77 L. He gave various legacies, & then devised & bequeathed all his real & personal estate not thereby otherwise disposed of upon trust for sale & conversion, & out of the proceeds to pay his funeral & testamentary expenses & debts & legacies, & to stand possessed of the residuary trust moneys upon certain trusts. The G. property passed to the trustees under the residuary devise:—Held: upon the true construction of the will, the annuity was not a rentcharge, but was a personal annuity secured by a charge on the G. property, & the estate duty on it must be paid by the exors. as testamentary expenses.—*Re TRENCHARD, TRENCHARD v. 19. — Not on donatio mortis causa.]—(1) The subject-matter of a donatio mortis causa is "property which does not pass to the exor. as such" within the 1894 Act, s. 9 (1). If, therefore, the exor. pays the estate duty upon it, he will be entitled to recover from the donee the amount of the duty so paid, which, under above sub-sect. will be a first charge on the subject-matter of the donation. Estate duty on the subject-matter of a donatio mortis causa is not a testamentary expense, & therefore, is not payable by the exor. under a direction in a will to pay "testamentary expenses" out of the testator's residuary estate.

She directed her exors. to pay "testamentary expenses, including death duties":—Held: none of the legatees were entitled to have the duties payable under 1909–1910 Act, s. 58 (2), on their respective interests discharged out of the residuary personal estate.—*Re MASSEY, RAM v. charged with an annuity to the son payable during the father's life, & subject thereto were declared to be held in trust for the father for life & after his death for the son for life with remainders over. Upon the father's death in 1895 the Crown claimed from the son under 1894 Act, estate duty upon the gross value of the estates without allowing any deduction in respect either of the mtge. to the co. or of the annuity which ceased with the father's life:—Held: (1) the case fell under 1894 Act, s. 1; (2) the settled property which passed to the son on the father's death was only the equity of redemption; (3) estate duty was therefore payable only on the equity of redemption; (4) no deduction was allowable in respect of the annuity.

(5) The principle on which 1894 Act was founded is that whenever property changes hands on death the State is entitled to step in & take toll of the property as it passes without regard to its destination or to the degree of relationship, if any, that may have subsisted between deceased & the person or persons succeeding. Sect. 1 gives effect to that principle. Subject to certain exceptions or savings it imposes a duty called estate duty upon the principal value of all property settled or not settled which passes on death. Sect. 2 is merely subsidiary & supplemental. It was intended apparently to sweep in a few cases which were thought perhaps to be within the spirit though not within the letter of the proposed enactment or else were supposed likely to lead to evasion if not made equally subject to estate duty. Sect. 2 therefore declares that the expression "property passing on the death of deceased" shall be "deemed to include" property classified under four different heads. The two sections are mutually exclusive (LORD MACNAGHTEN).—COWLEY (EARL) v. INLAND REVENUE COMRS., [1899] A. C. 198; 68 L. J. Q. B. 435; 80 L. T. 361; 63 J. P. 436; 47 W. R. 525; 15 T. L. 30. Interest in expectancy—Marriage settlement—Wife predeceasing husband.]—(1) By a marriage settlement personal property was settled in trust for the husband for life, after his death for the wife for life, & after the death of the survivor for such persons as the wife by deed or will should appoint. The wife died, having exercised the power of appointment by will. Upon her death estate duty was paid under 1894 Act in respect of her expectancy, upon the principal value of the settled property, the value of her husband's life interest being deducted. Upon the husband's death the Crown claimed estate duty again upon the principal value of the settled property. The settlement trustees paid the claim, but afterwards petitioned for the return of the amount, less the value of the husband's life interest, alleging that on his death estate duty became payable (if at all) only on the value of his life interest:—Held: estate duty having been paid upon the settled property since the date of the settlement, namely, upon the wife's death, s. 5 (2) of 1894 Act exempted the settled property from estate duty until the death of a person who was at the time of his death or had been at any time during the continuance of the settlement competent to dispose of the property, & the husband not being such a person, the trustees were entitled to a return of the amount for which they petitioned, & if they had claimed the return of the whole sum they had paid upon the husband's death they would have been entitled to it.

(2) The wife died in the lifetime of her husband. On her death . . . there was no "passing" of property within the meaning of s. 1 taken by itself. No property changed hands. . . . But under s. 2 (a), taken in conjunction with s. 1, estate duty became liable in respect of the settled property as being property of which, at the time of her death, Mrs. S. was competent to dispose (LORD MACNAGHTEN).—INLAND REVENUE COMRS. v. #### 31. Reversionary interest in settled fund.]—

(1) Under a settlement made in 1902 certain funds were vested in trustees upon trust for testator for life & on his death for his widow for life, & subject thereto, for testator absolutely. By his will dated in 1907 testator disposed of his interest in the settled funds. Upon his death in 1908, leaving his widow surviving, the question arose whether the estate duty upon testator's rever-dying after the coming into force of the Act, under a covenant & charge contained in a marriage settlement executed by him before the coming into force of the Act.—Re CRAWFORD (1892), 10 N. Z. L. R. 193.—N.Z.

PART. II. SECT. 3, SUB-SECT. 2.—B. g. Gifts from husband to wife—Unrevoked at death of donor.]—A husband who had stante matrimonio gifted a sum of money to his wife, died some years afterwards, without sionary interest in the settled funds was payable out of his residuary personal estate as testamentary expenses, or out of the settled funds:—Held: as between the beneficiaries under the will the duty was payable out of the residuary personal estate.

(2) It is perfectly clear that the reversionary interest in the settled fund formed part of testator's estate which he was competent to dispose of at his death (COZENS-HARDY, M.R.).—*Re AVERY, PINSENT v. 32. Property settled by statute—Tenant in tail.—Under private Acts of Parliament R. became entitled to certain real estate at G.:—Held: R. was tenant in tail & was competent to dispose of the G. estates at the date of his death within 1894 Act, s. 2, & on his death estate duty became payable on the principal value of those estates.—*A.-G. v. 33. Property situate out of United Kingdom—Deceased having limited power of appointment.—Testator who was domiciled in England had property situated in the United Kingdom & also in America. In 1916 he settled his American property upon certain trusts for his issue. The settlement provided that the settlor might with the consent of the trustees revoke it & appoint the property for the benefit of himself or any of his children. By a supplemental deed he revoked the settlement in part & appointed & declared that after his death the trustees should (inter alia) out of the trust fund raise & pay to the exors. of his English will the amounts paid by the exors. for any English death duties payable on his death & directed by the will to be paid by the exors. In 1917, he made an English will, expressly providing that it was not thereby intended to dispose of any of his American property, & he directed that all English death duties payable on or by reason of his death should be paid by his exors. out of moneys made available & applicable in that behalf by the American settlement & the supplemental deed. Upon the death of testator, in 1919, the A.-G. filed an information claiming a declaration that such part of the American trust fund as was required for the payment of the English death duties formed part of the residuary estate of testator & was liable to estate duty & legacy duty:—Held: the property in question passed on the death of testator under Finance Act, 1894 (c. 30), s. 1, but being situate out of the United Kingdom, by sect. 2, sub-sect. 2, it was only liable to estate duty "if under the law in force before the passing of the Act legacy duty was payable in respect thereof or would be payable but for the relationship of the person to whom it passes."

Under Revenue Act, 1845 (c. 76), s. 4, "every gift by any will or testamentary instrument of any person, which by virtue of any such will or testamentary instrument is or shall be payable, or shall have effect or be satisfied out of the personal or movable estate or effects of such person, or out of any personal or movable estate or effects which such person hath had or shall have had power to dispose of" shall be chargeable with legacy duty. In this case none of the conditions mentioned in that sub-sect. were fulfilled & legacy duty was therefore not payable; & consequently estate duty also was not payable.—A.-G. v. ASTOR, [1923] 2 K. B. 157; 92 L. J. K. B. 515; 129 L. T. 116; 39 T. L. R. 256, C. A.

34. Interest only as holder of office—Trustee.—A.-G. v. EYRES, No. 297, post.

35. Interest in goodwill of partnership.—A father & his two sons carried on the business of lace manufacturers under a deed of partnership which included covenants to the following effect: Neither of the sons was, without the consent of the father, to be directly or indirectly engaged in any trade or business except on account & for the benefit of the partnership; both the sons were bound to give so much time & attention to the business as the proper conduct of its affairs required; the father was not bound to give more time or attention to the business than he should think fit; if the father should die his share was to accrue to the sons in equal shares, subject only to their paying out to his representatives the value of his share & interest at his death as ascertained by an account to be made as on the day of his death with all proper valuations, but without any valuation of or allowance for goodwill, which goodwill was to accrue to the sons in equal shares. The father died. The value of his share & interest at his death was ascertained by an account taken as directed by the deed of partnership without any valuation of or allowance for goodwill. The share & interest so ascertained amounted to a large sum, & estate duty was paid on that sum. The Crown claimed estate duty on the value of the father's share in the goodwill on the ground that it was (a) property which passed on the death of the father within 1894 Act, s. 1 (2) (b), or (b) property in which the deceased had an interest ceasing on his death in which a benefit accrued or arose to the sons by the cesser of that interest within s. 2 (1) (b) of that Act, or (c) property passing under a settlement by deed whereby an interest for life was reserved to the father, & therefore property which would be required on the death of the father to be included in an account under 1881 Act, s. 38, as amended by 1889 Act, s. 11, as further amended by & within the provision of 1894 Act, s. 1 (2) (c), or (d) an interest provided by the father in which a beneficial interest accrued or arose by survivorship on his death within s. 2 (1) (d) of the Act. The Ct. deciding on the evidence that the goodwill of the business was of small value:—Held: (1) having regard to the obligations of the sons under the partnership deed, the share & interest of the father in the goodwill of the business passed on the death of the father to the sons by reason only of a bona fide purchase for full consideration in money's worth paid to the father for his own use & benefit, within 1894 Act, s. 3 (1); (2) this was a question for the Ct., & not for the Comrs., under s. 7 of 1894 Act, to determine; (3) the share & interest of the father in the goodwill of the business was not (a) property which passed on the death of the father within s. 1 of 1894 Act, having taken any steps to revoke the donation:—Held: the sum was property of which the deceased husband was at the date of his death competent to dispose, & estate duty was payable. —LORD ADVOCATE v. GUNNING'S

36. Interest as annuitant—Charged on testator's residuary estate.]—A testator who died before the commencement of 1894 Act, by his will bequeathed his real & personal estate to trustees for sale & investment, & for payment out of the annual income thereof of an annuity to his wife, & subject to the annuity, to his eight children, equally, & after the death of his wife to divide the trust fund among the children in equal shares; but if the fund exceeded a certain specified sum, then to divide eight-ninths of such excess among the children, & to pay the remaining ninth to certain other persons. The wife died after above Act had come into operation:—Held: estate duty was only payable on the one-ninth share of the excess of the trust fund over the specified sum & on the benefit which accrued to the children by the cesser of the annuity, since that was the only property passing on the death of his wife.—Re TOWNSEND, [1901] 2 K. On his father's death in 1906 deft. paid estate duty on the full value of the real estate devised to him less only a deduction therefrom of the value calculated according to the succession duty tables of an annuity of £1,000 for the life of M., who was then aged 64. By deed, dated Feb. 11, 1922, M. released & extinguished her annuity, & on Nov. 26, 1922, she died. Thereupon the Crown claimed from deft., by virtue of 1900 Act, s. 11 (1), estate duty on the property to the extent to which a benefit accrued by reason of the cesser of the annuity:—Held: estate duty was not payable on the cesser of the annuity, inasmuch as M. had not an interest in the property ceasing on her death, & deft. was not "a person entitled to an estate or interest in remainder or reversion in such property" within the sub-sect.—*A.-G. v. (2) By the settlement made on the second marriage of a widow it was provided that out of 19,500 fully paid-up shares which she was entitled to have allotted to her, 1,000 should be allotted to each of her four adult sons by the former marriage, & the remaining 15,500 to trustees, as to 3,200 upon trust for her two infant sons & two married daughters by her former marriage, & as to the remaining 12,300 upon trust to pay a life annuity to her husband, & subject thereto, to pay the income to settlor for life, & hold the fund after her death, in trust for the children of the former marriage as she should appoint. Settlor died within twelve months after the settlement, having exercised by will her power of appointment in favour of the children of the former marriage:—Held: account duty was payable, for the children of the wife by her first husband were without the consideration of the marriage; with regard to the shares in which the settlor took no life interest, the disposition in favour of such children was therefore a "voluntary disposition" within sub-sect. 2 (a), though contained in a marriage settlement; with regard to the shares in which settlor took a life interest, the children of the first marriage took under a trust "in favour of a volunteer."—*A.-G. v. 49. — In pursuance of moral obligation.]—N., by his will dated Dec. 13, 1901, devised & bequeathed all his estate & effects of every description to his brother, C., absolutely, & he appointed his brother, H. & G. exors. & trustees of his will. On Jan. 11, 1902, N. signed a document or letter, which has not been admitted to probate, which was headed "Instructions to my exors. C., M., & G.—Dear Brother C. (I dictated this to G.), I have failed to make provision for the distribution of my property amongst my relatives & friends before it became too late to do it with care. For this reason I have left all my estate to you in the fullest reliance that you will, as far as possible & to the uttermost, carry out any wish that I may express in writing now or later, or which may be conveyed to you verbally by G. or my cousin Henry. I have made a settlement on P. D. which should suffice for him. As regards our family, you will be the best judge how & when a suitable distribution should be made. I do not fetter your discretion in any way. You are an old man, & therefore do not delay the distribution." Then followed directions as to the disposal of certain property & amounts to be paid to certain persons. The document concluded: "Finally, these are the instructions referred to in my will. They are not in any way to fetter C., & may probably be added to if I am spared, or I may carry some out in my own lifetime." A copy of this document was sent to C., who, on Jan. 14, 1902, wrote to G. a letter in which he said: "All I wish to say now is that every wish expressed by my brother shall be carried out to the very fullest extent so far as I am concerned, & as far as all we three exors. are concerned, for his wishes are sacred, every word." The effect of this letter was communicated to N. N. died on Feb. 18, 1902, & his will was proved by all the exors., & estate duty & legacy duty was paid on his estate, including sums given or settled by testator within twelve months of his death. C. took possession as beneficial owner of the residuary personal estate & of the freehold & leasehold estate of N., & he made on May 13, 1902 (within twelve months next before his death) a settlement of £5,000 on each of his four nephews & niece. C. also gave & paid other sums to various persons in accordance with the instructions in the letter of Jan. 11, 1902. C. died on Dec. 13, 1902:—Held: no trust was created, & the settlement of £5,000 so made was a gift made by C. within twelve months of his death, & so estate duty & settlement estate duty were payable in respect thereof.—*A.-G. v. 1. Transfer to sons—Value exceeding consideration.—Not a gift of the difference in value.]—A father, 80 years of age, agreed to sell to his sons certain land, the consideration being an annuity to be paid by the sons to the father, the payment by the sons of a sum of money due to a bank by a co., the whole of the shares in which belonged to the father & the sons, the father having the controlling interest, & the payment of a certain sum of money to a debtor of the father. The value of the land was much greater than the sum of the actuarial value of the annuity, & the other amounts forming the consideration:—Held: the facts did not establish a gift of the difference between the value of the land & the total amount of the consideration, & on the father's death, more than five years afterwards, the land was not chargeable with any duty.—*R. v. Oct. 1, 1890, was the due date for the payment of a sum secured by a mtge. previously given by C. over the whole lands, & against which he had covenanted to indemnify his sons in the conveyances to them; & the amounts covenanted to be paid by the sons on that date were intended which she covenanted to pay the £5,000 at once, & by this deed she, her exors. & estate, were relieved from payment of the £5,000 under the former deed. The £5,000 was paid over, & the donor died within twelve months from the execution of the deed & the payment. Upon her death the Crown claimed estate duty upon this sum of £5,000:—Held: the payment of the £5,000 was “an immediate gift inter vivos,” within 1881 Act, s. 38 (2) a; it was none the less a gift because there was a release of the donor & her estate from the obligation under the prior deed, & as the donor died within twelve months from the making of the gift, estate duty was payable under 1894 Act, s. 2 (1) c.—A.-G. v. COBHAM (VISCOUNT) (1904), 90 L. T. 816; 20 T. L. R. 337; 48 Sol. Jo. 398; 68 J. P. Jo. 136.

51. Benefit to donor—Must be entirely excluded—Donee to have exclusive enjoyment on possession.]—(1) By deed, in 1885, real & personal estate was given by the owner to applt. subject to an annual rentcharge issuing out of the realty, applt. covenanting to pay the rentcharge & all the funeral & testamentary expenses & all donor's debts at his death to the full exhaustion of all his property. In the event of applt.'s death in donor's lifetime or of any breach of covenant by applt. the donor had power to revoke the deed wholly or in part: any revocation to be without prejudice to any purchase or mtge. made before the revocation. Donor released the rent-charge & power of revocation by deed in Sept. 1894, & died in Oct. 1894:—Held: benefits having been reserved to donor, estate duty was payable upon all the property comprised in the deed of 1885 as property passing upon the death of the donor, within 1894 Act, ss. 1, 2 (1) c.

(2) In this case can anybody doubt that something has been reserved to settlor? of property in the earlier Act “property taken under any gift, whenever made, of which property bonâ fide possession & enjoyment shall not have been assumed by the donee immediately upon the gift, & thenceforward retained to the entire exclusion of donor or of any benefit to him by contract or otherwise.”

(2) The sum of £23,000 was due to A. upon a mtge. of land, & he had obtained a decree for foreclosure which had not become absolute. A deed was executed, by which mtgors. conveyed the equity of redemption to A.'s son in consideration of £500, & A. conveyed the legal estate to his son & released the mtge. debt, & his son covenanted to pay A. an annuity of £750. The annuity was paid for some years until the death of A.:—Held: this was a gift of personal property within 1889 Act, & upon the death of A., his son was liable to pay the duty imposed by 1881 Act.

(3) Under sect. 11, therefore, it is no longer necessary that the reservation or benefit to donor should be out of the property given. The annuity was not charged upon or secured by the property of the society, & was paid by the directors as one of the ordinary outgoings of the society. The commercial value of the annuity in the year 1889 was £210. The payee of the £500 & his wife, who survived him, died after the date of 1894 Act. On May 30, 1892, C. executed four deeds of covenant by which he covenanted to pay certain sums to or in trust for his fourth son & his three daughters on May 1, 1894. The owner of a farm & dwelling-house thereon by a deed of gift in 1897 in consideration of natural love & affection conveyed & assigned the farm, with the dwelling-house & other buildings & the live & dead stock & the other chattels thereon, to deft., his great-nephew, who resided with him, & who had in the preceding year taken over the management of the farm. Donor had no property other than that included in the deed, except an annuity of £15 chargeable upon certain land belonging to deft. After the execution of the deed donor continued to reside in the house until his death in 1906, & was maintained by deft., who retained the annuity, which was sufficient to meet the cost of his maintenance, but there was no agreement or understanding between donor & deft. that the former should be permitted to remain in the house or be maintained by deft. Upon the death of donor the Crown claimed estate duty upon the value of the property comprised in the deed upon the ground that bonâ fide possession & enjoyment of the property were not assumed by donor & thenceforward retained “to the entire exclusion of donor, or of any benefit to him by contract or otherwise”:—Held: though donor was permitted by donee to & did in fact reside in the house from the date of the deed until his death, there was an entire exclusion of donor from the possession & enjoyment of the property or of any benefit to him by contract or otherwise, within the sect., & therefore estate duty was not payable.

The sons executed this last mentioned deed on July 12, 1883. Settlor died on July 19, 1883:—Held: the transfer of the shares was a voluntary settlement within 1881 Act, s. 38 (2), & by it an interest for life in the property transferred was reserved to settlor, & therefore duty was payable under that sect. on the amount of the shares so transferred.—CROSSMAN v. R. (2) The expression ["passing under" in 1881 Act, s. 38 (2) (c)] is not a phrase of art in the same strict sense in which "devise," "grant," "estate in fee," "remainder" & a host of others having exact & uniform technical significations would be properly so termed. It is a phrase of a comprehensive nature, & we think it may fairly be used in respect not only of dispositions which are effected by the words of the instrument creating them but of those which are effected by the subsequent execution of a power created by the instrument in question (per CUR.).—A.-G. v. 68. Subsequent limitations continuing to subsist—Limitation giving absolute interest—Marriage settlement.]—(1) By 1894 Act, ss. 1 & 2, estate duty is imposed upon property, real or personal, settled or not settled, "which passes on the death" of every person dying after the commencement of the Act. By s. 5 (3), where the interest of any person under a settlement fails before it becomes an estate in possession, "& subsequent limitations under the settlement continue to subsist," the property shall not be deemed to pass on his death. By a marriage settlement personal property belonging to the wife was settled upon trusts to pay the income to her during the joint lives of her husband & herself, & after the death of such one of them as should first die, to pay the income to the survivor during his or her life, & if the wife should survive her husband, & there should be no children of the marriage, then in trust for her absolutely. There were no children of the marriage. The wife survived her husband, who died after the commencement of the Act:—Held: on his death "subsequent limitations under the settlement continued to subsist" within s. 5 (3), so that estate duty was not payable.

(2) I think "subsist" properly describes any estate created by the settlement which has not come to an end. I do not think that such an estate is the less a limitation because there is no estate limited beyond it—in other words, I think that limitations under the settlement continue until the death of a person who was, at the time of his death during the continuance of the settlement, competent to dispose of such property (VAUGHAN WILLIAMS, J.).—A.-G. v. WOOD, [1897] 2 Q. B. 102; 66 L. J. Q. B. 522; 76 L. T. 654; 45 W. R. 663; 13 T. L. R. 435; 41 Sol. Jo. 544, D. C.

69. — From what time limitations commence—Death of person whose interest fails.]—(1) An "interest is created" within the words "& no other interest is created by the said disposition" in 1896 Act, s. 15 (1), by a limitation in a marriage settlement in favour of unborn children of the marriage, although there never is a child of the marriage. (2) By a marriage settlement property, described as the husband's fortune & the wife's fortune respectively, was settled by the husband & wife upon trust (inter alia) to pay during the joint lives of husband & wife an annuity of £400 to the wife for her separate use without power of anticipation & to pay the residue of the income, & after the death of the wife, the whole income, to the husband for life, & after his death to pay the whole income to the wife for life, & upon trust after the death of the survivor for such children of the marriage as the husband & wife, or the survivor, should appoint, & in default of appointment, upon trust for the children of the marriage who should attain the age of 21, or being daughters should marry under that age & failing such issue, upon trust as to the husband's fortune for him, his exors., administrators & assigns, & as to the wife's fortune for her exors., administrators & assigns. There was no issue of the marriage, & the wife survived the husband:—Held: upon the death of the husband estate duty became payable upon the wife's fortune, except as to so much of it as formed part of the *corpus in-trade & goodwill of his business. No cash was paid down by his sons, but they undertook as individuals & as a firm to grant a bond of annuity in their father's favour, & after his death, of their mother, equivalent to 5 per cent. of the value of the stock-in-trade:—Held: the transfer of the business was a voluntary settlement & the annuity was an interest in the business reserved by implication to the settlor, & duty was payable.—LORD ADVOCATE v. which produced the annuity of £400; but that as to that latter amount no estate duty was payable by reason of 1894 Act, s. 5 (3).

(3) With regard to the question whether in this case "subsequent limitations continued to subsist" within the meaning of the sub-sect., I agree that the point of time at which one must look for the purpose of answering that question is the time of the death of the person whose interest fails, & not any subsequent date" (FARWELL, L.J.).

By a settlement made shortly before his second marriage in 1897, settlor assigned to the trustees of that settlement another policy of assurance on his life, which he had shortly before effected, subject to an annual premium until 1916, in trust for himself until the marriage, & afterwards that the trustees should stand possessed of the moneys which should be received by them in respect of the policy during the joint lives of settlor & his wife, & during the life of settlor, if he should survive her, upon certain trusts, & that the trustees should hold the trust funds during the life of settlor's wife if she should survive upon trust to pay the income to her for life, & after the death of settlor & his wife upon trust for the children of the intended marriage, & the children of settlor by his former marriage as therein mentioned, & if none of the said children should acquire an interest then the trustees should stand possessed of the trust funds & the income thereof in trust for settlor absolutely. Settlor died in 1921, having duly paid the premiums on the policies, & was survived by his wife, three daughters of his first marriage, & a son of his second marriage:—Held: (1) the moneys payable under the policies were an interest purchased or provided by deceased & accruing or arising on the death of deceased within 1894 Act, s. 2 (1) (d), & should therefore be deemed to be property passing on the death of deceased under that sub-sect.; (2) these moneys were property in which deceased had had an interest, & consequently, under sect. 4 for determining the rate of estate duty to be paid on property passing on the death of deceased, these moneys should be aggregated with the other property so passing.—A.-G. v. On the father's death the trustees received the policy moneys & paid them over to the son:—Held: the sums payable under the policies were an "interest purchased or provided by deceased" within 1894 Act, s. 2 (1) (d); the arrangement did not amount to an assignment of the policies to the son, but was an arrangement by virtue of which an interest in the policies passed to the son on the father's death; the transaction was in the nature of a family arrangement & not a purchase by the son, & therefore the exemption from estate duty contained in s. 3 did not apply.—*A.-G. v. 79. — Effected at expense of third person.]—(1) By 1894 Act, s. 1, estate duty is granted upon a marriage settlement, made in 1853, a wife become entitled for her life to the income of the settled property for her separate use. In 1861 she verbally agreed with her husband to pay the income to him yearly to be applied by him in paying the premiums on insurance policies on his life. The husband was always in the position of having received more from his wife than he had paid in premiums. By an indenture made in 1887, the husband assigned the policies to trustees, upon trusts for his wife for life & after her death for children of the marriage, etc., as he should appoint. The agreement of 1861 remained unaltered & the manner in which the aforesaid payments were made to the husband, & the premiums on the policies deemed to include (s. 2 (1), d) "any annuity or other interest purchased or provided by deceased, either by himself alone or in concert or by arrangement with any other person, to the extent of the beneficial interest accruing or arising by survivorship or otherwise on the death of the deceased."

(2) A father effected a policy of insurance in his own name on the life of his son, then aged eleven, to commence at the age of 21, upon which ten yearly premiums only were to be paid; the father, who had no insurable interest in his son's life, paid all the premiums. After the son had attained the age of 21, the father, with the approbation of the son, & the son's intended wife, assigned to the trustees of the son's marriage settlement the policy of insurance & all moneys assured or to become payable under it upon trust after the son's death to invest the insurance moneys & pay the income to the wife for life. After the death of the son (who survived his father) the insurance moneys were paid by the insurance co. to the trustees, who invested them in accordance with the trusts of the settlement:—

Held: assuming that as between the father the insurance co. the policy was illegal & void under 14 Geo. 3, c. 48, for want of insurable interest, & the insurance moneys were not legally recoverable, yet, the money having been in fact paid by the insurance co., the liability to estate duty was not affected by the illegality of the contract of insurance; (3) the expression "interest" in 1891 Act, s. 2 (1) (d), covers money paid under a policy of insurance on the life of deceased; (4) the sum paid under the insurance policy on the son's death was not an interest purchased or provided by the son in concert or by arrangement with his father within above sect., & on the death of his son estate duty was not payable in respect of that sum.

(5) A policy is plainly property within the scope of s. 2 [of 1894 Act] & we can see no ground for excluding it from sub-sect. 1 (d) (per Cur.).—A.-G. v. MURRAY, [1904] 1 K. B. 165; 73 L. J. K. B. 66; 89 L. T. 710; 68 J. P. 89; 52 W. R. 258; 20 T. L. R. 137, C. A.

The Crown claimed estate duty on the funds passing, on the ground that the legacy duty would have been payable but for the relationship of the parties; the parties having been in the same relationship, for the purposes of Legacy Duty Act, 1796 (c. 52), to M., & the legacy duty having therefore been paid on the death of M.:—Held: the reason why the legacy duty was not payable was not because of the relationship of the parties, but because it had been paid, once & for all, at the death of M. for full consideration in money or money's worth paid to the vendor for his own use or benefit.

(2) A., shortly before his marriage, effected a policy of insurance on his own life for a sum payable on his own death to his intended wife, & assigned the policy to the trustees of a settlement made in consideration of the marriage. By that settlement the principal moneys to be received under the policy were to be held by the trustees in trust for the wife for life & upon other trusts, & A. covenanted to keep up the policy & pay the premiums thereon during his life. He duly performed his covenant, & died after the commencement of the Act, leaving his wife surviving:—Held: the sum payable under the policy on A.'s death was an "interest purchased or provided by deceased" within s. 2 (1) (d); the exemption from duty contained in s. 3 did not apply; &, therefore, on A.'s death estate duty was payable in respect of that sum.

(3) I think that it [s. 3] is aimed at the kind of case where a person has bought something & paid for it a price—"a consideration in money or money's worth"—but is not to get the benefit of his purchase until the death of his vendor. It is clear, then, that he gets no immediate benefit at all; he has bought & paid for something the delivery of which to him is postponed. In such a case the Legislature has recognised that it would be unjust to make him pay duty upon the death of the vendor when he has paid the full value of the interest to the vendor—it may be years & years ago (DARLING, J.).—A.-G. v. 98. What constitutes "purchase"—Family arrangement—Partnership between father & son.]—BROWN v. A.-G., No. 765, post.

99. ———.]—A tenant for life of real estate had raised money by charges on his life estate & insurance policies on his life. By a family arrangement in 1885 between him & his son, the tenant in tail, the estates were disentailed & re-settled; the fee was mortgaged by father & son for an amount to pay off the father's debts; the policies were assigned to the son; the rents & profits of the estates were held in trust to pay the interest on the mtge., the premiums on the policies, an annuity to the son, & the residue for the father for life, with remainder to the son in fee. On the father's death the policy moneys were paid to the son, & the Crown claimed estate duty thereon from the son under Finance Act, 1894 (c. 30), sect. 2, sub-sect. 1 (d):—Held (1) in the true view of the family arrangement, the son had made an absolute purchase of the policies for valuable consideration—nay, for much more than the full value; (2) this was not a case of an "interest provided by the deceased, either alone or in concert with any other person" within above sub-sect.; (3) estate duty was not payable on the policy moneys.

(4) I utterly fail to see how a transaction which would be regarded as a purchase if it took place between strangers, & would therefore be outside the Act, is to be brought within the Act because the parties to it are members of the same family & the interests or honour of the family induced to or were promoted or protected by it (LORD ATKINSON).

(5) It has many times been decided that in dealing with questions arising on the Finance Act of 1894 & the Succession Duty Acts regard should be had to the substance of the transactions on which these questions turn rather than to the forms of conveyancing which the parties to them may have adopted to carry out their objects (LORD ATKINSON).—LETHBRIDGE v. A.'s life, & all his household expenses, were to be paid yearly out of the partnership assets. A. assigned to his sons all his share & interest in the entire business, & was empowered to charge the business with a sum of £12,000 which was thereby declared actually charged on the business. Estate duty was paid on the amount of A.'s real & personal estate, including the sum of £12,000. The Crown in addition claimed estate duty on the entire amount, less the £12,000 on

The Earl, & in the event of his death, the Admiral, possessed powers of jointuring & granting portions. By a disentailing deed dated Dec. 8, 1910, the Earl & the Admiral released their interests & powers of jointuring & portioning under the settlement & the estates were assured to deft. in fee simple in possession. The Admiral consented to this arrangement on condition that deft. should grant to his mother, Lady M., an annuity of £2,000 payable on the death of the survivor of the Earl & the Admiral, & this was effected by a deed dated Dec. 12, 1910. On the death of the survivor Lady M. entered into & continued in possession of the annuity until her death, when a claim for estate duty, upon its reverter to deft. was made by the Crown. Deft. claimed exemption from payment of the duty under 1896 Act, s. 15 (1), or 1894 Act, s. 3 (1).

S. 15 (1), provided that "where by a disposition of any property an interest is conferred on any person other than the disponent for the life of such person or determinable on his death, & such person enters into possession of the interest, & thenceforward retains possession thereof to the entire exclusion of the disponent or of any benefit to him by contract or otherwise & the only benefit which the disponent retains in the said property is subject to such life or determinable interest, & no other interest is created by the disposition, then, on the death of such person after the commencement of this part of this Act, the property shall not be deemed for the purpose of the principal Act to pass by reason only of its reverter to the disponent in his lifetime."

By 1894 Act, s. 3 (1), "estate duty shall not be payable . . . in respect of the determination of any annuity for lives . . . where such annuity was granted for full consideration in money or money's worth paid to the . . . grantor for his own use or benefit":—Held: (1) the transaction in question did not come within 1896 Act, s. 15, so as to exempt deft. from payment of duty; the conditions for the application of that sect. were not fulfilled; (2) the annuity was granted for "full consideration in money or money's worth paid to the grantor for his own use or benefit" within 1894 Act, s. 3 (1), & consequently, duty was not payable by deft. on the cesser of the annuity.—A.-G. v. (2) Estate duty will not be payable under s. 59 of the Act in respect of property which has been the subject of a bonâ fide bargain & conveyance, even if the consideration be less than the full value of the property.

(3) The provisions as to estate duty are laid down by s. 59 of the Act. 109. — Exemption in favour of purchaser or mortgagee—Not vendor or mortgagor.]—A tenant in tail in remainder to freehold estates raised money during the lifetime of the tenant for life by granting annuities or rent-charges charged upon the property, by purchasing an annuity & charging his interest in expectancy with the capitalised value, & by a mtge. of his interest in expectancy:—Held: (1) the annuities granted by the reversioner were in the nature of mtges. & not of sales for a valuable consideration; (2) the exemption in 1894 Act, s. 21 (3), was an exemption in favour of a purchaser or mtgee., & not of a vendor or mtgor.; (3) the reversioner was not entitled under the sub-sect., on the death of the tenant for life to exemption from estate duty in respect of any of the incumbrances created by him.

(4) Both under the Act of 1894 & still more under that of 1900, cases may arise where, owing to all the property being aggregable for duty & the rate of duty being very high, the duty upon the mortgaged property which the mtgor. would have to pay would be more than the value of the equity of redemption. In cases like this the personal liability of the mtgor. rests upon sect. 8 (4), of 1894 Act, & the effect of that sub-sect. is that he is only liable to the extent to which any property passes & a beneficial interest in possession is acquired. It may be that nothing passes to him. It was not the intention of the statute that a man who really receives nothing is to have what would otherwise have been a beneficial estate turned into a debt to the Crown (PHILLIMORE, J.).—Re VERNON, [1901] 1 K. granted lands in trust for himself for life & after his death for D. absolutely:—Held: the expression "partial consideration in money or money's worth," in Finance Act, 1894, s. 3 (2), was intended to relate to contracts in which the consideration was partly money or money's worth & partly marriage, & the sum in respect of which D. was liable to pay estate duty was to be ascertained by deducting £6,600, the value of the consideration in money or money's worth, from the value of the property passing to her under the settlement upon the death of L.—Re LOMBARD, [1904] 2 I. 111. Settled property—1894 Act, s. 21 (1)—General rule.]—By above sub-sect. “estate duty shall not be payable on the death of a deceased person in respect of personal property settled by a will or disposition made by a person dying before the commencement of this part of this Act, in respect of which property” probate duty (among other specified duties) “has been paid or is payable, unless in either case deceased was at the time of his death, or at any time since the will or disposition took effect had been, competent to dispose of the property.” Under a marriage settlement personal property belonging to the wife became vested in trustees upon trust for the wife for life, & after her death, if her husband should survive her, upon trust for the husband for life, & after the death of the survivor of them, upon trust for such person or persons as the wife should by deed or will appoint. The wife died in the lifetime of her husband, before the commencement of 1894 Act, having by her will appointed the property in favour of certain beneficiaries, & probate duty was thereupon paid by her exors. in respect of the value of the property so appointed after deducting the value of the husband’s life interest. The husband died after the commencement of the Act:—(1) the settlement & will together constituted a “disposition” by which the property was settled within the meaning of above sect., & therefore, estate duty was not payable on the husband’s death in respect of the value upon which probate duty had been paid.

(2) Semble: estate duty was not payable on the amount of the value of the husband’s life interest, probate duty having been paid on the whole of the property.

(3) The paramount object of the sub-sect. appears to be that settled property should not pay the two duties, namely, first probate duty & then estate duty (A. L. SMITH, L.J.).—A.-G. v. DODINGTON, [1897] 2 Q. B. 373; 66 L. J. Q. B. 684; 77 L. T. 299; 61 J. P. 644; 45 W. R. 657; 13 T. L. R. 533, C. A.

113. ——— Effect of change from personalty to realty.]—(1) Under the will of testator, who died in 1849, his residuary personal estate became vested in trustees upon trust to invest it in land, & to settle the land to the use of two persons in succession for life, with remainders over in tail male. Probate duty was paid on testator’s personal estate, & the residue of the same was invested in land, which was settled in accordance with the directions of the will. On the death of the second tenant for life in 1900, the Crown claimed estate duty in respect of the land:—Held: the estate duty claimed was not payable, the case coming within the exemption created by the above-mentioned sub-sect.

(2) The principle seems to be that, if the equivalent of estate duty has once been paid in respect of settled property, the duty is not to be payable again in respect of the same subject-matter; & it appears to me that the fact that, since the payment of the probate duty, the property has changed its form from that of personalty into that of realty cannot affect the application of the principle (COLLINS, M.R.).—A.-G. v. 114. ——— Limited to what property—Liability to probate duty arose at settlement.]—The property exempted from estate duty by above sub-sect. is limited to property settled at the date when the liability to probate duty arose, & must be property in the settlement of which the will or disposition of the person on whose estate the probate duty is paid or payable forms an integral part. It is not sufficient to bring a case within the sub-sect. to show that the property is settled by some other instrument at the date when the probate duty becomes payable, still less to show that it is subject to a covenant to settle. Before any right to exemption can be established, it is necessary to find a will or disposition by the person on whose property probate duty is paid or payable constituting part of the settlement.—Re TORRINGTON (VISCOUNTESS), [1913] 2 Ch. 623; 83 L. A. died in Oct. 1914, after 1914 Act came into operation:—Held: the amount of settlement estate duty paid on testator's death, which, pursuant to above sect., was allowed off the estate duty payable on A.'s death, reduced the amount of estate duty for the benefit of the annuitant as well as the residuary legatees; (3) the interest receivable under above sect. on the amount of settlement estate duty for the period between Aug. 15, 1914, & A.'s death belonged to A.'s representatives; (4) on the death of an annuitant, to whom an immediate annuity payable out of the income of the residuary estate was given by a codicil to the will, the interest receivable under above sect. for the period between Aug. 15, 1914, & the death of annuitant, on the amount of settlement estate duty paid in respect of the "slice" of the estate representing such annuity, will, belong to annuitant's representatives.—*Re BOOTH, PLEACE v. By clause 43 of his will he declared "that all the legacies & annuities & all other gifts bequests & devises therein contained shall be free from all death duties, & I direct that such death duties shall be paid out of my residuary estate." By clause 47 he directed his trustee out of the moneys to arise from the conversion of his residuary personal estate to "pay any funeral & testamentary expenses debts the legacies & annuities bequeathed by this my will or any codicil hereto & the death duties whether payable in respect of my estate or any of the legacies or annuities bequeathed free of legacy duty." Testator died on June 27, 1913, & settlement estate duty was paid out of residue in respect of the £150,000 fund. Testator's son died on Apr. 28, 1921:—Held: (1) the estate duty payable under the above sect. on the death of the son in respect of the £150,000 fund was payable out of that fund & not out of residue; (2) the amount already paid for settlement estate duty would be allowed under the above sect. against the sum chargeable against the £150,000 fund for estate duty; & the further allowance of 3 per cent. per annum interest on the settlement estate duty would enure for the benefit of those who would have received it, had that duty been added to the £150,000 fund.—*Re SUTHERLAND (DUKE), CHAPLIN v. On June 2, 1914, the exors. assented to the bequest of the French chattels & forthwith delivered them to S., & she immediately on the same date delivered them to a purchaser, to whom she had contracted to sell them in Dec. 1912. 127. Property accruing to deceased after death—Under will of ancestor surviving him—Aggregated with deceased's other property—Wills Act, 1837 (c. 26), s. 33.]—A father devised real property to his son, who died in the lifetime of the father, leaving a daughter, who was living at the death of the father. The son devised his residuary estate to trustees. This devise included the property devised by the father's will, & took effect by virtue of the above sect. On the death of the father estate duty was paid on all the property which passed on his death, including that devised to his son. The Comrs. of Inland Revenue claimed estate duty on the property devised by the son to the trustees. On appeal by the trustees, under 1894 Act, s. 10, to determine the duty payable:—Held: (1) the property was property of which the son was at the time of his death competent to dispose, & therefore was property passing on the death of the son, within 1894 Act, s. 2 (1) (a); (2) as Wills Act, 1837 (c. 26), gave the property to the devisees of the son as if the son had survived the father, it gave it subject to the same duties as if the son had survived the father.

We are bound to hold that Wills Act, 1837 (c. 26), s. 33, gives to the Crown the same duties as if the son had survived the father, & gives the property to the devisees of the son, subject to the payment of the same duties as if the son had survived (CHANNELL, J.).

(3) The duty out of this property must be the same as if the son had survived. The rate on the property, therefore, will be arrived at by taking the rate applicable to this property when aggregated with the other property of J. S., junior [the son]. I do not know whether the Crown claims any additional duty, i.e. at a higher rate than paid on the £16,000, property of J. S., junior, by reason of the aggregation with it of this freehold property, but I do not think the Crown entitled to such a higher rate on the £16,000. Wills Act, 1837 (c. 26), gives the duty on the property passing by virtue of it, but it is difficult to see how it could give a higher duty on other property (CHANNELL, J.).—Re SCOTT, [1900] 1 Q. married & a husband conferred on his wife a power of appointment over trust funds to be exercised in favour of the children of the marriage. The wife exercised the power by conferring, with the consent of a son of the marriage, a life interest of part of the fund on that son, & the fee on his children. The original donor of the power died prior to the commencement of Finance Act, 1894, Part I., his wife in 1897, & the son in 1916:—Held: as the appointment by the wife would have been invalid but for the son's consent, the son must be regarded as the settlor entitled to certain free property which passed under his will, certain property comprised in his marriage settlement under which he was tenant for life, & certain landed estates of which he was tenant in tail male in possession according to the limitations contained in an old Act of Parliament whereby those estates were rendered inalienable. For the purpose of determining the rate of estate duty payable on the death of A. the Inland Revenue Comrs. decided that the interest of the successor of A. in the inalienable estates ought to be aggregated with the two other classes of property above mentioned:—Held: upon the true construction of 1894 Act, ss. 4 & 5 (5), as regards the inalienable estates estate duty was to be levied only on the value of the interest of the successor, & such interest was not to be aggregated with the other property passing on the death of A., but was to be treated as an estate by itself.—*NEVILL v. 130. Settled property passing on deceased's death—Disposed of by person dying prior to August 2, 1894—and duty payable by disponent.—By a marriage settlement made in 1864 a sum of money to which the wife was entitled in reversion subject to the successive life interests of her mother & father was assigned to trustees in trust to pay the income to the husband & wife for their lives & after the death of the survivor to stand possessed of the trust fund for such children of the marriage as the husband & wife or the survivor should appoint. The wife died in 1876. Her mother & father died respectively in 1884 & 1888. The husband died in 1910, & on his death the Crown claimed that for the purpose of ascertaining the rate of the estate duty which then became payable the trust fund ought to be aggregated with other property passing on the husband's death in respect of which estate duty then became payable:—Held: if the wife had died after the commencement of Part I. of 1894 Act, estate duty would then have been payable in respect of the trust fund, because, the deaths of the mother & the father having occurred before that date, the trust fund would have become an interest in possession before the wife's death, & therefore by reason of 1900 Act, the claim of the Crown failed.—A.-G. v. THYNNE, [1914] 1 K. B. 351; 83 L. J. K. B. 592; 110 L. T. 203; 30 T. L. R. 182.

131. ——— Interest of deceased arising under resettlement.—Under the will of a testator, who died in 1870, real estate was devised to the use of A. for life & after his death to the use of his sons successively in tail male. On Nov. 4, 1895, A. & his son B., then tenant in tail, concurred in executing a disentailing assurance conveying the property to a grantee to hold to such uses as A. & B. should jointly appoint. By a resettlement dated Dec. 19, 1895, the property was appointed & conveyed to such uses as A. & B. should jointly appoint & in default of appointment to the use of A. for life by way of restoration & confirmation of his life estate under testator's will, & subject thereto to the use of B. for life with remainder to the use of his sons successively in tail male. A. died in 1920 possessed in his own right of real & personal estate. The Crown claimed that on A.'s death his own estate & the settled property fell to be aggregated under 1894 Act, s. 4, so as to form one estate for the purposes of estate duty. Defts. contended that the settled property passed on the death of A. not under the resettlement but under the will of the testator who died before Aug. 1, 1894, & that by 1900 Act, s. 12 (2), & 1907 Act, s. 16, the settled property did not fall to be aggregated with A.'s own estate, but was liable to estate duty as an estate by itself:—Held: the two estates fell to be aggregated, as the settled property passed on A.'s death not under testator's will but under the resettlement.—A.-G. v. 133. Property settled by statute—1894 Act, s. 5 (5)—Duty payable by successive tenants in tail—Sale under Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 58.]—(1) The power of sale conferred by Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 58, upon a tenant in tail in possession of lands settled by Act of Parliament with a restriction upon alienation does not make such a tenant in tail a person capable of alienating the lands so settled within 1894 Act, s. 5 (5), which provides that where lands are so settled by Act of Parliament that no one of the persons successively in possession thereof is capable of alienating the same, the property passing on the death of any person in possession of the lands shall be the interest of his successor therein, & such interest shall be valued for the purpose of estate duty in like manner as for the purpose of succession duty.

(2) Estate duty payable under 1894 Act, s. 5 (5), is payable out of income & not out of capital.

By a private Act passed in the reign of Henry VIII. to give effect to a family arrangement with reference to B.'s estates, a portion of the estates was settled upon his two daughters A. & E., & the heirs of their bodies as co-parceners with cross-remainders between them, & it was provided that no tenant in tail should alienate the estates except for the purpose of jointuring a wife, an exception which the ct. construed as implying a power in the tenant in tail under the existing law to jointure by will. Owing to the failure of the heirs of the body of A. the entirety of these estates had now become vested in the heirs of the body of E. The Crown claimed that estate duty was payable on the death of each tenant in tail in possession under 1894 Act, s. 5 (5); & that upon the grant of a jointure by will succession duty was payable by the widow, either under sect. 2 or under sect. 4 of 1853 Act, in respect of one moiety of her jointure, on the footing that her interest was a succession derived as to one moiety from A., & as to the other moiety from E. as predecessor, it being conceded that as to the moiety derived from E. the succession duty was covered by the payment of estate duty as provided by 1894 Act, s. 1:—Held: (3) 1894 Act, s. 5 (5), applied; (4) the predecessor of the jointress was either her own husband or E., the lineal ancestress of the husband, & no succession duty was payable.—*Re BOLTON ESTATES ACT, 1863, [1904] 2 Ch. 289; 73 L. The estate, which comprised farms, accommodation holdings, private houses, shops & business premises, & a considerable area of woodland, was in several detached blocks lying at a little distance from one another:—Held: the fact of the estate consisting of miscellaneous property not all lying together was evidence on which a referee, to whom the value of the estate for the purposes of estate duty was referred, might and that the price which it actually fetched was not the market price within 1894 Act, s. 7 (5), & 1909-1910 Act, s. 60 (2), but the true market price was the aggregate of the prices which the several parts would have fetched if the estate had been broken up & sold in suitable lots.

Eighteen months after the death of testator the son died, about eighteen months before attaining 21. The widow duly applied the £500 a year to his maintenance from the death of testator to that of the son:—Held: the son had an interest ceasing on his death in the above four-fifths to the extent of £500 a year within 1894 Act, s. 2 (1) (b), & by the cesser of that interest a benefit accrued to the four-fifths part the principal value of which, calculated in accordance with sect. 7 (7) (b) of the Act, was the sum which at the rate of interest earned by the rest of the estate would produce £500 a year; (2) the £500 a year was an annuity & not a legacy.—*A.-G. v. #### PART II. SECT. 7, SUB-SECT. 2.

142 i. Annuity charged on settled property—Payable to remainderman—During life of tenant for life.]—Under settlements executed in 1877 & 1901, A. was tenant for life of certain lands. Prior to the execution of the first of these settlements, A., who was then owner in fee, charged the lands by voluntary deeds with annuities in favour of his brothers & sister, reducible in case of bankruptcy or attempted alienation, & with sums in gross as portions for the children of his brothers & sister payable on the expiration of the annuities. The settlements were expressly declared to be subject to the charges created by those deeds:—Held: the property which passed on the death of A., so as to be subject to estate duty, consisted of the hereditaments comprised in the settlements, diminished by the value of the annuities & sums in gross; & these annuities & sums, although created without money consideration, were not incumbrances in respect of which allowance was prohibited by Finance Act, 1894, s. 7 (1) (a).—*DE FREYNE (LORD) v. In the marriage contract the son discharged any claim of legitim that he might have against his father's estate:—Held: the bond being granted in consideration of, not only the discharge of legitim, but also the marriage, was not a debt incurred "for full consideration in money or money's worth wholly for the deceased's own use & benefit" within Finance Act, 1894, s. 7 (1), & did not fall to be deducted in ascertaining the value of his estate for the purpose of estate duty.—*H.M. By later bonds he charged the fee simple with interest due on the first bonds. A desire to lessen the estate duties payable on his death was R.'s motive in these transactions, but they were all open, straightforward, & genuine, not fictitious or colourable. Upon R.'s death:—Held: the bonds were incumbrances created bonâ fide for full consideration in money or money's worth wholly for R.'s own use & benefit & took effect out of his interest within 1894 Act, s. 7 (1) (a), & deductions accordingly ought to be allowed in assessing the estate duties.—*A.-G. v. *of deceased.]—*A. executed a trust-disposition & settlement by which he directed his trustees to pay an annuity out of his estate to B., & also, should B. request them to do so, to burden the estate with provisions for B.'s wife & family. On the death of B. the fee of the estate was directed to be conveyed to C.

After A.'s death his trustees paid the annuity to B. during his life, & also, at B.'s request, burdened the estate with bonds of provision for his widow & children. On B.'s death the estate was conveyed to C., who sought to make deductions in respect of the provisions to B.'s widow & children. The Inland Revenue refused to allow the deductions, & C. paid duty on the whole estate:—Held: as these incumbrances were not "created by a disposition made by" B. in the sense of sect. 7 (1) (a), & did not take effect "out of the interest of" B. in the sense of sect. 22 (2) (b), they were deductible.—*COLQUHOUN'S TRUSTEES v. The testator & the mtgor. were resident & domiciled in England, both when the mtge. was executed & at the testator's death. The mtge. was executed in the colony by the attorney of the mtgor., but provided that the moneys secured were to be paid in England:—Held: the debt was a debt recoverable within the colony, within Deceased Persons' Estates Duties Act, 1881, s. 8, upon which duty was payable under that Act.—Re GREENWOOD (1888), 6 N. Z. L. R. 737.—N.Z.

On Nov. 29, 1894, a call upon the shareholders of the bank of one-third of the sum of £10 per share was made under the authority of the Bank of New Zealand Share Guarantee Act, 1894. Notice of this call was given to the exors. of the deceased on Dec. 6, 1894, in respect of the shares held by the estate:—Held: the amount due under the call was not a debt due by the deceased shareholders within Deceased Persons' Estates Duties Act, 1881, s. 5 (b). Neither, in the alternative, were the exors. entitled to have the amount of the burden which the shares imposed upon the estate at the time of the death of the deceased ascertained & assessed as a set-off against the corpus of the estate.—Re DIGNAN (1896), 14 N. *l. — Under guarantee.]—*A testator left certain assets. He had guaranteed a debt due by a brother, & his exors. paid the guaranteed debt out of the assets. He bequeathed a certain share of his estate to this brother, who, however, had no means of his own out of which he could repay to the estate the amount paid under the guarantee:—Held: duty was payable on the amount of the assets actually in the estate after deducting the amount paid under the guarantee.

She then gave all her real & personal estate, exclusive of any which should remain subject to the trusts of her husband's will, to her trustees in trust for conversion, & out of the proceeds thereof to pay her funeral & testamentary expenses, & subject thereto in trust for her daughter for life & after her death as she should appoint. On the death of testatrix her exors. paid the estate duty in respect of the value at her death of her husband's residuary estate:—Held: (1) testatrix's "testamentary expenses" did not include the estate duty in respect of the unappointed property of her husband; (2) her exors. were entitled to recover the amount of the duty so paid by them from the trustees of her husband's will.—*PORTE v. (2) The true effect of 1896 Act, s. 19, is that it merely regulates the incidence of the settlement estate duty as between the beneficiaries & provides a more convenient mode of collection on the account delivered by the exor.—*Re MANCHESTER (DOWAGER DUCHESS), DUNCANNON (VISCOUNT) v. The English exor. proved the will in England, save as to the American personalty, paying the English estate & legacy duties due in respect of the American personalty out of the English assets. 155. General rule—Persons taking benefit of property.]—(1) In respect of property, of which the deceased was not competent to dispose, the scheme of 1894 Act is to tax, not the interest which ceased with the death, but the property out of which the interest was enjoyed, & to make every person who takes property otherwise than through the exor. liable to pay a proportionate part of the estate duty. Accordingly where property, real & personal, was left upon trust for conversion & to pay an annuity to testator's widow for life, & after her death upon trust to pay legacies amounting to £9,000 & to divide the residue among persons named:—Held: under 1894 Act, s. 8 (4), the estate duty, which became payable on the death of the widow, who died in 1900, should be borne ratably both by the pecuniary legatees & the residuary legatees; & the pecuniary legatees were not entitled to throw the entire duty upon the residue.

It is to be recollected that the property in respect of which the question of the incidence of estate duty arises in this case, is property of which deceased was not competent to dispose, & that in was payable at the testator's death, not at the death of the tenant for life.—Re PEARCE (1913), 1 Tas. L. R. 32.—AUS.

during the joint lives of the settlor & herself & was an interest under a trust taking effect after the settlor's death within Deceased Persons' Estates Duties Act, 1881, s. 22; & duty was payable at once, & not upon her death only.—Re DEANS (1903), 23 N. Z. L. R. 60.—N.Z.

s. Successors—In absence of specific directions in will—Liability of life tenant.]—As between successors, estate duty is payable by them pro rata out of their separate successions, as provided by Death Duties Act, 1909, s. 31 (4), unless the will contains a direction that their legacies are to be duty-free, or a direction to the exors. to pay testamentary expenses, or some other specific direction as to its payments. A life tenant, however, is not liable to pay any part of the estate duty out of his or her interest.—Re HOLMES, BEETHAM v. HOLMES (1913), 32 N. Z. L. R. 577.—N.Z.

respect of such property the scheme of the Act is to tax, not the interest which ceased with the death, but the property out of which the interest was enjoyed. 1894 Act, s. 8, provides for the collection of estate duty, & sub-sect. 4 of that sect. provides for cases in which property passes on the death of deceased, & his exor. is not accountable for the estate duty in respect of that property. Now that is admittedly the present case. In such a case it is provided that "every person to whom any property so passes for any beneficial interest in possession, & also, to the extent of the property actually received or disposed of by him, every trustee, guardian, committee or other person in whom any interest in the property so passing, or the management thereof is at any time vested, & every person in whom the same is vested in possession, by alienation or other derivative title, shall be accountable for the estate duty on the property." In my judgment each of the pecuniary legatees, & also the residuary legatees, took upon the death of the annuitant a portion of the property for which her exor. was not accountable for a beneficial interest in possession, & as such became accountable for the duty, & therefore debtors to the Crown for the duty. It seems to me that the moment you find that under sect. 8, sub-sect. 4, every person to whom property, other than free property of testator, passes for a beneficial interest in possession, which includes these pecuniary legatees, is accountable for the duty, be it on the whole fund or his portion of the fund, & therefore pro tanto a debtor to the Crown, the ct. ought in the due course of administration to take the whole duty out of the fund, & to deduct that duty ratably, from the legacy of each legatee & from the residuary share alike. If this were not so, the ultimate incidence of the estate duty on the fund passing would depend upon the accident of which of the parties accountable was in fact called on to pay, or on the fact that no one was called on to pay, but that payment was left to be determined in due course of administration. It seems to me that the pecuniary legatees cannot relieve themselves of the burden of a ratable part of this duty unless they can show that, outside the Finance Act, there is something which entitles the pecuniary legatees to have, as against the residuary legatees, the amount of their legacies free of estate duty (VAUGHAN-WILLIAMS, L.J.).

(2) By sect. 9, sub-sect. 5, any person authorised or required to pay the estate duty in respect of any property shall, for the purpose of paying the duty or raising the amount of the duty when already paid, have power to raise the amount by sale or mtge. of the property. This sub-section applies to all property passing, whether "free property" of testator or not (VAUGHAN WILLIAMS, L. J.).—BERRY v. GAUKROGER, [1903] 2 Ch. 116 ; 35 T. T. 591 ; 51 W. T. 440 ;

156. ———.]—(1) 1909–1910 Act, s. 61 (5), as amended by 1912 Act, s. 9, relating to the estate duty on timber, is to be construed in the light of 1894 Act, s. 9, which throws the liability for estate duty in respect of property not passing to the exor. as such ultimately on the persons taking the benefit of such property. As, under 1912 Act, the duty attaches on the net moneys received from the sale of timber, a tenant for life not impeachable for waste, who receives the proceeds of timber sold apart from the land, has to bear the duty thereon, & such duty is not, since the recent Acts, as prior thereto it was, a charge on the inheritance of the land including the timber.

Testatrix, who died in 1891, by her will, dated in 1870, after making certain pecuniary bequests & specific gifts of property, partly real & partly personal, & disposing of the residue of her real estate, gave the residue of her personal estate to M. absolutely:—Held: the stamp duty payable under Customs & Inland Revenue Act, 1881 (c. 12), s. 27, & the estate duty payable under Customs & Inland Revenue Act, 1889 (c. 7), s. 5, must be paid by M. alone, & not ratably by him & the specific legatees.—*Re BOURNE, MARTIN v. ment, to be held as to one moiety upon trust for himself for life, remainder to his wife for life, & as to the other moiety upon trust for his wife for life with remainder to himself for life, with remainder as to the whole fund to the children of the marriage, & died in 1911 without having paid the £20,000, which with an arrear of interest was still owing to the trustees. He left estate in England & Australia, apart from assets in Victoria, of more than £45,000. His exors. registered the marriage settlement in Victoria, thereby reducing the duties payable in the colony by the duties which would have been payable there on the £20,000 debt & rendering the covenant in the settlement enforceable against testator's Victorian assets. They also paid estate duty on testator's estate without deducting the £20,000 debt, but with a deduction in respect of the duties paid in Australia. The exors. claimed to deduct from the £20,000 as against the settlement trustees a ratable part of the estate duty paid in England on the £20,000, & the registration duty paid in Victoria:—Held: the £20,000 being an unpaid debt to the trustees at D.'s death, they were not liable for any part of the estate duty in respect of it, & although the exors. had acted properly in registering the settlement in Victoria, yet in so doing they were not agents for the trustees, who had no need to resort to the Victorian assets, & were not liable to pay part of their debtor's probate duty, & neither amount could be deducted from the £20,000, which must be paid in full.—*Re DOWLING, DOWLING v. After the death of testator's sister the trustees were to hold the trust fund, as to two sums of £21,000 & £18,000, upon certain trusts in favour of two of testator's brothers & their issue; & to stand possessed of the residue upon trust for W. for life, with remainders over. Testator bequeathed all the residue of his personal estate of whatever kind to W., subject to the payment of his funeral & testamentary expenses & debts & certain annuities. The residuary personalty was insufficient to pay testator's debts & funeral & testamentary expenses, so a part of the estate duty had to be paid out of the trust fund:—Held: the interest given to W. in each case was not a share of the fund, but an interest in the actual residue after payment respectively of the annuities & the two sums of £21,000 & £18,000; & the annuities & those two sums were not liable to diminution by reason of the estate duty having to be borne by the fund or on account of the settlement estate duty being payable in Testator bequeathed his residuary personal estate in trust for the person who would at his death have been entitled thereto under Statute of Distributions, 1671 (c. 11), if he had died intestate, & who in subsequent proceedings was ascertained to be R. Prior to the date of his will in some instances & to that of a codicil confirming his will in others testator had entered into certain contracts with the tenants of the W. estates for the sale to them of their respective holdings under the Irish Land Act, 1903 (c. 37), in the form provided by the Act, which were subject to the sanction of the Land Comrs. being given to them. At his death in 1912 this sanction had not been obtained:—Held: (1) there had been no conversion of the W. estates, but that they passed to B. as real estate under clause 9 of the will, & not as a legacy of the proceeds of sale of real estate under clause 10; (2) B. was entitled to the W. estates for an estate in fee simple defeasible on the sanction of the Land Commrs. being given; & such sanction when given would operate to convert the real estate into personal estate as from its date; (3) on testator's death the W. estates did not vest in the exors. personal property was settled in the events that happened upon trust for the settlor for life, & after his death upon trust that the trustees should appropriate funds of a specified value to be held upon the trusts thereafter declared for the benefit of two of the settlor's daughters & their issue, & should stand possessed of the residue of the trust premises in trust for the settlor, his exors., administrators, & assigns:—Held: the appropriated funds were not voluntary incumbrances within 1894 Act, s. 7 (1), upon property passing to the exor. as such of the deceased, in which case the estate duty on the entire funds would have had to be borne exclusively by the settlor's residuary legatee, but the provisions contained in the settlement with regard to those funds amounted to substantive settlements thereof, & the estate duty was payable ratably out of the appropriated funds & the residue according to their respective values.

(2) The sub-sect. provides that in the case of property not under his control, which plainly means under his control as exor. of the deceased person, he may pay the estate duty. "if the persons accountable for the duty in respect thereof request him to make such payment." As trustee he was one of those persons, & he did pay the duty. 219. Whether dependent on construction of will.]—By a codicil to her will made in July, 1911, testatrix bequeathed to her trustees the sum of £6,000 "free of all duty," to be held upon trust for her niece, H., for life, & after her death for her children, with a gift over to certain charitable institutions in the event of no child of the niece attaining a vested interest. At the respective dates of the will & codicil & of the death of testatrix in Jan. 1913, this settled legacy was, by virtue of 1894 Act, relieved from the payment of estate duty on the death of the niece; but by 1914 Act, s. 14, which came into operation on July 31, 1914, this relief was abolished in the case of any person dying after Aug. 15, 1914. The niece was still living & a spinster, & estate duty would be payable on her death, as well as legacy duty. Upon a summons by the trustees of the settled legacy asking whether they ought to set aside, out of the assets of testatrix, any sums to meet the estate duty & the legacy duty, or whether both or either were payable out of the legacy:—Held: (1) on the question of construction of the gift "free of all duty," the legacy duty was payable out of the general estate; (2) the operation of the gift must be determined, with reference to the duties imposed in respect of the legacy, at the date of the death, & ought not to be extended to duties imposed by the Legislature subsequent to that date, & the estate duty was accordingly payable out of the legacy, & not out of the general estate.—*Re SNAPE, ELAM v. 220. —.]—Testator, by his will made in 1910, bequeathed to trustees the sum of £25,000 upon trust during the life of his wife to pay the income to the persons who would for the time being be entitled as tenant for life or tenant in tail to the rents of his settled hereditaments if his wife were then dead, & directed that after the death of his wife the said sum should fall into residue, & that all legacies thereinbefore given or which might be given by any codicil should be handed over or paid free of all duties & deductions in respect of duties, other than income tax, to the several legatees; & testator thereby devised his settled hereditaments to his trustees upon trusts in favour of his wife during her life, & after her death to the use of his nephew A. for life, with remainder, in the events which happened, to his nephew B. for life, with remainder to the use of B.'s children in strict settlement; & testator thereby gave his residuary real & personal estate to his trustees upon trust for sale & conversion & out of the moneys so to arise to pay his funeral & testamentary expenses & legacies, & to make provision for the payment of all duties on any bequests thereinbefore made free from duties or deductions for duties, & to invest the residue upon trust out of the income thereof to pay an annual sum of £3,000 to the person who would be so entitled as tenant for life or in tail as aforesaid, & to hold the surplus income upon the trusts therein mentioned. Testator died in 1913. A. died a bachelor in 1915. Upon the question how as between the beneficiaries under the will the estate duty payable on the death of A. imposed since the testator's death by virtue of 1914 Act, s. 14, ought to be borne:—Held: (1) the duty on the settled legacy must be paid out of the investments representing the £25,000, & not out of the residue; (2) inasmuch as the annuity of £3,000 was chargeable upon the whole estate, the residue, the whole of which benefited by the cesser of the annuity, must bear the duty; (3) the annuitant being liable, however, to pay interest on a ratable proportion of the duty corresponding to the proportion which the nominal sum required to produce the annuity bore to the whole residue.

(4) A testator may use language which is sufficient to cover a duty not in force at his death, & in one at least of the clauses of his will the testator has in this case done so. Between the date of the will & of the death of testatrix 1914 Act, s. 14, came into operation, which abolished the relief from estate duty given by 1894 Act, s. 5 (2), & the question arose whether the estate duty which under 1914 Act, s. 14, would be payable on the death of A. in respect of the legacy of £7,000 ought to be borne by the corpus of the legacy or by the residuary estate:—Held: (1) upon the true construction of the will the words "free of duty" were limited to the duties presently payable on the death of testatrix in respect of the legacy, & did not extend to any estate duty that might become payable on the death of A.; (2) on payment of the legacy to the trustees without deduction there was no obligation to retain any part of the residuary estate for any claim that might arise for such estate duty.—Re D'OYLY, VERTUE

226. ———. ———.]—(1) The words “free of all death duties” have no general meaning as applied to all wills, but must be construed according to the meaning given to them by the particular will under consideration. The natural time to ascertain the meaning of these words is when the legacies which are given free of all duties are in the sense of having been transferred out & out from the testator's estate. If it be intended to prolong this date to that of payment or transference to the ultimate beneficiary words should be used clearly expressing that intention. Testatrix, by her will, dated June 26, 1913, bequeathed a number of pecuniary legacies, & amongst others a legacy of £5,000 to the N. Society, & directed “that all legacies & annuities given by this my will or any codicil hereto shall be paid free of all death duties.” She then devised & bequeathed all the residue of her real & personal estate to her trustees upon the usual trusts for sale & conversion, with a direction out of the proceeds “to pay & provide for my funeral & testamentary expenses & debts & the pecuniary legacies bequeathed by this my will or any codicil hereto & the duties on all legacies & annuities bequeathed free of all duties.” The beneficial trusts were to pay “free of all death duties” certain annuities with a direction to appropriate funds for answering them by the income thereof & then to pay to each of the nephews B. & J. “free of all death duties,” the sum of £6,000, & to her niece, M., “free of all death duties,” the sum of £1,000, & to hold the residuary estate in trust for C. absolutely. She then declared that the sum of £6,000 was not to be paid to her nephew J., but was to be held upon certain trusts for him & other persons in succession. By a second codicil to her will, dated Nov. 17, 1913, testatrix reduced the legacy of £5,000 to the N. Society to £2,500, & directed that her will should be read & have effect as if a legacy of £2,500 “free of all death duties had been thereby bequeathed in lieu of the said legacy of £5,000.” She then bequeathed “free of all death duties” to her trustees £2,500 upon trust to invest the same & to pay the income to her sister, F., for life & after her death as to both capital & income in trust for the N. Society. Testatrix died on Nov. 26, 1913. A summons was taken out by the surviving exor. for the determination of the question as to the incidence of the legacy & estate duties which would become payable on the deaths of the respective tenants for life of the settled legacies, including the legacy to the N. Society:—Held: (2) the legacy duty which would become payable on the N. Society's legacy of £2,500 on the death of the tenant for life would be payable out of the ultimate residue of the testatrix's estate; (3) the estate duty would be payable out of the corpus of the settled legacy.—*Re WEDGWOOD, ALLEN v. The will contained a direction that “all legacy annuity succession or other duties payable in respect or all & every the benefits given by this my will (& save & except the legacy succession & other duties payable by my residuary legatees in respect of their shares in interests of & in my residuary & personal estate & which duties are to be borne & paid by such residuary legatees) shall be borne & paid by my residuary trust estate”:—Held: all estate & succession or legacy duties, which became payable on the deaths of the tenants for life of the specific settled legacies were, upon the construction of the will, properly payable out of the residuary estate, notwithstanding that they were imposed by legislation coming into operation subsequently to testator's death.

He directed his trustees to pay his funeral & testamentary expenses & debts & legacies out of his real & mixed personal estate, & gave the income of his residuary estate to S. for life; & after her death he gave his residuary pure personal estate to the hospital, & his residuary real & mixed personal estate to T. absolutely. By 1894 Act, estate duty was for the first time imposed upon the death of a person after the commencement of the Act. S. died in 1916, & a question arose whether the estate duty, which would be payable on the £10,000 legacy on the death of T., would be payable out of the legacy or out of the residuary estate; & if out of the latter, whether out of the whole estate ratably or out of the proceeds of the real & mixed personal estate only:—Held: it was a question of construction in each case whether or not a testator had used language sufficient to cover a duty not in force at his death; in this will the words “all duties” must either refer to legacy duty only or to every duty which might be imposed; they were too wide to be referred to legacy duty only; & the estate duty was a charge on the residuary estate, & must be paid ratably out of the two branches of the residuary estate.—*Re TINKLER, LOYD v. The will also said: "I direct all the legacies, whether settled or otherwise, & the annuities hereinbefore bequeathed to be paid & enjoyed free of all death duties." The real & personal estate was given to the trustees upon trust for sale & conversion & out of the proceeds "to pay my funeral & testamentary expenses & debts & pay or provide for the legacies & annuities hereby or by any codicil bequeathed & the duties thereon" & to invest the residue in trust for certain charities. 1914 Act, s. 14, abolished the relief which had been given by 1894 Act, s. 5 (2), in respect of the estate duty which would otherwise have been payable on the deaths of the tenants for life of the settled legacies, & consequently created a further claim for estate duty on those legacies:—Held: the words of the will threw that prospective claim on the residue in relief of the settled legacies.—*Re STODDART, BIRD v. By clause 9 she declared that "all the foregoing gifts bequests & legacies shall be free of duty." By clause 10 she gave her residuary estate to her trustees upon trust for sale & conversion, & directed them, after payment of the legacies " & the duty on all gifts bequests & legacies bequeathed free of duty," to hold the net proceeds upon trust for two residuary legatees. pecuniary legacies, & two settled legacies of £2,000 each. One of these was given upon trust to pay the income to a daughter of testator for life, & after her death for her husband & children. The other was given in trust to pay the income to S. for life, & after his death to his widow for life, & subject thereto upon trust for the children of S. Subject to the payment of the various legacies made payable after the death of the widow testator declared that the trustee should stand possessed of the residuary trust funds upon trust for his children in equal shares. 248. — — — — —.]—A fund payable at testator's death to the trustee of his daughter's marriage settlement dated Sept. 29, 1884, was secured by testator's covenant in the settlement & by a contemporaneous mtge. of real estate. By his will dated Apr. 29, 1908, testator devised & bequeathed his residuary real & personal estate to his trustees on trust for sale & conversion & directed them to pay "all death duties" out of the proceeds. The testator died on Aug. 21, 1913:—Held: (1) the expression "all death duties" referred to duties to which testator's estate became liable under the disposition of his will, & did not include duties arising under the settlement, & really payable by or recoverable from the settlement trustee; (2) the settlement estate duty & succession duty on the settled fund & the ratable part of the estate duty apportionable thereon under 1894 Act, s. 14 (1), must therefore be borne by that fund.—*Re BRIGGS, RICHARDSON v. 249. — — — — —.]—Charge liable to abatement.]—

(1) A rentcharge of £50,000 per annum charged on London settled estates was limited to the use of deft., the fourth Viscount Portman for life, with remainder to the use of his eldest son during his life, to commence from their respective successions to the title & to be paid without any deduction except for death duties, & a similar rentcharge was limited in remainder, in the event of any other issue of the fourth viscount succeeding to the title, to the use of the sons of such eldest son & other sons of the fourth viscount in tail male. Subject to such rentcharge the London settled estates were limited to the use of pltf. for life with remainders over. The third viscount, who was tenant for life of the estates in question, had died in 1923, while nine of the yearly instalments of estate duty payable in respect of the death of the second viscount, who had died in 1919 remained unpaid. It was not disputed that the rentcharge limited to the fourth viscount must bear some proportion of the estate duty assessable upon the death of the third viscount, & that in principle the same proportion would apply to the estate duty remaining unpaid in respect of the death of the second viscount. The London estates comprised a large number of freehold reversions, some of which would in future be constantly falling into possession on the determination of existing building leases, & the capital value of the estates was much greater than a sum represented by twenty-four or twenty-five years' purchase. Upon an application for determining how the perpetual yearly rentcharge should be valued for the purpose of bearing its due proportion of estate duty:—Held: while the £50,000 rentcharge was payable, the owner should be treated, for the purpose of apportioning estate duty, as the tenant for life of a capital sum charged on the estate equal to the capitalised value, as at the death of the third viscount, of a perpetual or adequately secured rentcharge of £50,000, which capital sum would be treated as chargeable estate duty at the rate charged upon the death of the third viscount, & the fourth viscount as the owner of the rentcharge would, so long as it was payable, have to pay interest in respect of such estate duty at the rate ascertained as in Re Parker-Jervis, Salt v. Locker, No. 261, post.

(2) The settlement also provided that if in any year the net rents, profits & income for that year after payment of all rent, rates, taxes & other family charges & the interest on all capital charges; but excluding the £50,000 rentcharge should be less than £100,000, then the £50,000 rentcharge payable for that year should abate & be reduced to a sum equal to one-half of such net rents, profits & income:—Held: the abated rentcharge remained liable to both estate duty interest & income tax, & in every year in which the abated rentcharge became payable, the capitalised value of a perpetual & adequately secured rentcharge of the abated amount must be ascertained as at the death of the third viscount, & such capitalised sum must be treated as charged with estate duty at the rate above-mentioned.—Re PORTMAN (VISCOUNT), PORTMAN v. PORTMAN (VISCOUNT), [1924] 2 Ch. 6; 93 L. J. Ch. 362.

251. — Charged on settled personalty.—By a separation deed a trust fund was settled by the wife upon trust out of the income to pay an annuity of £400 to the husband during the joint lives of himself & the wife, & subject thereto to pay the income to the wife for life. After her death the income was to be applied in paying the husband's annuity of £400, an annuity of £300 to the wife's testamentary appointee, £400 per annum for the maintenance of the infant son of the marriage during his minority, & £400 per annum to him after his majority during his & the husband's joint lives. The husband's annuity in any year was to abate or increase proportionately as the total income received by the trustee from the fund in that year fell below £1,250 or rose above £1,300. Upon the wife's death in Nov. 1913, no estate duty became payable in respect of the husband's annuity, & the estate & settlement duty payable in respect of the benefit accruing to the other beneficiaries had been raised by a charge on the fund & paid, but the proposal of the trustee to sell part of the fund & pay off the charge raised the question of the ultimate incidence of the duty as between the parties interested in the income, which, owing to the war, had fallen far below £120 per annum:—Held: as between the husband & the other beneficiaries, the husband was entitled to throw the burden of the duty on the interests in respect of which the claim had arisen.—Re TATTERSALL'S SETTLEMENT, PUBLIC TRUSTEE v. TATTERSALL, [1918] 2 Ch. 243; 87 L. J. Ch. 521; 119 L. T. 70; 62 Sol. Jo. 605.

252. Who is a chargee—Not beneficiary of trust—To discharge liabilities on beneficiaries' estate.—

A person entitled to the benefit of a trust for the application of the rents & profits of an estate in the discharge of the incumbrances on his own estate was not a person "entitled to any sum charged" on such estate "whether as capital or as an annuity or otherwise" within 1894 Act, s. 14 (1).

A testator settled his A., B., & C. estates to different uses in strict settlement, & limited his D. estate to trustees for a term of 1,000 years, & subject to the term he settled the estate as to one moiety to the uses declared of the A. estate, & as to the other moiety to the uses declared of the B. estate. He declared that the term of 1,000 years was limited to the trustees upon trust to apply the rents & profits of the D. estate in the discharge of the mortgage debts & other gross sums charged upon the four estates or any of them:—Held: the estate duty payable in respect of the D. estate was a first charge on that estate & was raisable by mtge. or sale thereof, & the interest on any mtge. so raised was payable out of the rents & profits of that estate with no right of recoupment of either capital or income as against any other of the estates.—*Re STAMFORD & WARRINGTON (EARL), PAYNE v. The father by his will devised & bequeathed to his trustees, who were also his exors., the residue of his real & personal estate, in trust for sale & conversion & out of the proceeds to pay his funeral & testamentary expenses, debts & legacies & to hold the residue upon certain trusts. After the father's death his exors. paid the estate duty upon the value of his estate after deducting his funeral & testamentary expenses & his debts other than the debt of £25,000:—Held: the estate duty in respect of the £25,000 must as between the exors. & the trustees of the settlement be borne by the former.—*Re GRAY, GRAY v. 261. Payment of jointure —Without any deductions.—Under a settlement made by a father & son on the marriage of the latter, an estate was limited to certain uses in strict settlement, including a limitation of a jointure of £1,000 a year to the wife, A., in case she survived both father & son, which event happened, such jointure to be paid to her “without any deduction whatsoever except in respect of income tax.” The father, by a subsequent settlement made on his second marriage, appointed, under a power in the former settlement, a jointure of £500 a year to his wife, B., if she survived him, which event happened, & charged the same upon the settled estate, but there were no words of exemption as in the case of the £1,000 jointure. Upon the father's death both jointures became payable:—Held: (1) as to A.'s jointure, she was not herself liable to pay the estate duty upon it, or any interest on such duty, since the words “without any deduction, etc.,” constituted a contract of exemption & also amounted to an “express provision to the contrary” within 1894 Act, s. 14 (1); (2) as to B.'s jointure, she must be treated as tenant for life of a sum equivalent to the capitalised value of the jointure, to be ascertained at the same number of years' purchase as the estate as a whole was capitalised for the purpose of duty; & she must be charged with estate duty on that sum, but was entitled to throw the duty charged against her upon the corpus of the estate, on the terms of her paying interest to the tenant for life or in tail or in fee in possession at the rate actually paid to the Commrs. of Inland Revenue until payment of the duty, & thereafter at the rate at which the duty could be raised by mtge. of the estate.

(3) Under above Act the estate duty on the estate passing on a debt is chargeable on the estate as a whole, without regard to tenancies for life or other particular interests, the scheme of the Act being that the duty shall be levied on the inheritance & that the inheritance shall bear it.—*Re PARKER-JERVIS, SALT v. By sect. 21 of above Act, legacy duty was abolished, & the duties under 1853 Act, & certain additional duties were made chargeable in respect of legacies, whether given by way of annuity or in any other form, charged on the real estate of any person dying after July 1, 1888. Testator died in 1892. H. died in 1900; & thereupon estate duty & succession duty became payable in respect of the annuities given to her children, & the question arose who was liable to pay the same:—Held: (1) testator, when he republished his will, must be taken to have known that there was then no legacy duty; it was a case of falsa demonstratio; & testator intended the annuitants to pay that duty, whether it was legacy duty or succession duty, which at that date was chargeable in respect of the annuities; (2) the estate duty was payable out of testator's residuary personal estate.—*Re RAYER, RAYER v. T. died in 1909, two of the children having received portions of £6,000 clear during his lifetime:—Held: in the absence of any direction to pay a "clear" portion of £6,000, the five remaining portions must bear their share of estate duty ratably.—*KEKEWICH v. D. was also committee of the lunatic. D. paid the estate duty in respect of both the real & personal estate out of the personal estate. The lunatic died intestate in 1903; his income was more than sufficient for his maintenance, the surplus rents of his real estate were accumulated during his life, & the accumulations were more than sufficient to have paid the amount of the estate duty attributable to the real estate. The lunatic's next of kin claimed to be entitled to a charge on his real estate for the amount of duty paid in respect thereof out of his personal estate:—Held: assuming the payment of the estate duty created a charge upon the real in favour of the personal estate, any charge which might have existed at the time of the payment of the duty on the realty out of the personalty in favour of the personalty was extinguished before the death of the lunatic; as there was no interest in the lunatic requiring the charges to be kept alive, & no person who could require the charge to be raised, it had merged.—*Re HOLE, DAVIES v. The daughter settled this fund by her marriage settlement made on Mar. 11, 1884. The original settlor having died, duty was assessed upon the fund under Deceased Persons' Estates Duties Act, 1881, s. 25, & an allowance of one-half of the duty was made under sect. 37 of that Act:—Held: sect. 37 had not the effect of withdrawing the amount allowed off the duty from the trusts of the daughter's marriage settlement, & of making a statutory gift of it to the daughter personally; & that it must be retained by the trustees of the marriage settlement as part of the fund subject to that

In the exercise of this power they appointed three sums of £10,000 each to three of their daughters upon their respective marriages. They also appointed the residue of the settled funds, after satisfying the previous appointments, up to the sum of £10,000 to a fourth daughter upon her marriage, & testator covenanted with the trustees of her marriage settlement to make good any deficiency in her £10,000 out of his own estate. The settled funds now amounted to about £38,000. Upon summons to determine how in the distribution of the settled funds the duties & the costs ought to be borne:—Held: (1) the estate duties payable on the death of testator & his wife; (2) the costs of raising & paying the same; (3) the costs of raising & paying the three first appointed sums of £10,000; (4) the general costs of administering the fund ought to be borne by all the appointed funds ratably.—*Re CHISHOLM, GODDARD v. 290. Annuity fund.]—(1) Testatrix by her will bequeathed an annuity to A., & directed that a portion of her estate should be set apart to provide for the payment of the annuity, & subject thereto she bequeathed the portion of her estate to B.:—Held: the property so set apart to provide for the payment of the annuity was property "standing limited to or in trust for persons by way of succession" within Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 2 (1), & settlement estate duty was consequently payable in respect of it.

(2) Testator bequeathed his residuary estate to trustees on trust to pay the income to his wife for life, & after her death to pay an annuity to each of his four daughters for life, & after the death of each of his daughters to raise certain named sums in trust for the children of such daughter who should attain the age of 21 years, or being females, should marry under that age:—Held: the direction to raise the portions amounted to a limitation in favour of testator's grandchildren to take effect upon the death of his daughters; there was therefore a succession in respect of such portions, & settlement estate duty was payable upon them.

(3) In order to see what is "settled" property within s. 5 (1), we must turn to the definition clause of the Act [Finance Act, 1894], s. 22. By sub-sect. 1 (i) of that sect. the expression "settlement" means any instrument whether relating to real property or personal property which is a "settlement" within Settled Land Act, 1882 (c. 38), s. 2, or, if it related to real property would be a settlement within that section. Turning to that sect. we find that any will under or by virtue of which any land or any estate or interest in land stands for the time being limited to or in trust for any persons by way of succession, creates, or is, for the purposes of this Act, a settlement (KENNEDY, J.).—*A.-G. v. 291. ———.]—The testator by his will gave certain legacies & annuities, some of which were contingent upon the legatees & annuitants attaining the age of twenty-one. He directed that every legacy & annuity should be primarily payable out of his personalty, & charged his real estate in aid, but not in exoneration, of his personalty with the same, if the personalty should be insufficient. He devised his real estate to the use of his eldest son for life with remainders over. He declared that if his residuary personalty should be insufficient for payment of his funeral & testamentary expenses, debts, legacies, & annuities, the trustees might raise the deficiency by mtge. of the real estate, but so that the annuities should be paid out of rents & profits, & not by raising a capital sum to provide for the same; & he charged the residuary personalty with the payment of the legacies & annuities, & directed that the ultimate residue of the personalty should be invested & should follow the limitations of the real estate. After the testator's death the exors. had paid settlement estate duty in respect of the contingent legacies & annuities. There was a probability that the personal estate would be insufficient to pay the funeral & testamentary expenses, legacies, & annuities. The question having arisen as to how the settlement estate duty ought to be borne as between the residuary estate & the legatees & annuitants:—Held: (1) the contingent legacies must be treated as settled, & the duty must be borne by the legatees; (2) as regarded the annuities, the decision in A.-G. v. Owen, No. 290, ante, applied to the personalty, & consequently the annuitants must bear their proper proportion of the settlement estate duty in accordance with the rule laid down in In re Parker-Jervis, No. 261, ante.—*Re ST. 322. ——— Before August 31, 1815.]—One S. by his will devised all his real estates, except his mtges. in fee, unto W. & J., their heirs & assigns, to & upon the uses & trusts therein mentioned, viz. to the use of M. & his assigns for life, with remainder in tail to his issue, with divers remainders over; & the said S., testator, by his will gave & devised all the residue of his personal estate, after payment of debts & legacies, as also all such real estates as he was seised of as mtgee. in fee, unto W. & M., their heirs, exors., administrators, & assigns, upon trust, to convert the whole of the said residue into money, & to lay out & invest the same, as soon as conveniently might be, in the purchase of real estate, to be conveyed to the said W. & J., the trustees of his real estates, their heirs & assigns, to & upon the same uses & trusts as were thereinbefore declared of & concerning his real estates; & testator thereby declared, that until such purchases were made, his said exors. should place out or continue all the said residue at interest, in the names of his said exors., on mtge. of real estate; or if the same should not offer, that the residue should be placed out at interest in the public funds, & the interest & dividends were directed to be paid to the persons to whom the rents & profits of the real estate therewith to be purchased would belong by virtue of his will. Testator appointed the said W. & M. his exors., & died in 1791, when they took upon themselves the execution of the will. The residue amounted to £14,000, & was invested in mtge., in the names of the exors., before the year 1796, & before 1796 Act, after which W. died & M. who enjoyed the interest during his life, became the surviving exor. M. died without issue in 1825, & appointed H. & R. his exors. The money was never applied in the purchase of real estate; & H. & R., the exors. under the will of M., on Jan. 26, 1832, paid the residue of the personal estate of S., the original testator, to J., he being the person entitled to it under S.'s will:—Held: this was a legacy given by the will of a person dying before Apr. 5, 1805, & paid, satisfied, or discharged after Aug. 31, 1815, within 1815 Act, & was liable to the payment of legacy duty under that Act.

There is no exception, therefore, to be found in favour of any actual interest for whatever length of time it might have been vested provided it was not actually reduced into possession & the exor. fully exonerated before Aug. 31, 1815 (LORD ABINGER, C.B.).

It is clear that if a legacy passing to several persons in succession, according to the directions of a will, can be properly said to be paid & satisfied to each of them in turn, the words of the schedule & of 1796 Act, which provides for such cases, may apply to the last of these payments, if made after Aug. 31, 1815, although one or more of the first payments may have taken place before that date (LORD ABINGER, C.B.).—A.-G. v. HANCOCK (1837), 2 M. & W. 563; Murp. & H. 159; 6 L. J. Ex. 168; 150 E. R. 882.

323. Duty not a professional disbursement—By solicitor.]—The town agents of a country solr., in passing the accounts of an administrator, paid four sums amounting to £11 8s. 6d. at the Stamp Office for legacy duty & stamps. These were included by the country solr. in his bill of fees & disbursements, but upon taxation they were struck out, by which the bill was reduced more than one-sixth. Upon a petition asking for liberty to except to the taxing master's certificate:—Held: (1) the payment for legacy duty & stamps could only be made as agent, & it was not a professional disbursement; (2) it ought to be inserted in the cash account, & not in the bill of fees & disbursements; (3) the taxing master was right, & the petition would be dismissed without costs.—Re HAIGH (1849), 12 Beav. 307; 19 L. If a man give, by deed, his leasehold & personal property to trustees for the use of himself for life & of several persons therein named at his death, with a power of revocation reserved—never having parted with the deed or with any part of the property during his life—& confirming, in most respects such disposition of it by will at his death, those two instruments will be considered as to be taken & construed together as testamentary instruments & the property passing under them will pass as legacies, & be subject to duty.—A.-G. v. JONES & BARTLETT (1817), 3 Price, 368; 146 E. R. 291.

325. ———.]—An instrument, vesting property in trustees for the benefit of the grantor for his life, & after his decease for the benefit of other persons, with a power of revocation, is not testamentary, & consequently, not liable to the payment of legacy duty.—TOMPSON v. BROWNE* (1835), 3 My. & K. 32; 5 L. J. Ch. 64; 40 E. R. 13.

326. Irrevocable mutual settlement—Subject to paying debts of party dying.]—An instrument may pass property from the dead to the living, & yet not be testamentary, or subject to legacy duty. Upon a recital of mutual love & affection, five maiden sisters, by a written instrument, conveyed & assigned “from them & their heirs severally to & in favour of each other, & to the heirs & assignees of the last survivor,” all property then belonging to them, & all property to which they should be entitled at their death, transferring the whole “from them severally, & from the predecessor & predecessors, to & in favour of themselves jointly, & the survivors & survivor of them,” with power of administration, & with an obligation to pay all debts of the sisters predeceasing:—Held: this instrument was not testamentary & duty under stamp laws was not demandable.—BROWN v. H.M. ADVOCATE-GENERAL (1852), 1 Macq. 79, H. L.

327. Covenant to pay sum to charitable trust—Subject to debts & legacies—Deed not delivered.]—A. being possessed of some pure personalty, but of considerable property in mtges., executed some years before his death an indenture, by which, declaring a wish to found certain charities, he covenanted to pay, or that if he did not pay during his lifetime, his exors. should, within twelve months after his death, subject to his debts & legacies, pay to certain persons therein named the sum of £60,000, to be invested in their names on the trusts thereby declared; the trusts were charitable trusts. This deed was never enrolled in Chancery. On the same day he made a will giving certain legacies, & appointing exors., most of whom were the persons named in the deed. These papers were never communicated by him to anybody. Just before his death he caused the papers to be produced from his drawers, & handed them to the persons attending his death-bed. They were tied up with a memorandum which declared that they had been prepared in that form, under advice, to save the legacy duties, & in order that if probate duty was paid in the first instance it might be got back again in consequence of the covenant creating a debt to be paid out of the assets:—Held: the indenture was a deed & not a testamentary paper.

The fact that the deed was never delivered to any one; that its real nature was never stated; that it could be, if not formally revoked, at least effectually rendered unavailable, by the mere gift of the whole sum in legacies, or by the general gift of residue; all these things show that it is a gift to take effect only after the death of testator, & being a gift of real assets so to take effect, but not being so executed as the statute requires, it is void (per CUR.).—JEFFRIES v. ALEXANDER (1860), 8 H. L. Cas. 594; 31 L. J. Ch. 9; 2 L. T. 748; 24 J. P. 643; 7 Jur. N. S. 221; 11 E. R. 562, H. L.

SUB-SECT. 2.—THE LEGACY.

328. Forgiveness of a debt.]—The forgiveness of a bond debt by will is a legacy, & as such, is liable to the payment of legacy duty; but where a specific sum is bequeathed or a specific debt forgiven, which is known & ascertained at the time of testator's death, legacy duty is not payable upon the interest accruing in respect of such debt or sum of money, between the time of such death & the period when the exors. close their accounts. The obligee of a bond, after the death of the principal therein, but during the life of the surety, who was his brother, made his will, containing the following directions relative to the bond: “I hereby forgive the bond debt, both principal & interest, due to me, & entered into by J. & my brother H., with & for him, for the said J.'s paying me the principal sum of £4,000 & interest, at £4 per cent., etc., & do order the said bond, at my decease, to be delivered up & cancelled.” The interest upon the bond was paid up to the death of testator, whom his brother survived:—Held: this was a legacy whereon legacy duty was payable by H., testator's brother, but upon the principal sum only, & not in respect of interest accruing subsequent to testator's death.—A.-G. v. HOLBROOK (1823), 3 Y. & J. 114; 12 Price, 407; 148 E. R. 1115.

329. ——— When irrecoverable by law.]—By agreement made in 1794, £8,000 stock was transferred by O. to H., upon the terms that H. should repay the money produced by the sale of it or replace the stock at the option of O., & in the meantime pay interest at the rate of 5 per cent.; the loan was secured by bond, mtge., & a deed of covenant. O. & H. being dead, E. being the legatee & heiress, but not the personal representative of O., & J. being the devisee of H., J. applied to E. to assist him to raise money, which E. agreed to do on having a security for the replacement of the stock. E. accordingly assigned the bond mtge., & deed of covenant of 1794, to H. & P., by way of mtge., to secure an advance to J.,

& in consideration thereof, J., in 1842, by indenture, conveyed to E. the premises comprised in the original mtge., together with other lands, by way of mtge., with a proviso & covenant to secure the transfer to E. of £8,000 stock. E. died, & by her will forgave the mtge. debt of 1842 to J.:—Held: the mtge. & covenant of 1842 were not so connected with the illegal agreement of 1794, as to be usurious & void, &, therefore, legacy duty was payable on the bequest.—A.-G. v. HOLLINGWORTH (1857), 2 H. & N. 416; 27 L. J. Ex. 102; 29 L. T. O. S. 184; 5 W. R. 684; 157 E. R. 172. Annotation:—Mentd. Hyams v. Stuart King, [1908] 2 K. B. 696.

330. Direction to pay testator's debts—When statute barred.]—Testator by his will declared that one-fifth of the residue of his personal estate should be divided amongst certain of his creditors named in a schedule to his will. The schedule contained both the names of the creditors, & the debts due to them respectively:—Held: (1) the parties so named in the schedule were not to be considered as legatees, but strictly as creditors, &, consequently, the representatives of such as died in testator's lifetime were entitled to the benefit of the will; (2) the direction so given for payment of these debts prevented the operation of Stat. Limitations; (3) the fund being insufficient to pay the debts in full, & many of the creditors having failed to answer the master's advertisements, their shares were to be applied in further satisfaction of the demands of the creditors who had come in, & were not to be distributed amongst testator's next of kin.

(4) Where a testator revives debts which have been barred by Stat. Limitations, he may appropriate a specific fund for their payment, &, if the fund is not sufficient, the creditors must take ratably.—WILLIAMSON v. NAYLOR (1838), 3 Y. & C. Ex. 208; 160 E. R. 676.

after giving certain legacies, he thereby vested the residue in trustees, for the use of his daughter P. for life, with power to her to appoint same by will, but expressly excluding from the benefit of that appointment certain persons named or indicated in his will; & directed, that in default of appointment, or so far as such appointment should be incomplete, the residue should be held by the trustees in trust for the next of kin of D. This power was exercised by P. by her will, partly in favour of the next of kin of D., & partly in favour of other persons:—Held: (1) she must be considered to have had, notwithstanding the special exclusions in her father's will, an absolute power of appointment, within 1796 Act, & consequently, legacy duty was payable by her appointees, upon the bequests made by her, as being, under sect. 7 of that Act, bequests made by her out of personal estate which she had the power of disposing of; (2) this property, though subject to her power of disposal, was not so strictly her own property, as to render it, under sect. 18, liable to probate duty under her will, as property which she had died possessed of or entitled to.—*DRAKE v. The donee by his will, in execution of that power, charged the estates with the payment of the annual sum of £2,000 to his wife during her life in lieu, bar, & satisfaction of her dower, which she accepted:—Held: this annuity was "a gift" subject to legacy duty under 1805 Act, s. 4. & not a purchase for a valuable consideration.—*HENNIKER (LORD) v. It may be a question whether, if there were a gift of a legacy out of personalty, on a condition the performance of which would cause something to be returned to the personal estate of testator, whether there the duty would be payable on the whole legacy, or whether there would be a deduction in respect of the difference (KINDERSLEY,

It is a gift on condition, which is just as much a taxable legacy as a legacy to an exor. for his trouble in winding up the estate (LINDLEY, L.J.).

If he could give the subsequent profits of his business, it follows as a matter of course, he could give an annuity out of the subsequent profits of his business. Therefore, the subsequent profits of his business out of which this annuity was to come, were beyond all question his personal estate which he could deal with. They were, in truth, the fruit of the business which belonged to him (KAY, L.J.).

The argument was also put thus: Supposing, it was said, testator had made a gift of £5,000 to his son, not upon condition of his giving valuable services, but upon condition of his releasing a debt of £2,000 which testator owed him. Then it was said, surely the son would not have to pay the duty on the whole £5,000. I do not know how the office would deal with that. But it seems to me probable that he would not. Why? For this simple reason: In that case the residuary estate would be increased by the £2,000, which otherwise would have to be paid out of it. The residue would pay increased duty—namely, the duty payable on that sum of £2,000, so that if the legatee were made to pay the duty on the whole fund, the estate would have to pay the duty twice over (KAY, L.J.).—*Re THORLEY, THORLEY v. 353. — Of share of residue.]—(1) A trustee who accepts office at the request of a cestui que trust is entitled to be indemnified by that cestui que trust personally against all loss which may accrue in the proper execution of the trust.

(2) Notice of a remote contingent liability on the part of a testator is not sufficient to prevent his exor. from distributing his residuary estate; & if the exor. distributes with such notice, & the liability afterwards ripens into a debt, he will be entitled to call on the residuary legatees to refund. The exors. of a testator had during his lifetime, & at his request, become trustees of a deed, whereby certain shares in an unlimited co. were settled on a tenant for life, with remainders over. While the co. was a going concern, & believed to be perfectly solvent, they distributed the residuary estate; afterwards the co. was ordered to be wound up. Large calls were made in respect of the shares, & the remaindermen all disclaimed:—Held: the trustees & exors. were entitled to be indemnified out of testator's estate, & to call on the residuary legatees to refund.

(3) A person who has covenanted to bequeath or otherwise provide that a share of his estate shall go to the covenantee fulfils his covenant by bequeathing the share to the covenantee, who then stands in the same position as any other legatee. The above-mentioned testator had, by the settlement made on the marriage of one of his daughters, covenanted to bequeath or otherwise provide that a certain share of his residuary estate should go to her; & it was by the same settlement agreed that such share should be paid to the trustees & held by them on the trusts of the settlement. Testator accordingly bequeathed the proper share to his daughter, & it was paid by the exors. to the trustees of the settlement:—Held: the trustees were liable to refund equally with the other residuary legatees.

The covenant by J. was simply that he would bequeath by will, or otherwise provide, that this share of residue should come to Mrs. B. He did bequeath it by will, & he therefore fulfilled his covenant. The effect of the bequest by will was to make the lady a residuary legatee, & nothing else (JESSEL, M.R.).

359. — — — — —.]—A testator devised, by two testamentary papers, his real & personal estates to trustees. In the first paper he declared the trusts, & among others he created a power of sale in the following terms: "To sell & dispose of the lands, mills, teinds, woods, fishings, messuages, tenements, & hereditaments, & others hereby generally & particularly disposed to them, etc., on such conditions & at such prices as they shall think fit." To render these sales effectual, he granted full power to convey, etc. The paper then went on thus: "Declaring always, etc., that my said trustees shall by their acceptance hereof be bound & obliged, after the sale of the said lands, teinds, & others before disposed, which I recommend to them to be done as soon as convenient after this trust opens upon them, to satisfy & pay all my lawful & just debts," etc. By a second testamentary paper reciting the first, he said that by the recited paper he had disposed of his heritable & movable estates to trustees on the trusts therein mentioned, & "Amongst others, my trustees are required to turn my means & effects, thereby conveyed in trust, into money"; & he gave directions accordingly. He further directed, that in case he should die leaving an heir of his body, his trustees should employ the trust funds for the use of such heir; & that as soon as such heir should attain majority or be married, the trustees should "denude themselves of the whole trust & funds" in favour of such heir, but to return to the trustees in case of failure of heirs of his body, without disposing of the same:—Held: (1) the testamentary papers must be construed as amounting not merely to a power of sale for the purposes of the trust, but to a direction to sell in case testator should die without leaving any heir of his body living at the time of his death; (2) therefore, though in fact the real estate was not sold, the positive direction to sell rendered it liable to the legacy duty.—*WILLIAMSON v. In an administration suit the estates were directed to be sold:—Held: legacy duty was payable on the proceeds, & succession duty was payable on the dower to which the widow was entitled out of a certain portion of the estate.

C. by his will directed his real estate to be converted, & the proceeds with his personalty to be held in trust for the payment of debts & legacies, & as to the residue, on certain trusts which failed. Testator's heiress, M., became, by reason of the failure of the last-mentioned trusts, entitled to the proceeds of the real estate. She died under 21, & at the time of her death the real estate was unsold:—Held: the interest which M. took as heiress of C. was taken by her as money, & probate duty was payable by her administrator in respect of it.—*A.-G. v. 364. ——— Duty payable on part sold.—A testator, by his will, after giving certain legacies, gave, devised, & bequeathed unto his exors., their heirs, exors., & administrators, all the rest & residue of his estate, real & personal, upon trust, at such times as they might think fit, to sell, convey, or otherwise convert into money the same, or any part thereof; & testator directed that all the residue of his estate should be invested as it should be realised, & should be divided amongst all his children, in such shares & proportions that his son then born should take four shares, any other son or sons which he might have should take three shares each, & his daughters should take two shares each; but if his son then born should die before attaining 21, & without leaving issue, testator directed that his next son should take four shares, or, if he should have no other son, then that his eldest daughter should take three shares; & he directed that in the event of any of his children dying under 21 & without leaving issue, his or her legacy or share should be considered as having lapsed; & that in case any of his daughters should marry under 21, his trustees should settle her fortune upon such trusts, etc., as were specified in the will of his, testator’s father, with respect to certain bequests of personal property to the sisters of the said testator therein contained; & testator directed that his trustees should have full power, in making such sales as in the said will were directed, to resort to either public or private

Testator, at the time of his death, had one son & four daughters. The trustees, after testator’s death, sold a large part of the real & personal estate, amounting to £180,000, & caused the remaining part of the residue, which consisted of real estate, to be valued, & the same was valued at £90,000, which was the son’s share of the residue, & the sums of £45,000 each, amounting to £180,000 were the shares of the daughters. The trustees allotted the estate which had been so valued at £90,000 to testator’s son, at the amount of the valuation, & retained the sum of £180,000, the proceeds of the part which had been sold, for the benefit of the four daughters :—Held : legacy duty was payable upon the amount of the part which was actually sold, but not upon the part which the trustees had allotted to testator’s son, under the discretionary power contained in the will.—*A.-G. v. 363 i. Proceeds of sale of real estate—Direction not imperative.—Testator conveyed his whole estate, heritable & movable, to trustees; the free residue, after payment of debts & legacies, to be divided between his children in equal shares. The trustees had power either to sell or retain the property as they should consider advantageous, & if they resolved to dispose of it, power to invest the proceeds. The trustees sold the property at different times, & as funds were realised they paid in money to the children. The remainder of the fund was held by the trustees for behoo of testator’s surviving daughters & party lent on heritable securities :—Held : the trustees having an ample & absolute discretion conferred upon them by testator, the character of his succession was made dependent on their resolution, & they having in exercise of their powers, converted the estate, it became liable to legacy duty.—*ADVOCATE-GENERAL v. that the purchase-moneys should be invested by the trustees in the purchase or on mtge. of other lands in the counties of S. or D., which lands should be settled to the same uses; & until the money arising from such sale should be so invested, the trustees should place in it the public funds, or on govt. or real securities in England. Testator died, leaving his grandson then an infant, & his nephews him surviving. The trustees filed a bill in Chancery to establish the trusts of the will & take the usual accounts, & a decree was made accordingly. The master by his report, found that there were no debts due from testator. Subsequently, the trustees presented a petition in the cause, stating that they were desirous that the estate in W. should be sold, & the proceeds laid out in the purchase of other lands as directed by the will & praying that it might be referred to the master to inquire whether it would be for the benefit of the infant grandson that the estate should be sold. An order having been made, the master by his report found that it would be beneficial to sell the estate; & in pursuance of an order of the ct. it was sold, & the proceeds laid out in the purchase of Bank annuities. The grandson afterwards died without issue, & the interest of the nephews expectant on his decease vested in M. By a decree in the cause, legacies & costs were ordered to be paid, & the residue of the Bank annuities transferred to M.:—Held: the fund was not subject to legacy duty, since the person entitled to it did not take it as personalty under the will, but in consequence of his election to receive a gift of real estate in the shape of money.—*MULES v. 367. ———.]—Prior to the alteration of the law legacy duty was not chargeable upon real estate except where its conversion into personalty took place under some imperative trust or direction to that effect. Hence, where the conversion was a thing done at discretion, for the convenience or benefit of the parties, the claim of the Crown did not arise. In such cases the words "to pay" did not necessarily denote conversion. They might be taken for "to transfer."

As to the power of varying the securities, I must observe, that where such a power is not imperative on the trustees, but is to be exercised for the convenience & benefit of the parties, conversion, in the sense meant by the statute, does not take place (LORD ST. LEONARDS).—ADVOCATE-GENERAL v. SMITH (1854), 1 Macq. 760, H. L.

371. Purchase-money of real estate—Bought under option given by testator.—Testator, who died in 1811, by his will gave all his freehold & copyhold lands to his three nieces, as tenants in common in fee simple, subject to certain provisos in case of marriage with the further proviso that his nephew should have the option of becoming the purchaser of the whole in fee simple at the rate or price of £10,000 £3 per cent. Consols; & that upon his said nephew investing the sum of £10,000 Consols in the name of himself & other trustees to be appointed by his said nieces, that then & from thenceforth, the use in the said will before limited to the said nieces in the said lands should absolutely cease & determine, & the said lands should forthwith be & enure to the only absolute use of his nephew, & that then & from thenceforth his said nieces should, on request of his said nephew, convey the said lands to the use of his said nephew; & testator further declared that the said nephew & such other persons should thenceforth stand possessed of the said £10,000 £3 per cent. Consols in trust for his said three nieces, & that after the marriage of all of them, or the death of the survivor of them, the said trustees should transfer the said principal £10,000 to his said nieces & their respective exors., administrators, & assigns, in three equal shares. The nephew in the year 1812, having exercised the option given him by testator's will, entered into the possession of the estates, & forthwith thereupon transferred the sum of £10,000 Consols into the names of himself & two others as trustees for testator's said nieces. The said nephew survived both his co-trustees, & died, leaving deft., his only son & heir-at-law & exor. under his will, him surviving who proved his father's will, & thereby became sole trustee of the said £10,000 Consols upon the trusts declared by testator's will:—Held: a duty at the rate of £2 10s. per cent. upon the said sum of £10,000 Consols became payable upon the transfer thereof into the names of the trustees as directed by the said will, & deft. was liable for that duty.—*A.-G. v. 372. Mortgage debt—Secured on property devolving on legatee.—A. made a mtge. in fee to secure a sum lent to him by the trustees of his marriage settlement. On his death, his daughter became entitled to the equity of redemption of the mortgaged estate as his heir, & under his marriage settlement, to the mtge. money. The trustees then conveyed the estate to her, subject, expressly,

374. Capital sum to be raised out of settled real estate—To which legatee entitled on testator's death.—Lord E. & his son, by a deed of 1800, conveyed to trustees certain real estates, to the use, subject to a term to secure a rentcharge of £2,000 to the son during their joint lives, of Lord E. for life, with remainder to the son for life, with remainder to the first & other sons of the latter in tail, with remainders over; with a joint power to revoke such uses & declare others. By a deed of 1814 they executed the power. This deed recited, that Lord E. was not possessed of personal estate sufficient, in the event of his death, to discharge all the debts he might probably owe, & such legacies as he might bequeath, without a sale of his family & other pictures, plate & other articles of a similar nature; & that, therefore, the son had agreed, for the accommodation of Lord E., to join him in charging the said lands with a sum of £50,000, to be raised after the death of Lord E., & applied in augmentation of his personal estate; & that Lord E. had agreed in charging the estates with £20,000, to be raised, after his death, for the use of his son; & that it was agreed that the pictures, etc., should be assigned to trustees. The deed then contained a revocation of the former uses; & it was thereby directed, that the said estates should be & remain to the use of the trustees, in trust (inter alia) within six months after the death of Lord E., to raise by sale such sum not exceeding £50,000 as should be necessary to make good the deficiency of the personal estate of Lord E., in payment of his debts & legacies, & in aid of the same. The estates were then settled as before to the use of Lord E. for life, with remainder to his son & his issue, with remainder in undivided third parts to Lord E.'s three daughters, Lady S., Lady C., & another daughter for their lives respectively, with remainder to their sons in tail; & Lord E. assigned all his pictures, furniture, etc., to trustees, to go, for the most part, as heirlooms. Lord E. by his will, gave, amongst other legacies, to his exors. two sums of £10,000 each, in trust for his daughter Lady S., the wife of Lord S., the same to be subject to her appointment. The son died without issue in the lifetime of his father, whose personal estate, after his death, was not sufficient for the payment of his debts & legacies, without a part of the said sum of £50,000, out of which it was necessary to provide for payment of the legacies to Lady S. Common recoveries were suffered, & the estates tail in the lands thereby barred, & partition was made, one share being limited to such uses as Lady S. & her husband, & their eldest son, or the survivors of them, should jointly appoint; & it was agreed that, instead of raising the legacies, they should be charged upon the estates in proper proportions. The sums apportioned to the lands taken by the other daughters & their sons were at once paid to the trustees, leaving a large amount to be charged, & which was charged on Lady S. own share of the estates so limited as aforesaid, the same being secured by means of a term created for the purpose, & vested in trustees. Lady S., by virtue of the power in her father's will, appointed by deed the sums received by the trustees on account of her legacies to her husband, & directed that the residue should be paid to such person as she should thereafter appoint, & in default of appointment, then to her husband; & she died without having made any further appointment. Lord S. & his son, by deed, conveyed the estates subject to the said term, to the use of themselves & the survivor in fee. On the death of Lord S., his son became seised of the said estates, & as residuary legatee of his father, entitled to the residue of the legacies charged thereon; & he called upon the trustees to surrender the estate in lieu of selling it to realise the amount charged upon it. This was done, & thereby the demand of the trustees became extinguished; & that extinguishment took place before 1845 Act:—Held: (1) legacy duty was payable upon all the legacies, under 1815 Act; (2) the £50,000 stipulated for by testator as a fund for the payment of his debts & legacies, was personal estate; (3) the fact, that the legacy, & the land upon which the legacies were charged, had devolved upon the same person, whereby it became unnecessary for the trustees to realise the money by the sale of the land, was equivalent to a satisfaction of the legacies within Sched., Part III., of the latter Act.—A.-G. v. METCALFE (1851), 6 Exch. 26; 20 L. J. Ex. 329; 16 L. T. O. S. 417; 155 E. R. 439.

consisted of a freehold estate of 29,000 acres in New Zealand known as the Milbourne estate. By articles of partnership dated Feb. 14, 1879, made between testator & R., it was agreed that the Milbourne estate should be forthwith sold in the manner which the parties should mutually agree upon, & the articles contained provisions for sale in case of no agreement & for carrying on the partnership. R. died in Jan. 1880. Testator was entitled to four-sevenths of the partnership property. No sale of the estate was made in his lifetime or in that of testator. By his will testator gave his four-sevenths shares in the said Milbourne estate to trustees upon trust to sell, with powers of management till sale, & subject to the payment of an annuity, & of the income of one-seventh to the widow of R. during her life, to divide the proceeds & the produce till sale among thirteen charities. An administration action was commenced in 1881. The New Zealand property had never been sold, but the income had from time to time been paid into ct. Under an order made in Apr. 1888, the funds then in ct. had been divided, & legacy duty had been paid upon the moneys arising from the New Zealand estate. The duty had been paid under an arrangement that it should be repaid if it was ultimately decided not to be payable. The Governors of the London Hospital, who had been appointed to represent the other charities, presented a petition asking for distribution of the fund which had accumulated in ct. since Apr. 1888, without payment of legacy duty, on the ground that being proceeds of real estate in New Zealand, it was not subject to English legacy duty:—Held: testator's interest in the property whether regarded as a share in land agreed to be sold by the articles of partnership or as a share in partnership property, was personal & movable property, & therefore, subject to legacy duty according to the law of testator's domicile.—*Re STOKES, STOKES v. 377. Estate pur autre vie—1796 Act, s. 20.]—

A testator gave a rentcharge, to issue out of lands in England, to A. for life, & directed that after her death it should be continued, & equally divided between B., C., & D. during their lives & the life of the longest liver. B. died domiciled abroad, leaving an English will, by which she disposed of her personal estate. On the death of A., who was survived by C. & D., the Crown claimed from B.'s exors. legacy duty in respect of B.'s third share of the rentcharge:—Held: such duty was payable, for the interest in the rentcharge which passed to B.'s exors. was, by Wills Act, 1837 (c. 26), "an estate pur autre vie, applicable by law in the same manner as personal estate," & therefore, fell within 1796 Act, s. 20, & it was not exempt from duty by reason of B.'s foreign domicile, inasmuch as, although it was by law applicable in the same manner as personal estate, it was not by any of the statutes made personal estate, but was realty not following the person.—CHATFIELD v. BERCHTOLDT (1872), 7 Ch. App. 192; 41 L. J. Ch. 255; 26 L. T. 267; 20 W. R. 401, L. J.J.

A. by his will gave to trustees £10,000 upon trust for B., then the wife of C., & after her death upon trust for all her children who should attain 21 years. B. had seven children who attained that age, two of whom, D. & E., died in the lifetime of their parents, intestate, whereby their father, C., became their next of kin, & entitled beneficially to the one-seventh share of the legacy of £10,000 expectant upon the death of their mother, B. Their father, C., never took out letters of administration, but himself died in the lifetime of his wife B., & by his will surviving children became entitled to his residuary personal estate upon which the sum of £448 10s. 4d. was paid, being at the rate of 1 per cent., & was paid in respect of the beneficial acquisition of his surviving children of his residuary personal estate, & which included the reversionary value of the two-seventh parts of the legacy of £10,000 to which he was entitled as next of kin of his children D. & E., & in respect of which two-seventh parts no legacy or succession duty had been paid by C. Upon the subsequent death of B., F., who was one of the exors. under the will of C., obtained letters of administration of the estate & effects of D. & E., so as to enable him to receive & give a good discharge for their two-seventh shares:—Held: sect. 14 of the above Act did not apply to such a case, & legacy duty was payable in respect of the beneficial acquisition by C. of the two-seventh shares of D. & E., as well as a similar duty in respect of the transmission of the same shares by the will of C.—*A.-G. v. The lower ct. held that testator's wife had not a bare discretionary power, but that these precatory words created a trust, & that the gifts to the several individuals named in the will were subject to the legacy duty. On appeal:—Held: where a testator recommended the particular mode of disposing of a benefit which but for such recommendation would have been an absolute gift, that word, unless controlled by the context would render it a precatory trust; but as that construction commonly defeated testator's intention, the doctrine would not be extended beyond the limits assigned to it by decided cases, & no legacy duty was payable on the sum of £4,000 given by testator to his wife.—*WHITE v. 400. ———.]—C., a surgeon in the army, residing in India, & having personal estate vested in funds there, as well as real estate & claims for prize money, made his will, noticing the state of his assets in India & his claims, & directing that his house & grounds should be sold by auction, & the produce placed to the credit of his estate; he left the whole of his property among his children equally, subject to certain regulations, & gave legacies to persons in England as well as in India, as expressed in his will. He thereby, also noticing that his son was at school in Scotland, desired that his other children, daughters, should be taken to England. To provide for their education, he directed that his exors. should place out his whole estate at interest, on landed property or in some public funds, suggesting that those of the East India Co. "were perhaps as secure as any," but leaving the investment to the discretion of his exors. In a letter, proved as a codicil, he directed that, after providing for certain expenses, the whole of his property at Bombay should be invested in the Co.'s next good loan. By another codicil he made a specific provision, calculated first in Indian & then in English money, to the amount of £8,000, for each of his daughters. He died in India. The exors. proved the will, & there collected the funds; & having there also administered them so far as it was necessary, transmitted them to England, where suits were instituted by parties claiming interests under the will. In the progress of these suits, the accounts being taken, the amount of the funds was ascertained; & in a report made by the master & confirmed by the ct., deductions were made from certain legacies & annuities payable in England, on account of the legacy duty, but none for probate duty, or legacies paid in India, or for the shares of residue paid there. In 1791 he left France & came to England in consequence of the French Revolution, &, shortly afterwards, his property was confiscated by the Revolutionary Govt. In Jan. 1802, he made a will in London, by which he left his property partly to a charity in Ireland, & partly to individuals resident in England, & appointed one of those individuals his exor. In Apr. 1802, emigrants were permitted to return to France, &, soon afterwards, he returned to that country. In 1804 he made a will in Paris, in which he stated that he was born at Waterford, & had come to France to obtain restitution of his estate; &, after referring to his former will, which he had mislaid in London, he recapitulated very nearly its contents, & concluded by expressly confirming it. He died in Paris in 1806, & his two testamentary papers were proved both in France & in England. Under the treaty of peace between England & France in 1815, a large sum of French stock was set apart by the then French Govt. for the purpose of compensating British subjects whose property had been confiscated by the Revolutionary Govt., & part of that sum was awarded, by comrs. appointed by the British

He expended large sums in repairing & improving the castle & grounds of R., which repairs & improvements were going on at the time of his death. He did not make R. his constant residence, but from 1828 to 1831 sometimes occupied it, sometimes lived in furnished lodgings in the towns adjacent, & at other times visited Rome, Florence, & other parts of Italy, residing in furnished lodgings. In 1831 he came to England, & resided in different parts of it until Sept. 1832. In Mar. 1832, he sent to R. several cases of plate, books & wearing apparel. In Sept. 1832, he made his will in London. In the same month he left England & went to Florence, where he remained two months, & thence to R. He then lived, sometimes in the castle of R., sometimes in furnished lodgings in the adjacent towns, till Oct. 1833, when he went to Rome & there lived in furnished lodgings until his death in Feb. 1834. Upon these facts:—Held: (1) there was no evidence of testator's having actually acquired a domicile at R., or elsewhere abroad, although they indicated an intention to make R. his domicile; (2) his English domicile therefore remained, & legacy duty was consequently payable on the bequests contained in his will.—A.-G. v. DUNN (1840), 6 M. & W. 511; 151 E. R. 514.

He, subsequently, filled the successive offices of Governor of the Cape of Good Hope, & of Madras, during which time he let his house furnished, & at the expiration of those services he returned to England & reoccupied his house. Whilst there he made his will, describing himself as of No. 67, etc., i.e. the house in question. After a short residence in England he went to Malta for the benefit of his health, where he died, having made two codicils there to his will, in which he described himself as "of No. 67, Eaton-place, Belgrave-square, in the county of Middlesex, & now residing at La Valetta." There was evidence in letters of testator, & otherwise that he had expressed a wish, & in a certain event an intention, to return to India for good:—Held: the presumption of law, in favour of his English domicile, arising from his residence in England, his purchase & occupation of a house, & the description of himself in his will & codicils, was irresistible, & was not counter-balanced by the expressions of an intention, which he never carried into effect, of returning to end his days in India, & consequently, his domicile was English at the time of his death.—*A.-G. v. Upon information filed by the A.-G. on behalf of the Crown for the legacy duty:—Held: (1) England being the domicile of origin of R., the onus probandi was upon the party, who alleged R. had abandoned it & acquired another domicile, to establish that proposition; (2) the presumption of law was against the intention to abandon the domicile of origin; (3) as every man's domicile of origin must be presumed to continue until he has acquired another sole domicile by actual residence with the intention of abandoning his domicile of origin, this change must be animo et facto, & as there was no such intention or change, legacy duty was, therefore, payable for R.'s personal estate to the Crown.—*A.-G. v. She then left with the intention of living at Toulon, her native town, but, on the journey thither, fell ill at Paris, whence she returned to London for surgical treatment, & remained there till her death in 1875. The indenture contained a proviso that it should be lawful for the Earl of Y., by his last will, to limit to the use of himself, or any other person, any annual sum of money or rent-charge, not exceeding the yearly sum of £700, to be payable out of & charged upon the lands, etc., in the indenture mentioned. The Earl of Y., after the death of his father, by a codicil to his will, limited to Lady S. the annual sum of £700 payable out of the said lands, & afterwards died:—Held: no legacy duty was payable in respect of the annuity, it not being clearly the intention of 1815 Act or 1805 Act, ss. 4, 5, to render such a gift liable to duty.—*A.-G. v. 441. Legacy charged on realty—Under general power—1845 Act, s. 4.]—A., by deed dated in 1802, conveyed certain lands to trustees, to the use of himself for life, remainder to B., his son for life, remainder to deft., his grandson for life, with remainders over. The deed provided, that it should be lawful for deft. & the survivor of A. & B. to declare any new uses of the lands. A. died in June, 1822, & by indenture of appointment of Oct. 1822, B. & deft. declared that it should be lawful for B. by deed or will to charge the lands with the payment of any sum not exceeding £47,000. In 1823, B. by his will charged the lands with payment to his exors. of £47,000 to be applied in payment of his debts, etc., & the residue in trust for deft. B. died in 1842, & in 1847 his exors. raised £11,259 11s. 8d., part of the £47,000, & paid it to deft., the debts having been previously paid:—Held: this was a gift by will, within 1845 Act, although it operated originally by virtue of a power, & legacy duty was chargeable on the sum of £11,259 11s. 8d. it not having been paid to deft. until after that Act came into operation, notwithstanding testator died before.—*A.-G. v. b. ——— What amounts to.]—A testator bequeathed money for the advancement, benefit, & support of certain missions & of a theological & training institution founded by the church of a particular denomination:—Held: (1) the words "charitable bequests" in Charitable Gifts Duties Exemption Act, 1883, s. 2, being stated to include certain purposes, thereby excluded others; (2) the gift to the missions was for religious purposes, for promoting the tenets of the church; (3) the theological training institution was not a "public institution" within the meaning of sect. 2; (4) in neither case was the gift exempt from the payment of duty chargeable under Deceased Persons Estates Duties Act, 1881.—Re PROBERT'S WILL (1892), 10 N. period. . . .” By sect. 12 of the same Act, the term “body unincorporate” includes “every . . . trustee, or number of trustees, to or in whom respectively any real or personal property shall belong in such manner, or be vested upon such permanent trusts, that the same shall not be liable to legacy duty or succession duty.” By Statute Law Revision Act, 1898, c. 22, the recital in 1885 Act, s. 11, was repealed. In June, 1897, the Corpn. of the City of London for the purpose of paying off a debenture debt, & of raising further moneys, created an issue of debenture stock. In connection with the issue an indenture was entered into on June 24, 1897, between the Corpn. & certain officials of the City of London who, including their successors in office, were described as “the trustees.” By the indenture the Corpn. charged in favour of the trustees in trust for the stockholders all rents & income derived from their freehold & leasehold estates, & also, other income of the Corpn., with the payment of all moneys for the time being owing on the security of the indenture. It was also provided that for better securing & providing for the redemption of the stock the Corpn. should out of their annual income, after providing for the annual interest on the stock, set aside on Jan. 1, & July 1, in every year, so long as any of the stock should remain unredeemed, the half-yearly sums of £7,500 & should invest all such half-yearly sums & the resulting income thereof from time to time; & towards the fund so created should be applied by the Corpn. towards the redemption of the stock after it should have become redeemable. Certain powers were conferred upon the trustees in case of default by the Corpn. of the performance of their obligations under the indenture. Since the date of the deed the half-yearly sums of £7,500 had been regularly invested in the purchase of stock in the names of the trustees. The dividends & interest from the investments were as they arose applied by the Bank of England in the purchase of similar stocks. The purchases & investments were made with the consent of the Corpn. & at the request of the trustees:—Held: (1) the language in the recital to 1885 Act, s. 11, must be read in contradistinction to the language in the enacting part of the sect., which did not refer, as the recital did, to “certain property which escapes liability to probate, legacy, or succession duties,” but included “all real & personal property belonging to or vested in the Corpn. during any of the yearly periods”; (2) under the deed the holders of the debenture stock had no rights against or interest in the fund or its income which respectively belonged & accrued to the Corpn., provided they performed their obligations under the indenture, until the redemption period arrived when the debenture stock-holders were entitled to be paid out of the fund; (3) upon the assumption that the view that the fund belonged to the corpn. was wrong the trustees held the fund “upon such permanent trusts” that the same was not liable to legacy or succession duty within sect. 12 of the Act, inasmuch as the words “such permanent trusts” meant trusts of a sufficiently permanent character to prevent property being liable to legacy or succession duty on the death of individuals, & the fund in the hands of the trustees was not liable to those duties; the duty imposed by sect. 11 was, therefore, chargeable upon the income of the fund.—*A.-G. v. J. took out probate, & paid the duty of 10 per cent. on the whole net. Afterwards T., the next of kin to S., disputed the will, on the ground that S. was not of disposing mind. J. paid £6,000 to T., & consented that the will should be revoked, & administration taken out by T., who, in consideration thereof, released to J. her claim on the £12,748. T., from her nearness in blood, was liable to a duty of less duty; for a sum appropriated for the legacies, must be considered as appropriated in part for the payment of the duty which attaches upon the legacies. It must be considered as so appropriated, from the time when the legacies were payable; at that time, a certain proportion of the appropriated sum would have belonged to the legatees, & a certain proportion of it would have belonged to the Crown; & it appears to me to be the justice of the case & not contrary to the Acts of Parliament, but rather consonant to their whole tone & spirit, that the legatees should have that part of the fund which they would have had, if the appropriation had been made at the time fixed by the will, & that the Crown should have the full benefit of that part of the fund, which it would have been incumbent on the ct., at the same time, to have set apart for the discharge of the duty (LORD LYNDHURST, C.).—*THOMAS v. It is clear he meant an annuity to be purchased with the £500; which is the same in effect as giving a legacy of £500 to his son; for upon a bill filed he might have received the money; & the ct. would not have compelled the trustees to lay it out in an annuity (GRANT, M.R.).

In other parts of the will testator spoke of the annuities & residuary estate distinctly:—Held: the legacy duties were payable on the annuities as annuities, & not at once on the whole residuary estate as bequeathed in succession to persons chargeable with the same rate of duty.—CROW v. ROBINSON (1862), 4 De G. F. & J. 337; 31 L. J. Ch. 516; 6 L. T. 372; 10 W. R. 306; 45 E. R. 1213, L. JJ.

459. — — — — —.]—J., by will, gave all his real & personal estates, not specifically bequeathed, to trustees, upon trust to pay an annuity of £100 a year to his wife for life, & after her decease to pay to his natural daughter, M., the sum of £600; & after making several other bequests, then as to a certain freehold public-house, after the decease of his wife, upon trust to pay the rents & annual income to be derived therefrom unto his natural daughter E. for her life, & after her death to stand possessed of the said public-house, in trust for such of the children of the said E. as might be then living, & the issue of any that might be dead, share & share alike; & as to all the residue of his estates, after answering the several purposes aforesaid, he directed his said trustees to invest the same, & pay two-thirds of the dividends thereof unto the said E. during her life, & after her death the principal to be equally divided between her children on attaining 21 years; the remaining one-third to be paid unto the said M. during her life, & after her death the principal to be equally divided between her children. By a codicil to his will testator stated that the said freehold public-house had been sold & realised £2,200, & he, therefore, revoked the devise of the said public-house in his will mentioned in favour of the said E. & her children, & in lieu thereof he directed his said trustees to stand possessed of the sum of £2,200 & invest the same, & to pay the interest arising therefrom unto the said E. for her life, in manner in his said will expressed with reference to the rents of the said public-house so sold as aforesaid; & after her death to stand possessed of the said sum of £2,200 for the benefit of the children of the said E. as in the said will mentioned, & he thereby gave & bequeathed the same to them accordingly. Upon testator's death, his widow being still alive, the exor. in the residuary account deduced from the net amount of the residue on which duty was now payable the sum of £2,800 which he claimed to detain to answer the above outstanding legacies of £600 & £2,200. The Comrs. of Inland Revenue, on the other hand, claimed payment of duty on the said two legacies as having fallen into the residue:—Held: (1) legacy duty at the rate of £10 per cent. was payable at once by the exor. upon the two several sums of £600 & £220; (2) as to both sums, under the express provisions of 1796 Act, s. 12, as "a legacy or residue, or part of any personal estate given over for the benefit of, or so that the same shall be enjoyed by, different persons in succession, chargeable with duties at one & the same rate; (3) according to the provisions of that sect. or of sects. 1, 2, 3, of the Act, or of the whole of them taken together, the Crown was entitled to that amount of duty.

In this case, which was a writ of summons from the Exchequer, calling on the exor. to show cause why he should not deliver an account of deceased's estate, & pay the legacy & succession duties

460. — Beneficiaries liable to different rates of duty—Life interests chargeable as annuities.]—A testator gave his residuary estate upon trusts for sale & conversion & to pay the income of the proceeds to three persons during their joint lives in equal shares, with remainder, in the events that happened, both as to income & capital, to all their children living at the death of the survivor of them who should attain 21, or being female marry. The will contained no gift over in the event of the life tenants dying without issue who would take a vested interest. At the death of testator the life tenants were all under thirty years of age & unmarried. The life tenants were chargeable with legacy duty at 10 per cent. upon their interests, & their issue would also be chargeable at the same rate. The next of kin of testator who were entitled in default of the contingent class of issue consisted of several persons who would be chargeable with legacy duty at 1 per cent. & 5 per cent. respectively:—Held: different persons being entitled in succession, & the rates of payment being different, the case fell within the latter part of 1796 Act, s. 12, & sect. 17 of that Act did not apply; (2) accordingly, the exors. should pay duty calculated at 10 per cent. on the value of the life interests out of income, by instalments spread over four years; (3) should the life tenants die during that period the instalments would cease, & the ultimate duty be payable by the remainderman at the proper rate.—*Re DUPPA, FOWLER v. C. & J. died without issue & intestate, & S., testator's only daughter, became entitled to the fund, being heir-at-law to testator, as well as to C. & J. She died intestate, & at her death, the fund, which had never been invested in land, passed to E., who was grand-nephew of testator & heir-at-law of testator & of C., J., & S.:—Held: under 1796 Act, s. 19, duty was payable by E. at 5 per cent. as on a bequest from S.—*DE LANCEY v. in tail, & the heir of entail, after valuing the succeeding interests, dis-entails, the Crown is entitled to legacy duty upon the capital value of the entire residue, the heir of entail having "become entitled to an estate of inheritance in possession in the real estate to be purchased therewith," within the proviso to 36 Geo. 3, c. 52, with remainder to the use of B. in fee: & testator bequeathed his residuary personal estate to trustees in trust for sale & to invest the proceeds in the purchase of land to be settled to the like uses, the income of the proceeds until such investment being payable in the same manner as the rents & profits of the land when purchased. In 1864 B. became tenant for life, & legacy duty was paid at 1 per cent. on his life interest in the residuary personal estate not invested in the purchase of land. In 1893 B. died without male issue, having by his will declared that all money liable to be laid out in land under T.'s will, & to which he, B., should be absolutely entitled in default of male issue, should be considered as part of his personal estate. Under 1881 Act, B.'s exors. paid affidavit duty at 3 per cent. on his personal estate, including the residuary personal estate subject to the trusts of T.'s will & not yet laid out in land, after deduction for B.'s debts:—Held: at the moment of his death without male issue, B. "began to enjoy the benefit" of the capital of T.'s then subsisting residuary personal estate, within 1796 Act, s. 12, & therefore, on his death legacy duty at 1 per cent. became, by that sect. & sect. 19, payable under T.'s will on such capital, notwithstanding the affidavit duty already paid on B.'s estate.

I think it impossible to say that B. ever reserved his legacy, because he did not; but I do think it possible & right to say that "he began to enjoy the benefit" of it. No doubt that was only at the moment of his death (KEKEWICH, J.).—KENLIS (LORD) v. HODGSON, [1895] 2 Ch. 458; 64 L. J. Ch. 585; 72 L. T. 866; 13 R. 603.

PART IV. SECT. 6, SUB-SECT. 1.

1. When legacy is paid—Not when right to it accrues.]—On the death of a son intestate, money in the funds devolved upon his father, who did not exor. to pay the interest thereon to testator's natural child for his life, & on his death to pay over the principal to his children, the interest of which had accordingly been regularly paid to the legatee for life up to his death, which happened in 1812, his two sons, his only children, having died long before that time & previously disposed of their interest in the bequest:—Held: the legacy was within 1808 Act, Sched. III., as being a legacy given by will of a person dying before Apr. 5, 1805, & not paid, retained, satisfied or discharged till after Oct. 10, 1808, & consequently liable, as to the interest taken by the representatives of the children, to the duty of 8 per cent., imposed by that statute on such legacies when given for the benefit of strangers in blood to testator, & notwithstanding the principal, had, in 1794, been invested in the funds by the exors., in their own names, to answer the purposes of the will.—*A.-G. v. 467. — — — — —.]—A., who died in 1794, bequeathed a legacy, in consolidated stock, to exors., in trust to pay the interest to B. for life; remainder, after B.'s decease, to the surviving children of B. on their attaining 21; remainder, if no surviving children, to the appointment of B.; remainder, in default of appointment, to B.'s next of kin: upon A.'s death the exors. transferred the legacies into their own names from that of testator, paid testator's debts, & accounted for the residuary estate to the residuary legatee; the dividends were regularly paid by the exors. to B. until 1826, when B. died, leaving three children:—Held: the transfer did not amount to a payment, delivery, retainer, satisfaction, or discharge of the legacy, before Aug. 31, 1815, & was, therefore, liable to the duty under 1815 Act.

All that the Lord Chancellor [Lord Eldon in Hill v. Atkinson] says is, that a transfer by an exor. to himself as trustee is an appropriation of the legacy. It has been so held for a considerable length of time. For particular purposes unquestionably, it is an appropriation. If an exor. transfer into his own name as trustee the amount of a particular legacy, & acts upon that transfer, that is an appropriation as against many persons & in particular as against himself. But the question here is, whether that act so done is to be considered as a delivery of the legacy as against the revenue, & this Act of Parliament: whether it is a retainer, or a satisfaction, or a discharge. . . . Can anybody of good sense contend, that it has been delivered, retained, satisfied, or discharged when the same money is now in his hands, & he is liable for it to the persons beneficially entitled to this legacy? (ALEXANDER, C.B.).

Satisfied & discharged means, when it is paid; these words are synonymous to those which precede them (HUBBOCK, B.).—A.-G. v. WOOD (1828), 2 Y. & J. 290; 148 E. R. 928.

Upon the death of testator, a suit was instituted for the purpose of having this legacy secured; under the decree made in that suit in the year 1798, the exors. paid the amount into ct., & prior to Nov. 1802, the whole of it was invested in stock in the name of the Accountant-General, & placed to the separate account of A., who continued to receive the dividends during her life:—Held: this was a sufficient payment of the legacy within 1815 Act, & therefore, upon A.'s death in 1834, the parties interested in remainder, who were the children of A., were entitled to receive their several shares of the fund, without producing receipts for the legacy duty.—*COOMBE v. Upon the death of W., in 1794, a Chancery suit was instituted for carrying his will into effect, & the Master having reported that the £16,000 was a specialty debt, due from the estate of W. to the trustees of the settlement, certain stock, paid into court by W.'s exors., to the value of £16,000, was, in 1807, under an order of the ct., transferred to the account of C. in the cause. C. died without issue between the date of the order & the transfer; & the dividends of the stock were paid to his widow until her death, in 1848, when, upon the petition of L., the ct. ordered the stock to be sold, & the £14,000 to be paid to him:—Held: the legacy was paid, delivered, retained, satisfied or discharged before Aug. 31, 1815, within 1815 Act, Sched. III., Part III., & consequently, no legacy duty was payable on the actual receipt of the £14,000 by L. in 1848.—A.-G. v. LOSCOMBE (1860), 5 H. & N. 564; 29 L. J. Ex. 305; 157 E. R. 1305.

475. Executor or administrator—As surety for legatee.]—A trustee under a will, who pays the legacy duty upon an annuity after the expiration of four years from the death of testator, may recover the amount of the duty from the legatee, notwithstanding a previous assignment of the annuity by such legatee.

The exor., here, is only made liable for the benefit of govt., & not on his own account. He has not paid the money voluntarily, but upon compulsion. He pays, not on his own account, but on that of the legatee. The exor. is no more than surety for the legatee, & his case falls within the principles applied to the case of sureties (PARK, J.).

It is urged that the exor. cannot recover from the legatee, because the duty is the debt of both of them; but the contrary seems to result. The exor. stands in the situation of a surety, & his principal becomes liable to him for whatever he has paid (RICHARDSON, J.).—HALES v. FREEMAN (1819), 1 Brod. & Bing. 391; 4 Moore, C. P. 21; 129 E. It appeared that the original testator died in 1812, that the surviving exor. had never acted, except in signing documents; that he knew nothing of the estate of his testatrix, & that he had received no assets of hers, or of the original testator:—Held: the power given to the ct. by the above statute was discretionary, & the case was not one in which they ought to exercise it.—Re PIGOTT (1833), 1 Cr. & M. 827; 3 Tyr. 859; 2 L. (2) It is the duty of an exor. to deduct the amount of legacy duty on payment of the legacy; & if he omit to do so, he will become personally responsible for it.—Re SAMMON (1838), 3 M. & W. 381; 150 E. R. 1192.

The exor. only partially paid the legacy duties, & left various sums unpaid on both descriptions of annuities & legacies. The Comrs. of Stamps & Taxes claimed a lien upon the residuary estate of testator for the unpaid legacy duties in priority over the costs of the suit & the unpaid legacies:—Held: the exor. was personally a debtor to the Crown for the amount of legacy duty where he had deducted it, & where a payment had been made to the legatee without deduction, the legatee, as well as the exor., was liable with respect to the duty which the legatee ought to have seen paid, but the Crown had no claim upon the residuary fund.—*WRIGHT v. The exor. was a party to the assignment, to obviate all question as to the existence of debts of the cestui que trust, & the purchase-money was thereby expressed to be paid to him, but was in fact paid to the legatee by the purchaser:—Held: the exor. had no claim on the purchaser to be reimbursed the legacy duty which, after the happening of the contingency, he was compelled to pay on the full value of the share.—FARWELL v. SEALE (1849), 3 De G. & Sm. 359; 18 L. J. Ch. 189; 13 L. T. O. S. 23; 13 Jur. 483; 64 E. R. 515.

486. — Duty misappropriated by agent of executor.]—The exor. of a will, in every instance, made the half-yearly payments due to the tenant for life of the residuary estate through the solr. employed by him in the administration of the trusts of the will. The solr. having neglected to retain the legacy duty out of several such payments, applied to the tenant for life for a return of the amount of such duty. Having accordingly received the amount from the tenant for life, the solr., instead of paying the same to the Crown, retained it for his own purposes, & soon afterwards absconded. The exor. subsequently paid the said duty to the Crown:—Held: he was not entitled to retain out of the life interest of the tenant for life what he had so paid.—HORN v. COLEMAN (1856), 26 L. J. Where, therefore, a deed of release & indemnity to the exor. of a testator contained a recital to the effect that out of testator's residuary estate the exor. had retained the sum of £19 8s., being the amount of the legacy duty on the bequests contained in the will, & in fact the sum so mentioned was only part of such legacy duty:—Held: the exor., who was afterwards called on to pay the balance of the duty, was not precluded from recovering such amount from the estate of the residuary legatees under the covenant for indemnity in the deed.—*BROOKE v. The life interests were assigned by way of mtge., & part of the dividends were paid to the assignees during the wife's life. Upon the death of the wife an order was made for payment of the dividends to the assignees, but no provision was made for the payment of the duty on A.'s interest. On the death of A. this mistake was discovered. On the petition of the A.-G.:—Held: the assignees would be ordered to pay the duty & the costs of the application.

The solr. . . . knows that the ct. has no power to make an order paying away a legacy or the amount of a legacy or an annuity without first providing for the duty. That is what the legislature has imposed as a duty upon the ct. &, therefore, any solr. who makes himself ancillary to getting out money which is in truth a legacy, letting the ct. make the order in ignorance make it improperly not providing for the payment of the legacy duty is, I think, ancillary in enabling the ct. to commit an act of injustice & I think he is certainly highly to be reprehended (LORD CRANWORTH, C.).—*BRYAN v. 489. — Executor's right to be recouped by purchaser—Purchaser not liable for duty on other legacy to same legatee.]—A testator directed his estates to be sold, & gave the dividends of one portion of the proceeds to his wife, for life, & after her death he gave the capital to A. The second portion he gave to A., subject to various annuities. By an arrangement between the widow & A., the first portion was paid over by the exors. to A. during the widow's life, & no sum was retained to answer the legacy duty, which would become payable on the widow's death. A. sold the second portion to pltf., & the surviving exors. of the surviving exor. of testator joined in the assignment for the purpose of admitting A.'s title to the property, & stating that they knew of no incumbrance upon it. Upon the death of the annuitants, the purchaser filed a bill against the exors. for a transfer of the fund:—Held: debts. were not entitled to retain the legacy duty payable upon the first portion of the property.—BIGNOLD v. GILES (1858), 28 L. J. Ch. 238; 32 L. T. O. S. 218; 7 W. R. 99; subsequent proceedings, sub nom. A.-G. v. GILES (1860), 5 H. & N. 255.

490. — — — — —.]—A testator, who died in 1820, by his will directed his estate to be divided into two moieties, in one of which a sum of £4,300 £3 per cent. consols then standing in his name was to be included; & as to this moiety he directed that, after payment of certain debts, the surplus beyond the £4,300 consols should be invested in the funds in the names of his exors., in trust to pay the dividends thereon & also on the £4,300 consols to his wife for life; & upon her death he bequeathed this moiety to A., save & except the £4,300 consols, the dividends upon which, amounting to £129 a year, he directed to be paid to three annuitants of £20 a year each, & the remainder to a nephew during his life. He then bequeathed the annuities of £20 to three other annuitants, & after the decease of the survivor of them he bequeathed the £4,300 consols to A. absolutely. The exors. realised the property, & it was ascertained that £5,099 was the amount to be invested to make up, together with the £4,300 consols, the moiety of the dividends on which were to be paid to the wife for life. The exors. entered into an arrangement with the widow & A. & her husband by which the £5,099 was paid over to the latter, but no legacy duty was paid upon it. The widow died in May, 1835, & in May, 1837, A. sold & assigned to B. the £4,300 consols, subject to the annuities then in existence & legacy duty chargeable on A. in respect thereof:—Held:

his death select, & failing such selection by the widow, directed his executors to make the selection, with remainders over absolutely:—Held: the stamp duty on the bequest should be borne by the legatees.

Testator bequeathed pecuniary legacies to his executors in lieu of any remuneration which might otherwise be conferred upon them by the ct.:—

Held: the stamp duty on the legacies must be borne by the legatees.—WEBB v. WEBB (1900), 21 N. S. W. Eq. 245; 17 N. S. W. W. N. 188.—AUS.

492. Property not reduced into money—Valuation under 1796 Act, s. 22—Liability of executor where property undervalued.]—(1) By sect. 6 of above Act, legacy duty shall be paid by the person taking the burden of the execution of the will upon delivery or payment of the residue of any personal estate to the person entitled, & by sect. 22, where the residue shall consist of "property which shall not be reduced into money," the exor. may set a value thereon, & the Comrs. of Inland Revenue may accept duty upon that value. Shortly after the death of testatrix her exor. brought into the Inland Revenue Office the residuary account of her property, in which a value was set upon certain pictures & other personal property not reduced into money, & the Comrs. accepted duty upon that value. Subsequently, the residuary legatee & the exor. having always intended that the pictures should be sold in the course of the administration, the exor. sold them for a sum greatly in excess of the value upon which duty had been paid, & accounted to the residuary legatee for the proceeds:—Held: the provisions of sect. 22 apply to property which shall not be reduced into money during the course of the administration by the exor., & not merely to property which shall not have been reduced into money when the residuary account is brought in; the pictures, etc., therefore did not satisfy the description in sect. 22, & the Crown were entitled to duty under sect. 6 upon the amount paid to the legatee.

We read those words as meaning "which shall not be reduced into money during the administration" (POLLOCK, B.).

(2) In cases of specific legacies, & where the residue of any personal estate shall consist of property which shall not be reduced into money the exor. or the person by whom the duty ought to be paid, may set a value thereon, & offer to pay the duty according to such value, or may require the Comrs. to appoint a person to set a value, & the Comrs. may accept the duty offered upon the value set by the exors., or by the person by whom the duty is payable, without such appraisal if they think fit. If the Comrs. are not satisfied with the value so set they may appoint a person to appraise the effects & set a value, & assess the duty upon such value. Further, if the person by whom the duty is payable is not satisfied with the valuation made under the authority of the Comrs., he may cause the valuation so made to be reviewed by the Comrs. of Land Tax, who may appoint a person to appraise the effects & set a value thereon, & hear & determine the appeal (POLLOCK, B.).—*A.-G. v. 493. Settled articles not yielding income—Liability of trustees on resettlement.]—By 1796 Act, s. 14, no legacy duty shall be paid on articles or things not yielding any income, & given for the benefit of or to be enjoyed by different persons in succession, whilst the same shall be so enjoyed in kind only by persons not having any power of selling or disposing thereof so as to convert the same into money or other property yielding an income; but if the same shall come to any persons "having an absolute interest therein," then legacy duty shall be chargeable & paid thereon by those persons. By the will of the second Marquis of Ailesbury certain articles & things were directed to be enjoyed as heirlooms by the person or persons for the time being beneficially entitled to testator's mansion house under the limitations of existing settlements. At testator's death the mansion house stood limited, under those settlements, to the use of the third Marquis for life, with the remainder to the use of Viscount Savernake in tail male, with remainders over. Subsequently, by a resettlement made in the lifetime of the third Marquis, the estate tail in expectancy of Viscount Savernake was cut down to a life interest, with limitations over; & the heirlooms were assigned to trustees upon trust to allow them to go, devolve, & remain as heirlooms, together with the mansion house, according to the limitations of the resettlement. Viscount Savernake died, having survived the third Marquis:—Held: the trustees of the resettlement were persons "having an absolute interest" in the articles & things within sect. 14, & were, therefore, liable to pay legacy duty in respect of them.—*A.-G. v. By inadvertence the exors., two of whom were residuary legatees, paid this duty out of capital, & transferred the residue of the £20,000 to the special trustees:—Held: the error must be rectified, the sum paid as legacy duty, on all proper adjustments being made, being retained out of the future payments of income to M.—*Re AINSWORTH, FINCH v. He then directed all his legacies to be paid within two years after his decease, free of any deduction for tax or duty. 515. ——— "Foregoing legacies."]—Testatrix, having a power of appointment over her late brother's property, subject to the life interest of A., by her will gave some legacies "out of her own personal estate," payable immediately after her decease, & other legacies "out of her brother's estate," payable on the death of A. She directed the duty on all the foregoing legacies to be paid, & charged them on the real estate. 517. ——— Legacies "in addition to those already bequeathed."]—By her will testatrix gave a number of legacies & directed that "all the legacies & bequests given by this my will be paid & given free of all deduction for legacy or other duty." By codicil she said: "I give & bequeath the following legacies in addition to those named in my will." Then followed a number of legacies to legatees of the will & this legacy to a legatee not named in the will, & she added the words, "given in addition to those already bequeathed":—Held: the legacy to the legatee not named in the will was also free of duty.—Re SEALY, TOMKINS v. TUCKER (1901), 85 L. T. 451.

518. ——— Legacies given in trust in lieu of direct—Fresh beneficiaries added.]—A direction to pay legacies given by "this my will" free of duty does not apply prima facie to every legacy subsequently given by codicil; & though the direction applies to legacies given in substitution for those in the will, & to the same beneficiaries, yet where the codicil gives legacies in trust, in lieu of direct, & under the trust fresh beneficiaries are added, these trust legacies must bear their own duty.—*Re TRINDER, SHEPPARD v. 520. Direction to pay "above-mentioned sums" free of duty—Shares.]—Testator, after giving several pecuniary legacies to different persons, bequeathed two shares in a joint-stock co., stating that they were of the value of £250 each." He then directed that the legacy duty "on the several above-mentioned sums" should be paid & charged on his residuary personal estate:—Held: the words "above-mentioned sums" did not include the shares, but the legatees of those shares must pay the whole of the legacy duty upon them.—DAKERS v. LILBURN (1865), 12 L. T. 167; 11 Jur. N. S. 292; 13 W. R. 568, L. JJ.

—“All free of legacy duty.”]—In his holograph will, testator wrote along the margin opposite to legacies to servants these words, “All free of legacy duty.” There was no circumflex or mark to show where they were intended to be read:—Held: all the legacies given in the will, both those to relatives & those to servants, were free of legacy duty.—*KIRKPATRICK v. ### PART IV. SECT. 7, SUB-SECT. 2.—B.

k. What amounts to direction to pay free of duty—“Without deduction”—Effect of codicil substituting new legatee.]—Testator in her settlement directed her trustees “to pay over & deliver” certain legacies bequeathed by her “without any deduction or abatement whatever for legacy or succession-duty, or otherwise.” Among her legacies was one of all her silver-plate, furniture, etc. This legacy she recalled by a codicil in which she bequeathed them to other legatees.

The codicil contained this clause, “I hereby declare that these presents shall in no way infer a revocation of my said deed of settlement before written, but that the same shall stand in full force, with this alteration thereon. . . .”—Held: the clause of relief of legacy-duty applied to the altered bequest contained in the codicil.—M’ALPINE v. STODHOLME (1883), 10 R. (Ct. of Sess.) 837; 20 Sc. L. R. 551.—SCOT.

l. — Free of duty & other charges.]—Testator by his will, after a number of specific & pecuniary bequests & legacies & devises of real & personal estate declared that “all gifts devises & bequests made by me shall be free of stamp duty, which I direct shall be paid out of my general estate.” By a codicil the testator after revoking certain provisions in the will bequeathed three legacies “free of duty & other charges”:—Held: the legacies given by the codicil were free of the duty.—BUCHANAN v. RIDDLE (1920), 20 S. R. N. S. W. 544.—AUS.

She then gave some pecuniary legacies of small amount, & directed that all the legacies, & all legacies thereafter given, should be paid free from legacy duty:—Held: the exemption from legacy duty applied to the bequest of stock as well as to the pecuniary legacies.—*ANSLEY v. 535. ——— Specific legacy.]—Testatrix by a codicil to her will bequeathed to A. C., sixth Earl of E., & to his successors, all her plate, & also gave, devised, & bequeathed a leasehold house to him & "to his successors, & to be enjoyed with & to go with the title," & as to all her household furniture, paintings, books, china, & the whole contents of her house, she bequeathed the same to her trustees & exors. upon trust that they should in the first place "select & set aside a collection of the best paintings, statuary, & china for the Earl of E. & his successors, to be held & settled as heirlooms, & to go with the title," & she authorised them to give the Earl or his successors any articles of furniture which they should think fit, & as to all the rest & residue of the contents of her house upon trust for her trustees to select presents for her friends, & directed them to present any portion of the residue of the contents of her house to her cousins if they should think fit, or to sell the same, & the moneys so received to form part of her residuary personal estate, & she directed all the legacies left by her will & codicil to be paid free of legacy duty. Testatrix died possessed of considerable personal estate, which comprised amongst other things a number of articles of jewellery which were at her death in a box at her banker's, which jewellery had been bequeathed to her. It was proved that it had been the practice of testatrix, & also of the former owner, to send such box for safe custody to the bankers when they respectively were away from London:—Held. (1) the plate & leasehold house passed to the sixth

Earl absolutely; the words "to be enjoyed with & go with the title" not being sufficient in themselves to create an executory trust or to cut down the interest to a life estate; (2) the gift to the trustees of the whole contents of the house upon trust to "select & set aside a collection of the best paintings, statuary, & china, for the Earl of E. & his successors, to be held & settled as heirlooms & to go with the title" was a clear direction to settle & created an executory trust, & a settlement was directed giving a life interest to the sixth Earl with remainder to the next heir to the Earldom for his life; (3) the box of jewellery passed to the trustees as part of the contents of the house, that being the locality to which the property ought to be ascribed, although jewellery is merely for personal use & is not appropriated to a house; (4) under the words "all the legacies left by my will & codicil to be paid free of legacy duty" the legacy duty was to be paid out of the estate on all legacies as well pecuniary as specific, the word "paid" not being sufficient under the circumstances to cut down the direction to pecuniary legacies only.

(5) It is quite plain, having regard to sect. 19 of the Act, that the duty payable in respect of the leasehold house is succession duty & not legacy duty . . . Legacy duty is payable once & for all. . . . Succession duty is entirely different in its nature. . . . I should be straining words if I were to hold that in this codicil legacy duty included succession duty. I am clear it does not (CHITTY, J.).—Re JOHNSTON, COCKERELL v. ESSEX (EARL) (1884), 26 Ch. Therefore, the words “without deduction,” “clear of all deductions,” etc., may be sufficient to free the legacy from duty, although there be, from the nature of the property on which it is charged, other outgoings to which those words may be applied.

R., a clear yearly annuity of £100 during the remainder of her natural life.” Testator proceeded, “after payment of the annuity of £250 or £100 as the case may be, out of the net moneys to arise as aforesaid, upon trust to pay E. R. a clear yearly sum of £31 4s. 0d. free of legacy duty.” This was a summons taken out by the trustees for the determination of the question whether S. R.’s annuity was given free of legacy duty:—Held: the words “clear yearly annuity” properly mean an annuity free from legacy duty, & this meaning could not be cut down by the fact that in another case testator had added the words "free of legacy duty."—Re ROBINS, NELSON v. ROBINS (1888), 58 L. T. 382.

my will, which are now lapsed," bequeathed to her husband £20,000:—Held: the husband was not entitled to have the £20,000 paid to him free of legacy duty.—CHATTERIS v. YOUNG (1827), 2 Russ. 183; 38 E. R. 304, L. C.

"free of all succession, estate, & legacy duties" & continued: "I give to her also an annuity of £520 a year." Harrowby (Earl)*, No. 574, ante, that a legacy substituted for or added to a legacy given free of duty is itself freed from legacy duty was confined to cases where the character of each of the legacies is the same, & did not therefore apply to the present case, where one legacy was a specific legacy of chattels & the other a pecuniary one, the latter legacy not being an added legacy within the meaning of the rule applied in that case, & on the true construction of testator's will, the annuity was not bequeathed free of legacy duty.—*Re HOWE, WILKINSON v. 591. — — — Technicalities of English or Scotch real property law disregarded.]—The Dowager Lady S. executed a deed of entail, dated June 9, 1846, of certain estates in Inverness-shire in favour of her eldest son, Lord S., & the heirs of his body; whom failing, in favour of his nephew, her grandson, A., & the heirs of his body. Lord S. took as institute. He died without issue in Aug. 1853; whereupon the said A., now Lord S., took as nominatim substitute:—Held: (1) he was chargeable with duty at the rate of 1 per cent. only; (2) the grandmother, & not the uncle, was the predecessor within the above Act.

(3) In construing the statute on which his case depends we must bear in mind that it applies to the whole of the United Kingdom. . . . The technicalities of the laws of England & Scotland where they differ must be disregarded & the language of the Legislature must be taken in its popular sense (LORD CAMPBELL, C.).

(4) The rate of duty is to be regulated by considering who is the predecessor, & this may be determined by considering whether the succession is by "disposition" or by "devolution."

(5) In fixing the rate of duty to be paid by the successor the Legislature was perhaps influenced by a consideration of the probability he before had of enjoying the inheritance, & by a consideration of the probability of his being able to pay a heavier duty without hardship, if the property came to him from a distant relation or from a stranger. This object, I think, will best be obtained by holding that where the succession is by disposition the settlor is the predecessor, & where by devolution the last possessor is the predecessor (LORD CAMPBELL, C.).

(6) In the present case applt. is named & circumstantially described in the deed, he takes directly from the donor by virtue of the deed, & she unquestionably was the "settlor," "disponer," & "ancestor," from whom in one sense his interest in the estate was derived (LORD CAMPBELL, C.).

(7) I think that the position of the nominatim substitute in this deed of tailzir is precisely analogous to that of a person who in an English settlement is named as the remainderman in tail after a previous estate tail, & who . . . would be considered as taking by disposition from the author of the settlement, & not by devolution from the previous tenant in tail (LORD CHELMSFORD).—SALTOUN (LORD) v. ADVOCATE-GENERAL (1860), 3 Macq. 659; 3 L. ## SUB-SECT. 2.—SUCCESSIONS UNDER DISPOSITIONS.

A. Dispositions.

See 1853 Act, s. 2.

601. Extent of "dispositions"—Includes all modes—By will, deed, or settlement inter vivos.]—A.-G. v. FITZJOHN, No. 613, post.

602. ———.]—A., tenant for life of real property, & B., tenant in tail in remainder, executed a distailing deed & sold & conveyed the property to C. On C.'s death D., as C.'s devisee, became entitled in possession to the property & paid succession duty thereon. Then A. died & the Crown claimed succession duty from B. & D. as on a succession from A.:—Held: succession duty was payable by D., to be calculated on the life of D.

(1) A succession within the Act once established, no manipulation of the parties afterwards can get rid of it; & the observation is equally true whether there be one or two successions (LORD HALSBURY, C.).

(2) It is clear that the terms "disposition" & "devolution" must have been intended to comprehend & exhaust every conceivable mode by which property can pass, whether by act of parties or by act of law. . . . It is to be borne in mind that a "successor" must be beneficially entitled. When a person takes a succession he may not have actual possession. A husband, for instance, may have possession in right of his wife. . . . But a successor to be a true successor within the Act, must have the beneficial interest in the property subject to duty, whoever may have the actual possession or the right of management (LORD MACNAGHTEN).

(3) In many cases the purposes of the Act would be defeated unless you give to the term "disposition" the largest possible signification, not only so, but the Act shows on the face of it that the term "disposition" includes a sale (LORD MACNAGHTEN).

(4) He [the alienee of a succession] becomes a successor within the Act, though the succession conferred on him is not a new succession (LORD MACNAGHTEN).

(5) The cardinal fact to be borne in mind in the construction of sects. 14 & 15, is that in the case of real estate the successor, although entitled in fee simple, is charged only on an annuity commensurate with his personal enjoyment, i.e. in most cases for life (LORD DAVEY).

(6) I think that a new succession can only be conferred by a new disposition or devolution by law to take effect on death, & conversely every derivative title by reason of death confers a new succession under sect. 2 of the Act (LORD DAVEY).

"succession" being the same as English Succession Duty Act, 1853, s. 2, must be read in the sense affixed to the English Act by the English tribunals; & it does not include movables locally situated in Queensland which belonged to a testator whose domicile was in Victoria.—HARDING v. QUEENSLAND STAMPS COMRS., [1898] A.C. 769.—AUS.

PART V. SECT. 2, SUB-SECT. 2.—A.

(7) He became thereby in the position of a successor whose title in possession has been accelerated by the surrender or extinction of the prior interest, & apart from the provision at the end of sect. 15, would have been presently liable to pay the duty, but by that provision for the benefit of the successor the duty is made payable only at the same time, & in the same manner as such duty would have been payable if no acceleration had taken place. The words "in the same manner" are a little puzzling, but I think they mean that the Crown is not to lose the duty by reason of the estate of the successor having become an estate in possession or the limitations of the existing settlement being exhausted, & the duty is to be paid on the happening of the same event, as it would if there had been no surrender of the prior interest, although nothing passed & no title in possession was acquired on that event (LORD DAVEY).

(8) The "successor" means the person entitled to the succession at the date when it becomes an interest in possession. The applt. is in the position of such a successor, & . . . the duty should be assessed on the value of an annuity according to the tables for the residue of her life (LORD DAVEY).—*NORTHUMBERLAND (DUKE) v. By a subsequent deed he covenanted that he, or his exors. or administrators after his death, would transfer a further amount of Bank stock into the names of the trustees, & declared that they should stand possessed of it on the same trusts. After the death of the donor, his exors. transferred the stock & shares into the names of the trustees:—Held: the deeds showed a "disposition of property" within 1853 Act, s. 2, & the stock & shares so transferred were chargeable with succession duty.

As regards the statutory definitions, "money payable under an engagement" is expressly included in the term "property," the founder is clearly a "predecessor" & a trustee of the charity is equally clearly a "successor" according to the interpretation clause (MANISTY, J.).—A.-G. v.

607. — Sums payable under insurance policies—Effected under customs annuity & benevolent fund—56 Geo. 3, c. lxxiii.]—(1) By above Act it was enacted that a fund should be raised for the benefit of the widow & children or other relatives of officers of the Customs. A code of rules was drawn up, by which it was provided that the admission by the directors of a nominee of a subscriber should take place during the lifetime of such subscriber; & it was also provided that if an annuity were insured for the benefit of the widow equal to one-third of the insurance money, the subscriber should have power by any instrument, signed in the presence of two witnesses, & deposited with the directors, to direct that the whole capital money insured should be applied or paid in any manner or proportion he might think proper for the benefit of his nominee, who should have been duly admitted by the directors. In 1826 P. became a subscriber. In the same year one of his daughters was married, & by a deed, dated & executed in 1832, P. covenanted that upon his decease his daughter & her husband should take a share equal with his two other daughters of all the property, real & personal & of every other kind & description whatsoever which he P. should be seised or possessed of, or in any manner entitled to or interested in at his decease. The married daughter died in 1842, & in 1845 P., in consequence of a communication from the directors of the fund, by an instrument signed in the presence of two witnesses, directed that the whole of the insurance money forthcoming at his decease should be invested, & the interest paid for the benefit of his wife for her life, & then to be divided between his two surviving daughters. This latter instrument was deposited with the directors, but not the former. In 1847 the wife died, & in 1855 P. died. The two daughters of P. applied for the insurance money, upon which the husband of the deceased daughter claimed a third under the deed of covenant of 1832:—Held: the covenant of P. did not affect the particular fund in question, as it was not a part of his general estate, & that it must pass to the daughters who were nominees of the fund under a distinct instrument of nomination.

(2) P. declared that a sum of money should be divided between his two daughters in equal proportions, share & share alike, & in the event of either of his said daughters marrying & leaving issue, then her or their respective shares should go to her or their children respectively; & in case both his daughters should die without issue, then to his son C. If he, P., should survive his wife, which happened, he directed the whole sum to be paid to his said daughters or their children, if any, or to his said son C. in manner thereinbefore directed. C. was dead, & the two daughters were unmarried at the death of P.:—Held: the daughters in the events which had happened were entitled to the fund absolutely. An officer of the Customs & a subscriber to the fund, died unmarried & without children, having by his will given to his sister £498 13s. 1d., being the amount of the capital money forthcoming by virtue of his insurance in the Customs Fund, & placed at his disposal by the rules & regulations of the said fund:—Held: this was a disposition of "property" by testator, & conferred upon deft., entitled by reason of such disposition, a succession, within sect. 2 of 1853 Act. In H. & his eldest son W. J. executed a disentailing deed, & then resettled the estates to such uses as H. & W. J. should jointly appoint, in default to H. for life, remainder to such uses as W. remainder to the first & other sons of W. J. in tail male, remainder to the use of G. & E. (two brothers of W. J.) successively in tail male. No other appointment was made. H. died; W. J. entered, & died without issue. G. then entered, & by a deed executed in 1855 between G. & his eldest son E. G., the entail previously created was destroyed & the estates were conveyed to a trustee for such uses as G. & E. G. should jointly appoint, & in default, to the uses of the settlement of 1821. An appointment was afterwards made, to which G., E. G. & resp. F. were parties, by which the estates were settled to such uses as G. & E. G. should jointly appoint, & in default to trustees to pay an annuity of £800 to E. G. during the life of his father, then to G. for life, then to trustees to pay E. G. £4,000 a year, remainder to the use of E. G.'s sons successively in tail male. Under powers reserved to the existing tenant for life in the deed of 1821 & 1855, G. charged the estates with certain sums for the benefit of younger children. G. died, & the trusts then came into operation:—Held: (1) G.'s succession was liable to a payment of £3 per cent., his predecessor having been W. J.; (2) E. 626. — Distinguished from mere legal interest.—In 1803 certain estates were settled to the use of P. for life, with remainder to his first son in tail male. In May, 1826, P. & his first son suffered a recovery & conveyed the estates to the use of P. for life, with remainder to the use that the wife of P., in case she should survive him, should yearly receive during her life a rent of £1,000; with remainder to such uses & subject to such charges as P. & his son should appoint, & in default of appointment to the use of the son for life, with remainder to his first & other sons in tail male. In Dec. 1826, P. & his son, in execution of the power, appointed the estates to such uses & subject to such charges as they, during their joint lives, should appoint; & in default of appointment to the son for life, with remainders over. Subsequently P. & his son, in exercise of the power, mortgaged the estates for money lent to them, & for the repayment of which they jointly & severally covenanted. They also mortgaged the estate for a debt then due from P., & for the repayment of which he alone covenanted. They also charged the estates with an annuity of £500 for the grandson of P. during his life & the life of P. & his son, or the survivor:—Held: (1) on the death of P. his son was entitled on estimating the value of his succession, to an allowance in respect of the rentcharge of £1,000 during the life of the wife of P., inasmuch as she was chargeable with duty in respect of it; (2) the annuity of £500 to the grandson of P., & the mtge. debts, were incumbrances on the succession created by the son & not made in execution of a prior special power of appointment, within 1853 Act, s. 34, & consequently the son was not entitled to any allowance in respect of either of them.

Nor do I think we can regard the words “beneficial interest” in the second section as giving any assistance in deciding this case; I think these words mean beneficial as distinguished from mere legal interest (BRAMWELL, B.).—Re PEYTON (1861), 7 H. & N. 265; 31 L. 627. ——It is not necessary to say whether “beneficially interested” means “in possession.” With submission to the Master of the Rolls, I should have thought not. I should think they meant beneficially as distinguished from merely “legally” (BRAMWELL, B.).—A.-G. v. CHARLTON (1877), 2 Ex. D. 398; 46 L. J. Q. B. 750; 37 L. T. 211; 26 W. R. 154, C. The “beneficial interest” must be regarded as an interest to which the successor has become entitled in possession (LORD HARTHERLEY, C.).—LORD ADVOCATE v. STEVENSON (1869), L. R. 1 Sc. & Div. 411, H. L.

632. — Beneficiary providing benefit—Payment of insurance premiums.—(1) F. assigned in 1883 to his daughter policies of insurance on his own life on which he had for some years paid the premium. After the assignment until the death of F., the premium was paid solely by the daughter. In 1890, the father died, & the daughter received the money due under the policies:—Held: the daughter was liable to neither succession duty nor account duty in respect of the money so received.

(2) The person entitled ultimately to this money, herself in one sense created the property—that is, she continued the contract under which, if she continued to pay premiums, certain money would be payable on the death. She continued that for a period of seven years, & therefore, reading simply the words as they stand, I do not think she has “become beneficially entitled” upon the death of any person; because she has become entitled by reason, among other things, of her own payments during the period of seven years; & it appears to me, under that sect., in order to make this a “succession” we must introduce some words of this kind: “disposition of property by reason whereof either partly or wholly a person has become entitled.” . . . I find no such words in the statute, & I decline to do anything else than construe the words which I find there (LORD HALSBURY, C.).—LORD ADVOCATE v. FLEMING, [1897] A. C. 145; 66 L. J. P. use of his second & other sons, the eldest excepted, as he should appoint; & after his decease, & in default of appointment, unto the use of the second & other sons, the eldest excepted, in remainder successively, with remainders over, on certain conditions. If, at the end of 21 years, T. & I. should be living, then the accumulation to cease & the rents, during the joint lives of T. & I. should be paid, "to or for the benefit of the person or persons who for the time being, under the hereinbefore mentioned direction, would have been entitled to such rents, in case I. were then dead without issue by any other husband." Testator died before 1853 Act. T. & I. were both living. P. died six days before the expiration of 21 years, without appointing. Deft. performed conditions & became beneficially entitled, subject to the trust for accumulation for the remaining six days, & to the rents of the estate for the joint lives of T. & I. The Crown claimed succession duty from deft., as having become beneficially entitled to a succession upon the death of his father, after the interval between that death & the expiration of the term:—Held: deft. was liable to pay succession duty, inasmuch as on his father's death he became beneficially entitled, after an interval, to possession: & sect. 2 of the Act applied to cases where the title has accrued before the Act, but is made an interest in possession at once, or after an interval, upon a death occurring after the Act, so that the Act applied where the death was the occasion of the successor's being entitled to possession immediately, or after an interval.—*A.-G. v. He died a bachelor, leaving an heir at law, who died in 1865. Four co-heiresses of testator succeeded to the property in 1871:—Held: succession duty was payable.—RING v. JARMAN (1872), L. Interest in possession of deceased—Derived from different disposition—To one under which successor takes.—(1) In 1852 A., the tenant for life, & B., his nephew, & tenant in tail, entered into an arrangement, by which they barred the entail, & conveyed the property to such uses as they should jointly appoint, & subject thereto to the old uses. By a contemporaneous deed, in execution of the joint power, A. secured to B. a life annuity on the property, & B. secured £25,000, payable when he, B., came into possession. Of this, £20,000 was settled, contemporaneously, on A.'s daughters, & the remainder on A.:—Held: on the death of A., in 1855, succession duty under 1853 Act was payable on the £20,000 as a succession from A., but no succession duty was payable on the remaining £5,000.

(2) The case would be materially altered as to the rate of duty to be paid by petitioners, though it might not affect the rate of duty to be paid by

C. became tenant for life of certain freehold estates; with remainder to his first & other sons in tail male, remainder to G. for life; remainder to her first & other sons in tail male; remainder to J. C. for life, remainder to his son F. C. in tail male. On Dec. 3, 1850, W. C. & F. C. executed a disentailing deed & resettled the estates. By another deed of the same date F. C., for valuable consideration charged the settled estates with a sum of £20,000 for the use of W. C. payable with interest at the expiration of twelve calendar months from the day on which the limitations to W. C. & G. for their lives & their sons in tail male, or the last of such limitations, should fail. On Dec. 31, W. C., by a deed of settlement, assigned the £20,000 to trustees in trust as to £14,000 for his adopted son, & as to £6,000 for his adopted daughter. W. C. died in Feb. 1857, without legitimate issue; & G. died in Nov. 1857, without issue, whereupon the adopted children of W. C. became beneficially entitled to the £14,000 & £6,000:—Held: (1) the disposition of the £20,000 by the deed of settlement created a "succession" within 1853 Act, s. 2; (2) duty was payable at the rate of £10 per cent.—*A.-G. v. 647. Devolution — Interpretation.—A testator directed his property to be settled upon his daughter H. in such manner that in case of her death it should devolve upon her children, if she had any; & if she should not have any, then that she should bequeath it to any person she might think fit:—Held: (1) the word “devolve” imports transmission to children living at the death of the mother; (2) upon the death of the mother, her husband, as representative of a deceased child, took no interest under the will.

SUB-SECT. 4.—THE SUCCESSOR.

See 1853 Act, ss. 1, 2, 15.

652. Who is a “successor”—Person entitled to estate—At expiration of particular estate.]—That person is the “successor” within 1853 Act, ss. 2 & 17, in whom existed a title to property before the Act came into operation, but who, by an event occurring after the Act, became entitled thereto in possession. The true “successor,” in the sense of the individual liable to pay duty, is the person coming into the possession of the property upon the expiration, after the Act, by death or otherwise, of a particular intervening estate. The Act applies only to persons who, before the time of its passing, were, in law, entitled to a vested interest in the property, but could not enjoy it in possession until after the passing of the Act. 1853 Act, s. 15, does not impose any new duty upon the person taking by alienation, but, where reversionary property passes through a succession of persons, secures payment of the duty imposed by the previous sects., applicable to such a case. Personal property was, in July, 1829, settled on the proposed marriage of J. D., for herself & her intended husband, C., for their joint lives, & the life of the survivor, then to their children, with a power of appointment in J. D., the appointment to take effect after the death of J. D. & of her husband. In default of appointment, the property was, subject to the husband, C.’s, life estate, to be held on trust for such of J. D.’s next of kin as would be entitled if she had died unmarried & intestate. J. D. married C., but died childless, & without having exercised the power of appointment. About two months before

Mrs. C.’s death, her mother, Mrs. D., made a will giving all her property to Mrs. C. & her husband for their lives & the life of the survivor, then to their children, & in default, to her own brothers & sisters, & a nephew. This will was never altered; Mrs. C. died in Aug. 1831, & her mother, Mrs. D., then became, under the settlement of 1829, entitled to the reversionary interest in the settled property subject to C.’s life estate. Mrs. D. died in July, 1832. The Act came into operation in 1853. C. lived till 1868. The brothers & sisters & the nephew of Mrs. D. then became entitled in possession to the reversionary property bequeathed by her will:—Held: (1) there was no succession duty payable under sect. 2 in respect of the interest which vested in Mrs. D. on the death of her daughter; (2) her legatees were not liable to pay such duty; (3) under her will, they were liable for legacy duty under the Legacy Duty Acts; (4) being so liable, they were, under the concluding part of sect. 18 of the Act, relieved from any further payment under that Act.

The individual who, according to the terms of the disposition, would have taken upon the death of that tenant for life or tenant of a particular interest, that individual, although dying long before the time appointed for the commencement of the Act, is, in a certain limited sense, called a “successor,” because you may have to refer to that individual in the course of subsequently ascertaining the amount of succession duty. But the true successor, in the sense of the individual liable to pay the duty, is the person entitled upon the expiration, by death or otherwise, of the particular estate (LORD WESTBURY).—A.-G. v. LITTLEDALE (1871), L. R. 5 H. L. 290; 40 L. J. Ex. 241; 24 L. T. 921; 20 W. R. 473, H. L.

In 1849 A. mortgaged his equitable life interest to certain persons, & in 1852, B., having previously barred his equitable estate tail, mortgaged his equitable remainder in fee to the same persons, each mtge. being for a distinct sum, & containing the usual power of sale. Various transfers of the mtges. from father & son took place, in the course of which, subsequently to the passing of 1853 Act, the outstanding legal estate was got in. In 1863 the then mtgees., in exercise of their powers of sale, sold the entire estate by auction to C. in fee for a lump sum, but in conveyance to C. it was recited, as the fact was, that the purchase money had been duly apportioned between the life estate & remainder. C. then died, having by his will devised his estate to his nephew D. for life with remainders over, whereupon D. entered into possession & paid duty on his succession to his uncle at 3 per cent. to the full amount as on the fee simple. The trustees of C.'s will then sold the estate to a purchaser, who raised the objection that although the sale to C. was made under powers contained in mtges. existing before the passing of the Act, succession duty had nevertheless attached, & would become payable in respect of B.'s succession upon the death of A. who was then living. Upon a summons taken out by the vendors under Vendor & Purchaser Act, 1874 (c. 78), s. 9:—Held: (1) the mtges. of the life estate & remainder, though made to the same persons, were in all respects independent mtges., & at the passing of 1853 Act were not merged either at law or in equity; that the sale by the mtgees., under the powers in 1863 was to be regarded as a joint sale by the two interests, & could be supported only upon the principles applicable to joint sales of two trust properties by two sets of trustees; & accordingly, inasmuch as a higher price was clearly obtainable by selling the fee simple in possession rather than the life estate & remainder separately, & as the purchase-money had been duly apportioned between the two interests, the sale was a proper exercise of the powers; (2) at the date of the 1853 Act, A. & B. were respectively entitled in equity as tenant for life & remainderman in fee, subject only to money charges on their respective estates, & therefore, B. was then entitled to a "succession" within sect. 2 of the Act, & since the mtgees. sold, in effect, as the agents of A. & B., C., as purchaser from them, took B.'s succession by "alienation not conferring a new succession" within sect. 15, & became liable to duty accordingly; (3) as a "new succession" had been created by C., duty then became payable on that succession only, & therefore, the full amount having been paid by D. on his taking under such new succession, the estate was discharged from all further duty on A.'s death.

(4) "By alienation or by any title not conferring a new succession," in sect. 15 of 1853 Act, means, "either by alienation or by any title other than alienation, in both cases not conferring a new succession."

(5) Settlement after 1853 Act: A. tenant for life; B. remainderman in fee. A. & B. conveyed their estates for money to C. in fee. C. died, having devised to D. in fee. D. paid duty on his succession from C., & then sold:—Held: on A.'s death no more succession duty would be payable than had already been paid by D.

(6) [Sect. 15] obviously means relinquishing a benefit, not meaning the life interest which has just expired & therefore cannot be dealt with, but some existing thing which otherwise the successor would be entitled to (JESSEL, M.R.).

(7) All new successions take place either by death, devolution, or alienation (JESSEL, M.R.).

(8) In the case of succession to real estate the object of the Act is to let the last succession prevail; but as regards personal estate, it is enacted that the highest duty shall be paid; & therefore, the section [s. 14] was put in for the purpose of fixing the last succession with the highest duty which would have been payable by any of the previous successors (JESSEL, M.R.).

(9) The moment there is a new succession created, & that succession comes first, that new succession appears to me itself to fix the time, & that the time for the payment of the duty shall be the time of the opening or coming into effect of the new succession (JESSEL, M.R.).

(10) The purchaser will still have a remedy, which I have not forgotten, against the vendor at a future time, in case he is called upon to pay the duty (JESSEL, M.R.).—Re COOPER & ALLEN'S CONTRACT FOR SALE TO HARLECH (1876), 4 Ch. 660. — — —.]—A peer bequeathed his residuary personal estate in trust for his wife for life & after her death in trust for the person who should then be his right heir absolutely. After his death five nieces became his co-heiresses, & applt., a nephew, succeeded to the title. In order to make provision for the title a deed of family arrangement was executed whereby testator's widow assigned her interest in bank shares, part of testator's residuary estate, & the co-heiresses & applt. respectively assigned their contingent reversionary interests in the residue, to trustees in trust by clause 1 during the widow's life to pay out of the income of the bank shares an annuity of £15,000 to applt. & other annuities to the co-heiresses; & by clause 2 after the widow's death to pay out of the income of the whole residue an annuity of £15,000 to the person for the time being holding the title, with other payments to the co-heiresses & provisions for keeping up the title. The widow died & the co-heiresses paid legacy duty at 3 per cent. on the whole residue. The Crown having claimed succession duty at 6½ per cent. from applt. in respect of his annuity under clause 2 of the deed:—Held: (1) the Ct. of Appeal was right in holding that the annuity was not payable under "a contract made for valuable consideration in money or money's worth" within 1853 Act, s. 17; & (2) wrong in holding that the deed created a new succession; the case fell under sect. 15 & was one of "alienation" of part of the succession created by testator's will, whereby the duty payable in respect of the annuity was at the same rate & time as would have been payable if the annuity had not been created; but as legacy duty had been paid upon the whole residue out of which the annuity was carved, sect. 18 applied & no succession duty would have been payable by the co-heiresses if the annuity had not been created, & therefore the effect of sects. 15 & 18 together was that no succession duty was payable by applt. in respect of the annuity.

(3) The succession once created the duty must be paid for it; but I can find no warrant in the statute for a new succession duty being leviable upon the same property or money where no new death has created the right to such succession (LORD HALSBURY, C.).

(4) I take it to be equally clear that the suc-wives & their children:—Held: as the marriages were valid according to the Pondo law & were contracted prior to the annexation of Pondoland, & as the beneficiaries were resident in Pondoland, for the purposes of payment of succession duty C.'s marriages should be treated as lawful & valid & cession came into existence as soon as testator died, & that its creation was not postponed until the death of the tenant for life (LORD HERSCHELL).

(5) I am unable to find in the Act, any warrant for the view that a succession once created can, by the act of the successor, cease to exist, & another succession be substituted for it (LORD HERSCHELL).

(6) A succession might by operation of law become vested in some other person, as, for example, an assignee in bkpcy., which would be a title not creating a new succession. But I can see nothing either in the terms of the sect. or in the reason of the thing to suggest that an alienation by instrument inter vivos, which merely transferred the interest of the successor or some part of it to some other person, would create a new succession (LORD HERSCHELL).—WOLVERTON v. 662. When “new succession” arises—Transferor & remainderman—Dying in lifetime of tenant for life.]—On Feb. 2, 1821, by a marriage settlement, certain family estates were settled on the late Marquis of S. as tenant for life, with remainder to his first & other sons in tail. On Mar. 10, 1855, by a disentailing deed, the marquis & his eldest son, Lord C., barred the entail & resettled the property to the joint appointment of themselves &, subject thereto, to the uses of the settlement of 1821. On Mar. 27, 1857 the marquis & Lord C. appointed, by deed, certain of the settled estates to a trustee for 1,000 years after the death of the marquis, upon trust to raise thereout £20,000 for Lord E. (deft.) the third son of the marquis, in case he survived his father; &, by a subsequent deed of further appointment, dated Aug. 20, 1860 the £20,000 was directed to be raised, & paid to deft., whether he survived his father the marquis, or not. In 1866 Lord C. died, on Apr. 12, 1868, the marquis died, & deft. became entitled in possession to the £20,000 which he received.

The Crown, therefore, claimed succession duty from deft. on the £20,000 at 3 per cent., as upon a succession derived from his brother Lord C.; deft., on the other hand, contending that a duty of 1 per cent. only was payable thereon, inasmuch as it formed part of Lord C.’s old succession, & became vested in deft. “by a title not conferring a new succession” within the second branch of sect. 15 of 1853 Act, & that so only the duty to which the original successor would have been liable was chargeable upon deft.:—Held: by the operation of the deeds of 1855 & 1857 a “new succession” in which Lord C. was the “predecessor” & his brother, deft., was the “successor” was created, &, as deft., therefore took by a title conferring a new succession the case was not within the exception in the second branch of sect. 15 & duty at 3 per cent. was accordingly payable by deft., under sect. 2 upon a succession derived from Lord C. his brother.—A.-G. v. The tenant for life & tenant in tail executed a disentailing deed & resettled the estate, the settlement providing for the payment of a jointure rentcharge to the widow of the tenant for life. The tenant for life died in Sept., 1914, whereupon his son became entitled in possession but he died in Oct., 1914, before the first instalment of succession duty became payable. The Crown now claimed succession duty at the rate of 10 per cent. on the value of the jointure rentcharge, being the rate at which duty would have been payable by the son if the rentcharges had not been vested in the jointress:—Held: the jointress took, not by way of alienation within 1853 Act, s. 15, but under a new succession, the son being the predecessor, & the rate of duty was to be determined upon that footing.—A.-G. v. It was further recited that it was agreed between all the parties to the deed that certain persons, as trustees, should stand possessed of the sum upon trust for the father until the intended marriage should be solemnised; & if not solemnised before a certain day therein named to transfer the same to the father, & from & after the solemnisation of the marriage upon trust to pay the income to the husband for life, & from & after his decease to pay the income to the wife, should she survive the husband, with the usual trust over for the children. A. survived B., & on her death the £5,000 was applied towards discharging incumbrances upon the settled lands:—Held: A. was predecessor of D. within Succession Duty Act, 1853, & that duty at 10 per cent. was payable by D. in respect of his succession to this sum.—A.-G. P. as predecessor, a special verdict was found, which stated that J. P. died intestate leaving W. P., his brother; & A. S. the wife of J. H. S., claimed to be a daughter of a sister of J. P. That by indenture, reciting that letters of administration had been granted to W. P. & in order to obviate any doubts or differences which might arise touching any share which J. H. S. or A. S. might be entitled to in the personal effects of J. P., W. P. had proposed & agreed on having a general release from J. H. S. & A. S. to transfer £30,000 to be settled upon trusts for J. H. S. & A. S. & the children of their marriage, to which proposal J. H. S. & A. S. had consented & agreed; that the sum of £30,000 had been directed to be transferred to trustees by W. P., & that J. H. S. & A. S. had that day executed a general release to W. P. of all claims against him as administrator of J. P. or otherwise; it was declared that B. & O. should stand possessed of the £30,000 in trust to pay the interest to J. H. S. for life, & after his death to A. S. for her life & after the death of the survivor, if there should be an only child in trust for such child, & if there should be two or more children in trust for such children in such shares as J. Attorney-General, No. 699, post, is to be applied whether the power be joint or sole, & the appointees must be held to derive their interest from the donor of the power as "predecessor," & not from the donee. Testator died before the coming into operation of 1853 Act, & legacy duty at 1 per cent. was paid upon the whole absolute interest of the trust fund. After that Act came into operation the daughter, by deed, appointed the trust fund to her sister's daughters:—Held: (1) as owing to the date of the testator's death sect. 4 did not apply, the appointees derived their interest from their grandfather, testator, as predecessor, within sect. 2, & not from their aunt, the appointor, & succession duty was therefore payable on their succession at the death of the appointor at 1 & not at 3 per cent.; (2) the payment of legacy duty under 1786 Act, did not exempt the appointees from succession duty, since their succession did not come within the exemption granted by 1853 Act, s. 18, to persons already charged with legacy duty "in respect of the same acquisition of the same property."

1853 Act, s. 18, exempts a person who has already paid legacy duty from paying succession duty in respect of "the same acquisition of the same property." Both testator's nephew & his wife were strangers in blood to the testator's widow:—Held: under 1853 Act, s. 4, the nephew's wife took the annuity as a succession from testator's widow, & not from the testator himself, & therefore a duty of 10 per cent. was payable:—Seemle: the result would have been the same under sect. 2.—*A.-G. v. On Mar. 22, 1848, C. & deft., his eldest son, executed a disentailing deed whereby they limited the estate to such uses as they should jointly appoint, & in default of such appointment to the uses declared by the will of testator. On the same day C. & deft. executed another disentailing deed of estates devised to them by another testator & also limited them to such uses as they should jointly appoint. On Mar. 23, 1848, C. & deft. executed a joint appointment, whereby, after reciting the two disentailing deeds, & certain arrangements made in respect of incumbrances with other stipulations, they appointed the estates in L. to the use that deft. might receive thereout the yearly sum of £1,000 during the joint lives of himself & C., & subject thereto to the use of C. for life in restoration, corroboration, & confirmation of his previous life estate, & after his decease to the use of deft. for life, & after his decease to the use of his eldest son for life, with remainder in tail male. In the year 1855 C. died:—Held: (1) deft. took a succession under a disposition made by himself, within 1853 Act, s. 12, & was therefore chargeable with duty at the rate of 3 per cent.; (2) deft. was not entitled under s. 38 to any allowance in respect of the £1,000 a year, which ceased on the death of C.—*A.-G. v. 694. ———.]—(1) A tenant in tail in remainder cannot vary the amount of his liability to succession duty by barring the entail, & resettling the estate in his own favour. The person from whom he derives the estate is his "predecessor."

Devise in 1796 of certain freehold estates to A. for life, remainder to his eldest son B. for life, remainder to the first & other sons of B. in tail male. In 1841, A. being then tenant for life in possession, A. & B. executed a disentailing deed, to which two other persons were parties as trustees, & granted to the trustees, to hold, subject to the life estate of A., to such uses as A. & B. should appoint, & in default, if B. should survive, to such uses as he should appoint, & in default to B. for life, & to his first & other sons in tail male. In 1850, by another deed which recited the former, & by which A. brought new estates into settlement, & discharged all the estates from a charge of £10,000, & B. gave up advantages to which he was entitled, an annuity to B. during the life of A. was charged upon all the premises, & subject thereto, they were appointed to A. for life, remainder to B. for life, remainder to the use of his first & other sons in tail male:—Held: (2) these deeds must be taken as having been executed on the same day; (3) they constituted within sect. 12 of 1853 Act (c. 51), a disposition made by B. in favour of himself, & made out of the estate to which he was entitled under the will of 1796; (4) his "succession" must be treated as happening under that will, & he was liable thereupon to the amount of duty chargeable in respect of his succession to testator, on a disposition made under it by himself; (5) the nature of the consideration upon which the disposition was made did not affect the question.

(6) The annuity, according to the terms of its creation, ceased on the death of A., at which time B. entered into possession of the estates:—Held: (7) he was entitled under sect. 38 of the above Act to an allowance as on account of property of which he had been deprived.

(8) The above Act is not to be construed according to the technicalities of the law of England or Scotland, but according to the popular use of the language employed.

I must further remark, that although the Act only came into operation on May 19, 1853, the liability to duty on subsequent successions depends upon the operation of wills & deeds made & executed previously, as if they had been made & executed subsequently (LORD CAMPBELL, C.).

In the present case we must consider under what disposition the succession did take place. A new disposition having been made, creating quite different interests in the estates from those created by the will, testator can no longer be considered the predecessor (LORD CAMPBELL, C.).—*BRAYBROOKE (LORD) v. 697. ———— Remainderman predeceasing tenant for life.]—A., being seised of certain estates in fee simple by a marriage settlement executed in 1812, conveyed them to the use of himself for life, remainder to the use of his sons in tail male successively. A. had three sons, E., P., & F. In 1840 A. & his eldest son, E., executed a disentailing deed, & conveyed the estates to such uses as they should appoint, & in default, to the uses of the settlement of 1812. In the same year A. & E., on the intended marriage of E., appointed to the use of A. for life, remainder to E. for life, remainder, subject to certain provisions for the intended wife & the younger children, to the first & other sons of the marriage successively in tail male, remainder to P., & F. successively in tail male. E. died in his father's lifetime, without issue. A. & P. then conveyed the estates to such uses as they should appoint, & in default to the existing uses. They afterwards appointed to A. for life, remainder to P. for life, remainder to his first & other sons in tail male, with an ultimate remainder to A. & his heirs. P. died without issue. A. then died, & F. succeeded to the estate:—Held: F. was liable to a duty of £3 per cent., as on a succession derived from his elder brother.—A.-G. v. SMYTHE (1862), 9 H. L. Cas. 497; 31 L. J. J., a father, tenant for life of an estate, & his eldest son, W., tenant in tail, resettled the estate, the son becoming tenant for life, remainder in tail, reserving to themselves a power of appointment, & in default, giving the power to appoint to the father & T., the second son, who was thereby made tenant for life, remainder in tail. W. died unmarried, & without having appointed, & the father and T. appointed. The persons taking the succession under such appointment, take it as a succession from W., the eldest son, the donor of the power, from whose estate the benefit is derived, & not from the father & T., the second son, who exercised the power.

(2) The case does not fall within the first portion of 1853 Act, s. 4.

The words of sect. 4 apply to the case of one person possessing a general power to dispose of property as an absolute owner, & not to a power given in a family settlement to a father & son, where one is intended to be a check upon the other in the exercise of the power (LORD CAIRNS, C.).

The first branch of sect. 4 points to an absolute power, practically equivalent to property (LORD SELBORNE).

(3) A general power in a family settlement, which cannot be exercised without the concurrence of two minds, is not equivalent to a joint property in the two donees. (4) The case is not to be treated as an alienation within 1853 Act, s. 15.—CHARLTON v. A.-G. (1879), 4 App. Cas. 427; 49 L. J. Q. B. 86; 40 L. T. 760; 27 W. R. 921, H. L.; affg. S. ### C. Under Devolution by Law.

700. Estate in fee simple—Last owner the predecessor—Irrrespective of how such ownership acquired.]—By a will, dated in Nov., 1799, L. gave to trustees £10,000, Consols, & certain other sums, upon trust that they should lay out both principal & interest in the purchase of land, to be conveyed to the use of C., his eldest son, for life; remainder to trustees, to preserve, etc.; remainder to the first & other sons of C. & the heirs male of their bodies successively in tail male, & in default of such issue to the use of J., another son of testator, for life, with similar remainders; remainder to testator's own right heirs.

Testator died on Apr. 8, 1800, leaving his two sons, C. & J., & one daughter, S., him surviving. The moneys directed to be laid out in land were never so laid out, & C. during his life received the dividends upon the whole "real estate fund." In 1840 he died a bachelor & intestate, whereupon the dividends were paid to J. up to May, 1857, when he also died a bachelor & intestate. S. then became the only lineal descendant & heir-at-law of testator. She died in Apr., 1866, unmarried & intestate, having refused during her lifetime to receive either dividends or principal of the money left under her father's will. Shortly afterwards, the "real estate fund" was paid into the Ct. of Ch. in an administration suit, & eventually was directed to be paid out to petitioner, who was a grandson of a brother of testator, & heir-at-law of S.

The Comrs. of Inland Revenue required petitioner to pay succession duty on the "real estate fund" at the rate of 5 per cent. under 1853 Act, s. 10, on the ground of the same being a succession to him derived from S., as the "predecessor." On appeal against this assessment:—Held: duty was not payable under 1853 Act, but under Legacy Duty Act (c. 52).

Semble: under whichever Act duty was payable, the amount charged by the Comrs. was correct, C., J., & S. having all died after 1815 Act came into force.

If this fund had been really land, then, as S. was absolutely entitled or seised in fee, it would not matter how she became so, & the succession to petitioner would be by devolution, & not by disposition (CLEASBY, B.).—Re DE LANCEY (1869), L. R. 4 Exch. 345; 21 L. T. 58; sub nom. DE

701. Estate tail—Maker of disposition the predecessor—If successor be named in the entail.]—SALTOUN (LORD) v. ADVOCATE-GENERAL, No. 591, ante.

702. ————.]—(1) Sect. 2 of 1853 Act distinguishes succession by disposition from succession by devolution of law; & the rate of duty is to be regulated by the propinquity of the successor to the predecessor. The predecessor may be determined by considering whether the succession is by disposition or by devolution of law. Substitute heirs of entail not called nominatim, nor coming under a descriptive designation as the head of a new stirps, will be held to take by devolution of law, & not by disposition, & the predecessor in the sense of the above Act will be the last possessor. Under two entails executed by his lineal ancestors, the Earl of Z. succeeded his uncle as heir substitute to estates in Scotland:—Held: the uncle was the “predecessor” of the Earl within the above Act, & as taking by devolution of law he was liable to duty at the rate of 3 per cent.

(2) The Act was so framed as to embrace estates both in Scotland & in England, notwithstanding the great differences between the tenure of property in the two countries, & therefore a construction must be found which would sustain the Act as applying either to an English or a Scottish estate (LORD HATHERLEY).

(3) Although all the persons specifically named in the deed would take the property in the first instance by virtue of the gift, & by virtue of that gift alone, those who derived any title by operation of law upon the death of a predecessor, would be held to be persons who would have, whatever might be the consequence of it, to pay, not as claiming a succession under the authority of the deed, but as claiming by operation of law an interest in the property conveyed by the deed, which interest would be pointed out by the law & by the law alone (LORD HATHERLEY).

(4) In the case of an appointment by selection, the legislature has very properly considered that the real author from whom the beneficiary takes his succession is the person who has given such limited power of selection to another (LORD HATHERLEY).

(5) Devolution by law takes place whenever the title is such that an heir takes under it by descent from an ancestor, according to the rules of law applicable to the descent of heritable estates; & in all cases of descent the estate of the successor is immediately derived from the ancestor from whom the estate descends (LORD SELBORNE).

(6) The estate comes to the next taker as much by descent (or devolution by law) from an heir in tail who cannot alienate, as from one who could do so by the use of means, which he has not, in fact, used (LORD SELBORNE).

(7) The “predecessor” in cases of “disposition” or purchase, is the “settlor, disposer, testator, or obligor,” from whom the interest of the successor is derived; in cases of “devolution by law” or descent, he is the “ancestor” from whom the interest of the successor is derived (LORD SELBORNE).

(8) The word “ancestor” is properly assignable to the person who really preceded in the estate, although that person may not be the progenitor of the successor (LORD HATHERLEY).—ZETLAND (EARL) v. LORD ADVOCATE (1878), 3 App. Cas. 505; 38 L. T. 297; 26 W. R. 725, H. L.

A. succeeded, on the death of the settlor without issue, in 1829 & died in 1838, leaving a son, B., who succeeded him as heir male of his body. B. died in 1910 without heirs male, but leaving a daughter, applt., who succeeded him in the estate:—Held: (1) on the exhaustion of the heirs male of the body, the destination of the property was to a new class of heirs to be ascertained by reference to the deed of entail; & applt. took the succession, not by devolution by law from her father, but by reason of the disposition of the original settlor, & was liable to succession duty on that footing; (2) the term “succession” in 1909–10 Act, s. 58, bore the same meaning as in 1853 Act, namely, a succession in respect of which duty was chargeable; & applt.’s succession was the first succession under the disposition within s. 58; & applt. was liable to succession duty at the rate of 10 per cent.—HAMILTON v. 706. ———— Premiums paid by other than donee.]—In contemplation of a marriage it was agreed by the prospective parties & an uncle of the intended wife that the intended husband should effect a policy of insurance on his life in his own name & settle it as hereinafter mentioned, & that the uncle should pay the premiums during the joint lives of the husband & wife. The intended husband accordingly effected the policy, & the uncle paid the first annual premium. By the marriage settlement, which was made in 1853, the husband assigned the policy & the moneys payable thereunder to trustees upon trust for himself until the marriage, & thereafter upon trust for the intended wife for life for her separate use, & after her death for the husband for life, & after the death of the survivor of them upon certain trusts for the children absolutely; & the uncle thereby covenanted that if the marriage should take place he & his legal representatives would during the joint lives of the husband & wife pay the annual premiums; & the husband covenanted that, after the death of the wife if she died before him, as long as any child of the marriage or any person claiming under such child should be living, he would pay the premiums. The marriage took place shortly after the execution of the settlement. The husband died in 1917, survived by his wife & by issue of the marriage. All the premiums on the policy were paid by the uncle or his exors. down to the death of the husband, when the policy moneys were paid to deft. as trustee of the settlement on behalf of the beneficiaries. The Crown claimed that on the death of the husband succession duty became payable by deft. in respect of the policy moneys as on a succession from the uncle, by virtue of the disposition made by the settlement:—Held: the interest in the policy moneys of the persons entitled under the settlement was derived from the uncle as "predecessor" within sect. 2 of 1853 Act, & deft. as trustee was liable to the Crown for the duty claimed.—A.-G. v. PUBLIC TRUSTEE, [1920] 3 K. B. 675; 90 L. J. K. B. 251; 124 L. T. 249; 36 T. L. R. 877.

708. ——— Annuity.]—Conveyance, by two separate deeds, of certain Govt. annuities, & also a sum of £16,000 consols, to trustees, on trust to pay the annuities & the current income arising from the consols to B. for the period of four years from the date of the respective deeds, if he should so long live, & then immediately from & after the expiration of such period, or the death of B., whichever event should first happen, on trust to pay the same as directed to certain of his nieces. B. died before the expiration of the period of four years:—Held: succession duty at 3 per cent. was payable under 1853 Act, s. 2, not on the amount of income accruing between the death of B. & the expiration of the period of four years, but in respect of the entire annuities & the whole amount of £16,000 consols.

The principle underlying the whole statute appears to be that, when a person comes into possession of property on a death, the beneficial interest in it which then accrues to him, or the increase of benefit which then accrues to him, is the whole property which he so comes into possession of, & not the difference in value between that property & the value of any estate or interest he may have had in it before he came into possession of it (LINDLEY, J.).

The words [of sect. 5] I take to mean, that when a person is in possession of property, if any other estate or charge upon the property comes to an end by reason of death, the increase of income is to be charged (JESSEL, M.R.).—A.-G. v. NOYES (1881), 8 Q. B. D. 125; 51 L. J. Q. B. 135; 45 L. T. 520; 30 W. R. 434, C. A.

710. ——— Not acceleration within 1853 Act, s. 15.]—(1) Under a marriage settlement a fund was vested in trustees in trust for the wife for life, with remainder to the husband for life, with remainder, in default of issue, to the wife absolutely, if she survived the intended coverture. There was no issue of the marriage, & the wife survived the husband:—Held: upon the death of the husband a succession was taken by the wife, in respect of which succession duty was then payable on the amount of the fund, less the value of her life interest therein.

(2) The wife's title to the succession was not accelerated by the death of the husband though the possession was (LINDLEY, L.J.).

(3) Considering the fact that the wife really only got on the husband's death the difference between the value of the fund & the life interest she previously had, sect. 38 [of above Act] applies to the case, not by way of indulgence, as suggested, but in terms (LORD ESHER, M.R.).

(4) We must consider whether, upon his death, she got under the settlement something which she previously had not got, & if so, what it was. She then lost her life interest, & she got what she had not before, viz. the whole property in the fund, & power to dispose of it as she liked then & there. That appears to me to be a succession within the Act (LINDLEY, L.J.).

(5) Upon a careful consideration of the words of the sect. [15], on the true reading of it, there is no acceleration of a succession, within its meaning, where the succession comes to the successor at the moment at which it was intended by the settlement to come to him. The words of the sect. refer to something outside the settlement, which has caused the acceleration of the succession by causing it to take effect before the time intended by the parties by whom the settlement was made (LOPES, L.J.).—A.-G. v. They were also to pay an annuity to the trustor's widow during her life. Before the debt was paid off the trustees & the heir entitled to possession of the lands, entered into an arrangement, by which a portion of the purchased lands was to be conveyed to the latter, he undertaking to pay the annuity to the trustor's widow. By subsequent agreement between the trustees & the heir, the whole of the purchased lands were conveyed to him, he paying the remainder of the trust debt out of his private funds. The annuity having lapsed by the death of the widow:—Held: by the annuitant's death an increase of benefit accrued to the heir of entail in possession; this constituted a succession.—LORD ADVOCATE v. abroad—To trustees in England—Property in England & abroad.]—In 1892 a foreigner domiciled in Austria gave by a deed in the English language & form to an English co., constituted under Cos. Acts, & having its registered office in London, certain stocks, shares, & securities to a large amount upon the terms & conditions that the co. would permit the donor to receive the income thereof during his life, & after his death, would apply the same, & any investments substituted for them under the powers of the deed, for the benefit of Russian Jews generally, & principally for the promotion of the emigration of Russian Jews from Europe, & of their settlement in various countries outside Europe. The co. had been formed to carry out the same objects, & at the time of the execution of the deed the various securities comprised therein were transferred to the co. by the donor. The whole of the co.'s business was, under the arts. of assocn., transacted by a council which sat at the principal office of the co. in Paris. The ordinary & extraordinary general meetings of the co. were held at their registered office in London, but formal business only was transacted there. In 1896 the donor, who was still domiciled in Austria, died. At that time the principal part of the securities subject to the deed were foreign securities situate abroad, & the documents of title thereto were abroad, a small proportion only of the property subject to the deed being in England:—Held: there was on the death of the donor a succession by the co. within 1853 Act, s. 2, & therefore succession duty under that Act, & consequently, estate duty under 1894 Act, were payable upon the principal value of all the property which was subject to the trusts of the deed of 1892 at the donor's death.

We begin the discussion then with the property in the hands of an English trustee, & it seems to me that the presumption is that it is English, & the burden lies on those who say it is not (COLLINS, L.J.).

Whether, therefore, the test be that applts. become entitled to the succession by virtue of English law, as stated by Lord Cranworth in Wallace v. Attorney-General, No. 413, ante, or that the intention that the property is to be brought under the protection of the English law must be gathered from all the circumstances, or, what is probably only another way of arriving at the same result, that the property in question must have an English character stamped upon it, I think the succession here falls within the Act, as interpreted & limited by the decisions referred to in the argument. I think the principle at the bottom of these tests is really the same, & whether we arrive at the conclusion that it has become English property because an indelible incident of English property is stamped upon it, namely, that the rights thereto shall be ascertained by English law, or conclude that, being English, it is therefore subject to our law, the result is the same, & in either view it is quite immaterial where the property is physically situated, & such I think is the effect of the authorities (COLLINS, L.J.).—A.-G. v. The will contained no gift over either of the income or of the corpus upon the death either of the last surviving annuitant or of the last surviving person entitled to the surplus income. The trustees were authorised by the will to work the tea estate until it was sold, & also to postpone the sale & conversion of any part of the estate as long as they might think it desirable, & it was thereby provided that in the meantime the annual produce of the unconverted part should be applied in the same manner as if it were income arising from the proceeds of conversion. The trustees were resident in England, & the will was proved in England. The trustees, in the exercise of their discretion, postponed the sale of the tea estate, & while it remained unsold two of the persons entitled to shares of the surplus income died:—Held: the amount by which the survivors' shares of the surplus income was increased upon the deaths of the said two persons was not, even so far as that increase was attributable to the profits of the tea estate, property situate out of the United Kingdom, & succession duty, estate duty, & settlement estate duty were payable in respect of the increase so attributable.

But where the exor. directed to collect foreign property & invest it here, has discharged the duty imposed on him, & has placed the fund, in the way required, in this country, any subsequent devolution of it becomes liable to duty, though the party on whom it may devolve may, like the testator, be domiciled abroad. A. was domiciled in Portugal, but on a visit to this country made his will in the English form, & appointed exors., some of whom resided in England. He desired his exors. to collect his property, which was in Portugal, to convert it into cash, pay certain legacies, & invest the residue in the English 3 per cents., to appropriate what they should think necessary to pay a life annuity of £50 to his sister, on the termination of which the appropriated fund was to revert to & form part of his residuary estate, & be divided, like the rest, among his three children. The exors. exactly performed the directions of the trust; when the sister died the part appropriated to satisfy her annuity became divisible among the children:—Held: this constituted a succession within 1853 Act, s. 2, & was liable to the payment of succession duty.

In 1846 he came to England & was admitted at Caius College, Cambridge, & graduated in 1850. In the interval he visited Scotland for a few weeks. He was ordained & held a cure in England for a short time. He then went to the United States & was a professor in Virginia, & afterwards in Kentucky. In the meantime he re-visited New Brunswick. In 1854 he became a professor in Ohio. He remained away from England about 6 years. In 1856 he resided a short time at Cambridge. In 1863 he ceased to be a member of the college. From 1856 until 1864, with the exception of a few months' visit to Rouen, he resided at various places in England, where he undertook temporary duty as a clergyman on several occasions, but had no other occupation. In 1864 he again went to the United States, but in consequence of the continuance of the civil war, he returned to England the following year. In 1865 he had a paralytic stroke, & subsequently travelled to various places in England for the sake of his health. In the summer of 1869, his health having become worse, he went to reside at Ventnor, where he died in the following December. The testator made his will shortly before his death, & after giving a few pecuniary legacies to persons resident in America, he bequeathed the residue of his property, which consisted solely of personal estate, to English trustees upon trust to invest the same, & apply the income in payment of an annuity to his housekeeper for her life, & the balance for the maintenance of her daughter, pltf. in the suit, with an ultimate trust of the entire capital in favour of pltf. During the period from testator's return to England until his death he wrote various letters expressing his preference for the American climate & people, & his intention of returning to America to spend the remainder of his life:—Held: the testator was domiciled in New Brunswick, & therefore the legacy duty was not payable, but succession duty would become payable in respect of the trust fund to the extent of the increase of benefit which would accrue to pltf. on the death of the annuitant.—*THOMPSON v. The mere fact of a person beneficially entitled under a settlement being a foreigner is not sufficient to exempt him from payment of succession duty.

By an English settlement executed in England on the marriage, in 1838, of an English lady with a domiciled Italian, the lady assigned certain property belonging to her consisting of French Rentes, shares in the Bank of France, & English govt. securities, to four trustees, of whom one was an Italian & the other three were English, upon trusts, after the death of the survivor of the husband & wife, for the children of the marriage. The settlement contained provisions usually inserted in English settlements, including a power for the trustees to reinvest in British or French securities. From the date of the marriage until their deaths the husband & wife resided in Italy. The Italian trustee having died, an English trustee was appointed in his place. The husband survived the wife & died in 1877, leaving two children, the only issue of the marriage, the several trust funds being then in the names of four English trustees. Both the children being domiciled Italians, the question arose whether, under 1853 Act, duty was payable on their succession to their father in respect of the French Rentes & bank shares:—Held: succession duty was payable, inasmuch as the settlement was a British settlement, the trustees or persons having the legal ownership were subject to British jurisdiction, & the forum for deciding any claim by the children in respect of the trust funds was a British Ct.—Re CIGALA'S SETTLEMENT TRUSTS (1878), 7 Ch. (2) It was urged that the power of appointment ought to be regarded as a superadded work of disposition of the property which is subject to the power. There may be cases in which such a view may properly be taken, & I have no wish to pre-judge them; but the power in this case appears to me to be of a wholly different kind, & to have been intended to enable the donees to create estates which could not possibly be derived from those vested in them in default of appointment (STIRLING, L.J.).

(3) The execution of the power could not have the effect of accelerating the succession created by the settlement, since its effect was to annul & defeat that succession altogether & substitute for it the estate created by the execution of the power. . . . For the same reason there was no acceleration by virtue of the surrender or extinction of any prior interest. The execution of the power no doubt extinguished the life interest of [the father] under the settlement. But it equally extinguished the succession under that disposition; & the estate given to [the son] by the execution of the power was not only an estate given by a different title . . . but was in itself a different interest (COLLINS, M.R.).—*A.-G. v. Nor is the release by the lady of a bare possibility of future dower or freebench a sufficient consideration to exempt the jointure from duty.

r. Succession Duty Act, 1853, s. 17—Scope of the section—Settlement in consideration of marriage.]—A settlement in consideration of marriage & money or money's worth is not within the exemption in Succession Duty Act, 1853, s. 17.—A.-G. FOR IRELAND v. RATHDONNELL, [1896] W. N. 141.—*IR.

s. ————.]—A lady on her husband's death became entitled

& satisfaction of dower & thirds, a yearly rent-charge of £800, to be issuing thereout, without any deduction or abatement whatsoever on account of or in respect of any taxes, charges, impositions or assessments already taxed, charged, assessed or imposed, or thereafter to be taxed, charged, assessed or imposed on the hereditaments, or on the annual rentcharge or on N., or her assigns, in respect thereof, by authority of Parliament, or otherwise howsoever. The marriage took effect, & B. died after the passing of the Act, in the lifetime of N.:—Held: (1) the jointure was a "succession" within sect. 2 of the Act, & (2) it was not exempted from duty by sect. 17 of the Act; as between N. & the estates charged with the jointure, she was entitled to receive it free from succession duty.

(3) In framing the Act the word "succession" was adopted for the purpose of denoting any property passing, upon death, from one person to another, by virtue of any gift or descent, or of any contract, not being a bond fide contract of purchase or loan. Money or property, the right to receive or possess which might arise upon death, under a contract made bond fide in return for other money or property, was not, as between the contracting parties, to be treated as a succession. But it was not intended to exempt property arising upon death under contracts for valuable consideration generally (LORD WESTBURY, C.).

(4) A contract to be excepted must be bond fide made in consideration of money or money's worth, words which appear to have been selected for the purpose of excluding the consideration of marriage (LORD WESTBURY, C.).

(5) The essential requisites of a contract which is not to create a succession, are clearly defined by sect. 17. First, it must be a contract by one person to pay money or money's worth to another; secondly, it must be made bond fide for a valuable consideration existing in money or money's worth, the contract creating personal liability between the contracting parties; &, thirdly, such a contract is prevented from creating a succession only as between the contracting parties, for all that sect. 17 does, is to declare that there shall be no relation of predecessor & successor between the person bound to pay, & the person entitled to receive.—FLOYER v. BANKES (1863), 3 De G. J. & Sm. 306; 3 New Rep. 16; 33 L. J. Ch. 1; 9 L. T. 353; 27 J. P. 743; 9 Jur. N. S. 1255; 12 W. R. 28; 46 E. R. 654, L. C.

—.]—A conveyance or assignment by way of bond fide sale does not create a succession within 1853 Act. Where the purchaser of a reversionary life interest in settled property had contracted to sell it to D., the tenant for life in possession, in consideration of a sum of money paid down & a further sum payable on the death of D., secured by a charge on the reversion:—Held: (1) there was no "succession" created within the meaning of sect. 2 of the Act, & no duty would be payable on the death of D. in respect of the said charge.

(2) If we look at the whole scope of the Act to payment of an annuity of £3,000 provided to her by her husband's father in her ante-nuptial contract of marriage. She claimed exemption on the ground that the annuity had been granted for a valuable consideration set forth in the marriage contract, viz. (1) the settlement by her father of £10,000 upon the spouses & children of the marriage, & (2) her renunciation of jus relictas & terce:—Held: (1) the provision by the lady's father was not

& its meaning generally, it does appear to me, unless I find very distinct words in the Act to say it applied to an ordinary case of purchase out & out, that is not a transfer of existing successions, when of course there are provisions that the purchaser shall be in the same position as the vendor, that I should be going against what I conceive to be the purview of the whole of the Act, to say that a conveyance or assignment on bond fide sale was within it at all. Therefore I approach the Act with the impression that it is not intended to impose a new tax on alienations (JESSEL, M.R.).

(3) It is a very odd thing that those words [of sect. 2, 1853 Act] do not say "in possession." That is what the Act means, "By reason whereof any person has, or shall become beneficially entitled to any property in possession," but it does not say so. A man becomes beneficially entitled to property in one sense undoubtedly before he gets into possession. But the Act obviously means possession; & it says "the term 'succession' shall denote the person so entitled, & the term 'predecessor' shall denote a settlor, disposer, testator, obligor, ancestor, or other person from whom the interest of the successor is or shall be devised" (JESSEL, M.R.).

(4) There is a series of decisions which seems to confirm the view I take of the Act, that is to say, cases where a disposition was made by the purchaser on a purchase. The question arose who was the predecessor? & it was held that if a man bought for valuable consideration, either money or money's worth, &, instead of taking a conveyance to himself direct, took a conveyance by way of settlement on himself & others in succession that he was a settlor, that is, that the title was derived from the purchaser & not from the vendor (JESSEL, M.R.).

(5) I must read the words "policy of insurance" there [sect. 17 of 1853 Act], to mean a policy of insurance effected in the ordinary way in consideration of a premium or premiums. If that is so, that is a contract no doubt for money. It is a purchase of a reversionary sum in consideration of a present payment of money, or as is generally the case, on the payment of an annuity during the life of the person insuring. It is clearly a contract which could not fairly be described, as I read it, as a disposition of property at all, because a mere covenant to pay money is not a disposition of property in the ordinary sense (JESSEL, M.R.).

(6) The object of sect. 7 is plain enough. It is to prevent a man conveying the fee, reserving himself a life interest. It excepts a bond fide sale, & of course the argument was, if all bond fide sales are excepted, why were the words "not being a bond fide sale" put in? I am unable to say why. I cannot read those words to mean anything more than that any attempt gratuitously to reserve a life interest to the original owner shall be deemed to create a succession (JESSEL, M.R.).—FRYER v. MORLAND (1876), 3 Ch. D. 675; 45 L. J. Ch. 817; 35 L. T. 458; 41 J. P. 86; 25 W. R. 21.

756. 1853 Act, s. 17—Scope of the section—Not confined to relation between debtor & creditor.]—

(1) The words of the above sect. apply to all contracts, & exempt them from duty; & the funds of a tontine becoming divisible are within that sect., so that the Crown is not entitled to duty; such division, however, would not affect any devolution or disposition after the commencement of the Act.

(2) In the case of a father who had subscribed for one share in the tontine in the names of his three infant children, two of whom died before the Act came into operation, the ct. decided that there was no succession at all in the surviving child, who took in his own right only that which had been given to him before the Act came into operation.

(3) The above sect. is not confined to cases where the relation of debtor & creditor exists between the parties, but extends to every case of a contract bond fide for valuable consideration in money or money's worth for the payment of money or money's worth after the death of another person.

(4) No duty can attach in respect of what arises simply & merely from the contract; & that this was what was intended by the legislature is more plain when it is observed that express provision is made for the duty attaching upon any disposition or devolution of the moneys payable under the contract, thus pointedly marking the distinction between the disposition created by the contract & the disposition of moneys payable under the contract (TURNER, L.J.).—OLDFIELD v. By sect. 58 (1) of 1909-10 Act, the 5 per cent. was raised to 10 per cent., but by sect. 58 (4) of the latter Act, "This sect. shall take effect . . . in the case of a succession arising under a disposition only if the first succession under the disposition arises on or after" April 30, 1909.

Testator, who was beneficially entitled to certain lands in fee, subject to the life interest of his mother, gave them by his will to his mother for life & to his first cousin in fee. The gift of a life interest to testator's mother was admittedly ineffective as to the property, since she already held it for her life. Testator died in 1900, & his mother died in 1910:—Held: succession duty on the succession of resp. was payable only at the rate of 5 per cent., since the resp.'s succession

In 1870 W. died, & afterwards, in 1872, T., the tenant for life, died, whereupon defts. became seised in fee in possession. W. was a first cousin of testatrix, & had he succeeded to the enjoyment of the property, would have been liable under 1853 Act to succession duty at the rate of £5 per cent., calculated in the usual way, under sect. 21, on "the annual value of the property." The Crown claimed duty from defts. at the same rate, £5 per cent., under sect. 15, as W. would have paid had he been living & had not alienated, but calculated, under sect. 27, as defts. were a corporate body, "upon the principal value" of the property. the property," at the same rate, namely, £5 per cent., under sect. 15, as W. would have been liable to pay had he survived the tenant for life without alienating the estate; (2) the words in sect. 15, "as if no such alienation had been made," might be read as equivalent to "as if the alienee had succeeded & paid the duty"; (3) by sect. 2, every person becoming, by reason of any disposition of property, entitled to any beneficial interest after the death of another, had conferred upon him a "succession," that is, property liable to succession duty; (4) though the title to the succession dated from the disposition, & there was never any title to the property free from the duty, yet the duty was not payable until the taker under the disposition came to the actual enjoyment of the property; (5) if the interest taken under the disposition came to an end before the enjoyment commenced, the liability to duty would cease, & the duty never become payable; (6) the amount of the duty must be calculated upon the enjoyment of the property which the person actually taking is expected to have, e.g. in the case of a person taking in fee, the calculation is made upon the probable duration of his life, & is payable by eight instalments. But in the case of a corpn. taking in fee, though the duty is still payable by instalments, yet, as there can be no further succession, the amount is calculated upon the principal value of the property; (7) a person who had had a "succession" conferred upon him could not by parting with it prevent it from being a "succession," that is, prevent it from being property liable to the duty. It would continue a "succession," & would be, when the proper time came, a "succession," enjoyed in possession, into whatever hands it should have come.

(8) It is not an unreasonable construction that the time of the alienation should fix the rate, because from that time the alienor has no connection with the property & his history is unimportant (CLEASBY, B.).

(9) The Crown, at all events, have made out a prima facie case to be paid the duty which would be paid by the alienor, & if events have happened by which the duty would be less, defts. must prove them (CLEASBY, B.).—SOLICITOR-GENERAL v. LAW REVERSIONARY INTEREST SOCIETY (1873), L. 798. — Value of whole property succeeded to Increase of benefit.]—A.-G. v. NOYES, No. 708, ante.

799. When value ascertainable—When interest of successor accrues.]—(1) The value of property for the purposes of the succession duty, under 1853 Act, is to be ascertained at the time when the interest of the successor accrues. If the property has then no saleable value, nor any actual or potential annual value, it is not capable of being assessed. Neither possible increase or diminution in the value of the property after the succession accrued was dealt with by the Legislature.

(2) No system of assessment or charge can be adopted which draws into the calculation of value a prospective or future benefit. When therefore A. succeeded to land which, as alleged by the successor, & admitted in the information, had not for some years before the predecessor's death produced any annual income, & did not produce any, annual or otherwise, to the successor, but of which he afterwards sold part:—Held: he was not liable to duty under the provisions of the statute in respect of the part sold.

(3) There may be successions which at the time of accruer neither yield, nor are capable of yielding in their existing state any annual income, but yet are saleable & would fetch in the market considerable sums; & in such cases I incline to think that the property which forms the succession, not being excepted from the operation of the Act, which is the case with unopened mines, timber & advowsons, has an annual value within the meaning of the Act, namely a value equal to interest at three per cent. on the sum that might have been realised if the property had been sold at the time of the accruing of the succession; & that the successor cannot baffle the statute by postponing a sale until a future period (LORD WESTBURY, C.).

(4) The calculation of the succession duty is to be on successions according to their value by sect. 10, & is to be calculated, by sect. 21, at the value of an annuity equal to the annual value of the property, & is to be payable from the date of the successor becoming entitled thereto in possession in eight equal half-yearly instalments, the first to be paid twelve months next after the successor has become entitled to the beneficial enjoyment of the real property. (5) The beneficial enjoyment means no more than in his own right, & for his own benefit, not as trustee for another (LORD WENSLEYDALE).

(1) income tax or (2) the agent's charges for collecting rents.

(3) The term "annual value of land" is not a term of art, but means in common parlance the rack rent or the value of the gross produce of the land, minus all payments, expenses, interest, labour & charges on the land, or on the tenant. This has been the mode in which it has been treated in legislation, & in the construction of Acts of Parliament (WATSON, B.).

(4) "Necessary outgoings" would appear to be permanent charges made on the occupiers of the land or falling entirely on the land, such as repairs, poor rates, highway, sewer, & county rates, town rates, drainage rates & the like (WATSON, B.).—Re ELWES (1858), 3 H. & N. 719; 28 L. 817. — Intrinsicly necessary.]—In estimating the value of a succession to lands the legal estate in which is vested by will in trustees, the cestui que trust is not entitled to deduct as "necessary outgoings" reasonable expenses of management incurred, independently of his control, by the trustees acting under an authority given to them by the will.

Testator devised real estate to trustees upon trust out of the rents to pay the interest on certain mortgage debts, & also certain annuities, & to pay the surplus to a cestui que trust for life, with remainder over. Power was given by the will to the trustees to pay certain sums to agents or receivers for collecting the rents:—Held: in estimating the value of the succession of the cestui que trust no allowance was to be made for these payments for collection.

It ["all necessary outgoings"] means, not all such outgoings as the predecessor may have thought fit to expend, & which, therefore, in that sense are "necessary," but all such as are intrinsicly necessary—such outgoings as it was not in the option of the predecessor to expend or not as he pleased (BRAMWELL, B.).—Re COWLEY (EARL) (1866), L. 1871. The father & son thereupon executed a disposition of the entailed estates, & the father's interest therein ceased. But inasmuch as the estate could not be disentailed until applt. attained the age of twenty-five years, it was further agreed that when applt. attained that age the estates should be disentailed. This was done in 1875. Applt. also undertook to raise a large sum of money on the estates to pay off the debts of the Earl of Buchan. In 1898 the late Earl of Buchan died, some years after he had ceased to be owner of the entailed estates. The Crown claimed succession duty under 1853 Act, ss. 2, 15, founding their claim on the ground that under the original deed of entail of 1864 applt. had an expectant right of succession, & this right would open to him by devolution on the death of the late Earl of Buchan, his father, & the transaction above referred to, by which there was a propulsiion of the estates to the next heir, namely, applt., was an acceleration of the succession:—Held: succession duty was payable by applt. under 1853 Act, s. 15, on the ground that he had a title to the succession capable of being "accelerated," & that title had been accelerated by the surrender or extinction of the father's prior interest.—*BUCHAN (EARL) v. The covenantor did not pay any part of the £10,000 in his lifetime, but after his death his exor. paid to the trustees the full sum of £10,000. The Crown claimed succession duty from the trustees, who paid it, & claimed repayment from the exor. on the ground that the £10,000 was to be paid free from all deductions. Both parties agreed that the fund was liable to succession duty, & argued the case on that footing:—Held: (1) if the duty was payable it must be borne by the fund, for the relation between the trustees & the exor. was simply that of creditors

& debtor; (2) the exor. was not liable to be called on by the Crown for the duty; (3) when he had paid the £10,000 in full to the trustees, he had discharged his testator's obligation, & was not concerned with the question whether succession duty was payable.

(2) By sect. 32 of 1853 Act personal property settled upon different persons in succession is to be treated for the purposes of the Act as if it were bequeathed by the predecessor to the successor. In 1882 a disentailing assurance was executed by which one undivided third part of the freehold lands of which C. was the first equitable tenant in tail was disentailed & conveyed to such uses as W. & C. should jointly appoint, & by a deed of resettlement made on the following day the lands were under the joint power contained in the disentailing assurance conveyed to such uses as they should jointly appoint. In 1883 & 1884, £35,425 was, in pursuance of an order made in a suit for the administration of testator's estate, paid by the then trustees of the will & codicil to W., the proportion attributable to proceeds of sales of real estate subject to the will & codicil being £7,081. Between 1898 & the death of W., which took place in 1904, W. & C., in exercise of the joint power of appointment vested in them by the resettlement, appointed to themselves investments & cash attributable to the proceeds of real estate amounting in the aggregate to £26,718. Succession duty in respect of C.'s succession had not been paid on either the £7,081 or the £26,718:—Held: (1) the order of the ct. under which the trustees paid the £7,081 did not protect them from liability for succession duty in respect of that sum ; (2) upon the death of W., succession duty became payable in respect of C.'s succession on £33,799 (the aggregate of the sums of £7,081 & £26,718), & the trustees or their personal representatives were liable for the duty in respect of so much of those sums as was paid by the trustees respectively or to the payment of which they were parties.—*A.-G. v. A contract was entered into for the purchase of freehold ground rents secured on house property by a lease for 61 years expiring in 1938 subject to a condition entitling the vendors to rescind if the purchaser should insist on any requisition which the vendors should be unable or, on the ground of difficulty, delay, or expense, or any other reasonable ground, unwilling to comply with. The title to the property, which was of small value, disclosed that a claim for succession duty thereon would arise on the determination of the lease if the vendors, whose ages would then be 98, 97, & 92 years respectively, were then living. The purchaser required the vendors to discharge that claim, which the latter declined to do on the ground that the contingency was too remote for calculation & that the amount must be very small, but offered an indemnity, &, failing acceptance of that offer, gave notice to rescind without prejudice. The purchaser took out a summons for a declaration that the vendors were liable to discharge the succession duty. There was no evidence showing either any inability of the vendors to discharge the claim for the duty, or the existence of any ground of difficulty, delay, or expense, or other reasonable ground for their refusal to do so:—Held: the vendors were bound to discharge the claim for the duty.—Re WESTON & THOMAS'S CONTRACT, [1907] 1 Ch. 244; 76 L. ## SECT. 9.—REPAYMENT OF OVERPAID DUTY.

See 1853 Act, ss. 37, 40.

Succession Duty Act express power is given to the High ct. to deal with the costs ; where the trustees of an estate had paid, or were ready to pay, all the duty which could properly be claimed against it, they were held entitled against the Crown to the costs of a special case & an action by the A.-G. to recover higher duties ; but only one set of costs was allowed to the trustees & beneficiaries.—A.-G. v. TORONTO GENERAL TRUSTS CORPN. (1903), 23 C. L. T. 194 ; 5 O. L. R. 607 ; 1 O. W. R. 807 ; 2 O. W. R. 271.—CAN.

*t. —.]—*In an appeal from a judge's decision on an application under Succession Duty Act, s. 43, to fix the succession duty taxable on an estate, the ct. has no power to order costs against the Crown, as the Crown applies.—Re VAN HORNE ESTATE (No. 2), [1919] 3 W. W. R. 598 ; 47 D. L. R. 529.—CAN.

*a. Jurisdiction of surrogate registrar.]—*When the provincial treasurer & the parties interested do not agree as to the succession duty payable, the question must be settled by the tribunal appointed by the Act, namely, the surrogate registrar, with the right of appeal given by the Act. The high ct. has no jurisdiction to decide the question in a stated case.—A.-G. v. CAMERON (1899), 26 A. R. 103.—CAN.

*b. Fund in court—Succession duty—Priority of claim for.]—*An extrix named in the will of deceased who died domiciled in Saskatchewan brought action on demand notes given to deceased by deft., a co. incorporated in Alberta, & carrying on business there only. The action was brought in Alberta, & before probate was obtained either in Saskatchewan or Alberta. Deft. did not deny the debt, but questioned pltf.'s right to receive money which it paid into ct. Probate was issued in Saskatchewan after defence was filed, but there was never any ancillary probate in Alberta. An order of the Master giving pltf. leave to enter judgment & costs of suit, except of application for judgment, was varied as to costs & debt. given costs of appeal ; the judgment to stand in favour of pltf. for the moneys in ct. without costs, but no payment out to be made until a judge is satisfied that the Treasury Department has no claim for succession duties.—TORGUSON v. WAYNE SUPPLY CO., LTD., [1916] 2 W. W. R. 875.—CAN.

PART V. SECT. 9.

*c. By executors—Duty paid in ignorance of claims against estate.]—*Where exors., erroneously & in ignorance of the existence of claims, overvalued the estate & paid succession duty for which the estate would not have been liable had the amount of such claims been deducted therefrom, they were held entitled to recover back from the Crown the amount of the duty wrongly paid.—Ross v. R. (1900), 32 O. R. 143 ; affd. 1 O. L. R. 487.—CAN.

*d. ——— Annuity—Duty payable in instalments.]—*Testator gave an annuity to Mrs. A. The exors. paid the whole of the succession duty at once & obtained a release thereof. Mrs. A. died before receiving 4 annual instalments, & the exors. brought an action against the provincial treasurer to recover under Succession Duty Act, s. 11, the amount of succession duty paid in excess to what would have been required had they paid according to annual payments:—Held: petitioners could not recover.—*BETHUNE v. 867. Whether duty merged in estate duty—Effect of 1894 Act.]—WINANS v. A.-G., No. 1, ante.

868. Definition.]—Probate duty in England is a stamp duty payable upon the value of the property the subject of the probate at the time it is granted.—BELL v. MASTER IN EQUITY OF THE SUPREME COURT OF VICTORIA (1877), 2 App. Cas. 560; 36 L. T. 936, P. C.

869. Where title of personal representative in issue—Duty must be paid to cover sum to be recovered.]—If an administrator shows that he sues for a greater value than is covered by the ad valorem stamp of his letters of administration, he shows his administration to be void, & cannot recover, although he sues for a doubtful claim; he must prove his administration, for that constitutes his title to recover, & it will not suffice to sue out new letters of administration on a larger stamp after he has obtained judgment.—HUNT v. STEVENS (1810), 3 Taunt. 113; 128 E. R. 46.

870. ——— Effect of subsequent payment of duty.]—A. sued out a commission of bkpt. against B. upon a debt due to him as exor., but the probate of the will had an insufficient stamp. Afterwards, however, a sufficient stamp being affixed:—Held: it was sufficient to support the petitioning creditor's debt, in an action by the assignees.

Numberless instances have occurred in which a party has been nonsuited, because the deed, under which he claimed a right of action, has had an insufficient stamp; but it has never been contended that, after a valid stamp has been put upon it, he has not had, by retrospection, a good right of action (GIBBS, L.C.J.).—ROGERS v. JAMES (1816), 7 Taunt. 147; 2 Marsh. 425; 129 E. R. 59.

871. ———.]—A pltf. sued to recover a large unliquidated sum due to her testatrix, but the stamp on the probate did not cover the amount claimed:—Held: pltf. could not obtain a decree even for accounts & inquiries, until the probate had been properly stamped. The cause stood over, & the comrs. stamped the probate & gave credit for the duty.—HOWARD v. PRINCE (1847), 10 Beav. 312; 9 L. T. O. S. 350; 50 E. R. 602.

872. ———.]—Semble: a party suing as exor. or administrator cannot sustain proceedings to recover a larger sum than that upon which the probate duty is calculated.—JONES v. HOWELLS (1843), 2 Hare, 342; 12 L. J. Ch. 365; 67 E. R. 141; affd. (1845), 15 L. J. Ch. 115, L. C.

873. ———.]—A.-G. v. BRUNNING, No. 876, post.

874. Property of uncertain value—Depending on result of action—Probate to two executors in different amounts.]—One of two exors. proved the will, swearing the property, the amount of which depended on the result of a pending suit in Chancery, under a certain amount, & paid the duty thereon. The other exor. was allowed to take probate, swearing the property under a smaller amount.—In the Goods of BELL (1871), L. R. 2 P. & D. 247; 40 L. J. P. & M. 67; 25 L. T. 163; 36 J. P. 376.

875. Insufficiency of stamp—Effect on validity of probate.]—Probate having been granted it justified the exors. in administering the whole estate & the insufficiency of the stamp, if proved, would not affect its validity, though, whilst insufficiently stamped, its admissibility in evidence might be affected (HAWKINS, J.).—A.-G. v. SMITH, [1892] 2 Q. B. 289; 66 L. T. 857; 56 J. P. 758; 40 W. R. 671; 8 T. L. R. 626; 36 Sol. Jo. 557; affd., [1893] 1 Q. B. 239, C. A.

PART VI. SECT. 1.

e. Property of uncertain value—Interim assessment—Agreement for final adjustment.]—J. T. died intestate, & pltf. were appointed administrators. The deceased's estate consisted largely of station properties & it was found impossible to value it satisfactorily in accordance with Succession & Probate Duties Act, 1892. An interim assessment was then made, & duty was paid on that basis, it being agreed that a final adjustment should be made after the whole estate in Queensland had been realised. The estate having realised less than the estimated value, pltf. sued for a refund:—Held: the making of this agreement was within the express powers of the Commissioners under Succession & Probate Duties Act, 1892, s. 39; & within the general powers of the govt.—QUEENSLAND TRUSTEES, LTD. v. FOWLES (1910), 12 C. L. R. 111.—AUS.

f. ———.]—A brother, in 1880, made a deed of gift of real & personal property to his two sisters, subject to a power reserved to him to revoke the gift at any time, wholly or in part, by deed or will. In 1888, whilst the brother was still alive, one of the sisters made a deed of gift to the other of all her interest in the gift from the brother. The brother subsequently died without having revoked his gift:—Held: as the value of the interest made over by the one sister to the other in 1888 was incapable of estimation, the deed of gift from the one to the other was not liable to duty under Deceased Persons' Estates Duties Acts, 1881 & 1885.—Re DAVONPORT TO RANDALL (1898), 17 N. of the estate & effects of testator & are liable to probate duty.

A., the owner of an estate, entered into a contract for the sale of it. Part of the purchase-money was paid as in his lifetime. The contract contained stipulations to the effect that certain alterations might be made in the formal agreement drawn up on the original contract, & as the purchaser was a ward of ct., that the contract should be void if not approved by the Lord Chancellor. There were also articles as to the contract being rescinded through the act of the parties on the non-payment of the purchase money, etc. Some alterations were made in the original contract; testator had a good title; he died; & after his death the formal approval of the contract was given by the Ct. of Ch.:—Held: the purchase-money was to be deemed part of the "estate & effects" of testator within 1815 Act, sched., part 3, & was liable to probate duty.

A stamped probate or letters of administration to cover the sum to be recovered, is always necessary where the title of the exor. or administrator is put in issue (LORD WENSLEYDALE).

The sum to be recovered in case of death by negligence [under Fatal Accidents Act, 1846 (c. 93)], certainly would not be subject to probate duty, for it is not made part of the estate of the deceased (LORD CAMPBELL, C.).

Mtge. money now recovered by an exor., by the aid of a ct. of equity, would certainly be assets & liable to probate duty (LORD CAMPBELL, C.).—A.-G. v. BRUNNING (1860), 8 H. L. Cas. 243; 30 L. J. Ex. 379; 3 L. T. 36; 6 Jur. N. S. 1083; 8 W. R. 362; 11 E. R. 421, H. L.

After testator's death A. executed a deed according to the mode described by the will; by which, after reciting that she was desirous of executing the power, she directed the trustees to transfer the fund to herself & a new trustee, upon such trusts & subject to such powers, etc., as A. should by any deed, with or without power of revocation & new appointment, or by her last will, direct & appoint, with certain limitations over in default of appointment, similar to those contained in the will; in pursuance of which deed the fund was transferred into the names of A. & the new trustee. A. afterwards, by will by virtue & in execution of that power, appointed the fund to be transferred to certain persons, in trust that the same might be consolidated with & become part of her residuary estate, & follow the dispositions thereof thereafter mentioned:—Held: the deed executed by A. being an exercise of the power under the original will, the property thereby became liable to her debts, & became her personal estate, in which she had a beneficial interest, & consequently was liable to the payment payable in Victoria; such promissory notes had been given for partnership purposes to testator by a partnership carrying on business solely in New South Wales, of which partnership the testator was a member.—Held: the promissory notes were assets, & liable to probate duty.—SHAW & MACKINNON v. By the articles of partnership it was provided that the business should be the carrying on & working of certain silks & indigo concerns, & zemindaries for the production or manufacture or working of indigo & silk & other produce, & for the sale in Calcutta or shipment for realisation in Europe of such produce. The articles further provided that the entire business of the firm in India should be carried on by certain managing agents who were required to be partners, who were alone entitled to use the name of the firm, to keep the books, & prepare the balance-sheets, & who were also empowered, but subject to the opinion of the committee hereinafter mentioned, to determine what branches of business should be undertaken. A committee of the partners in England was appointed to advise with the agents both in London & Calcutta on all matters affecting the interest of the partnership, & subject to the approval of a general meeting of the partners, to decide all matters affecting the partnership. It was further provided that on the death of any partner his representative should not become a partner in respect of his share, but that the interest of deceased partner should cease from Sept. 30 next after his decease, with power for the representatives to sell the share within a stipulated period or else to receive its fair value. A firm in London were declared to be the agents of the partnership in Europe, to whom the produce of the firm was to be consigned & the proceeds of the sales in India were to be remitted. His will was proved in England by his exors. domiciled in England. His estate included mtges. on real property in New Zealand. His wife afterwards died & her will was proved in England. At her death her husband's estate had not been fully administered, the clear residue had not been ascertained, & no appropriation had been made of the New Zealand mtges. or of any securities to particular shares of the ultimate residue:—Held: the right of the wife's exors. was, not to one-fourth or any part of the mtges. in specie, but to require her husband's exors. to administer his personal estate & to receive from them one-fourth part of the clear residue, & this was an English asset of the wife's estate, & probate duty was therefore payable under her will upon one-fourth part of the value of the New Zealand mtges.

The trustees were at the above dates all domiciled in the United Kingdom; & one of them after testator's death proved the will in England & acted as trustee, & held as trustee in this country the plantation upon the trusts of the will. The trust for sale ultimately took effect, & the proceeds of sale of the plantation became divisible amongst the several persons named in that behalf in the will, or their legal personal representatives. One of those persons, who was at the time of his death living & domiciled in England, died while the persons entitled for life were in existence, & the question was whether probate duty was or was not payable here on his death in respect of his interest under the will:—Held: the interest of the legatee under the will was an English equitable chose in action, recoverable in England, & an English & not a foreign asset, & as such was subject to probate duty here.—*Re SMYTH, LEACH v. On a claim made by the Commissioner of Stamps against the exors. in respect of the said properties. On the evidence:—Held: the transactions were gifts out & out passing the properties to the sons to the exclusion of all interest in the trustee, & not beneficially. Intestate had granted an annuity to A., & afterwards by deed conveyed his property to B., who covenanted to indemnify him against the payment of the annuity. Default having been subsequently made in the payment during the intestate's lifetime, the annuitant sued his administratrix, & recovered judgment for debt & costs exceeding £20. The administratrix paid this, & then sued B. on his covenant for the amount :—Held : (1) the right to recover this sum was a part of the intestate's estate, & rendered the letters of administration liable to stamp duty ; (2) the intestate, if he had lived, could not have been considered, in respect of this sum, as a mere trustee for the annuitant, & having no beneficial interest.—CARR v. They, with their family, went to reside there, & lived there until the husband's death in 1914 :—Held : (1) there was an entire exclusion of the donor from possession & enjoyment of the property or of any benefit by contract or otherwise within the meaning of Administration & Probate Act, 1903, s. 11, & therefore neither the house nor the purchase money was chargeable with duty as part of the donor's estate ; (2) the words "benefit to him by contract or otherwise" in Administration & Probate Act, 1903, s. 11, do not include any benefit which the donor may have in the subject matter of the gift by virtue of the fact that the relationship of husband & wife exists between donor & donee.—Re GIBB, [1915] V. In such a case the persons entitled to the property after the determination of the life interest, within Act of 1885, s. 19 (1), are the persons contingently so entitled—that is to say, in default of appointment & the duty must be assessed & paid accordingly.—Re JACKSON, [1903] A. By a further codicil in 1878, he referred to the previous codicil, & confirmed it, & made provision for his sister-in-law. Upon his deathbed, he directed where his will could be found, except the two codicils. The Court granted probate of the two codicils to the widow as sole executrix, & administration to her of the estate subject to the two codicils & to any previous will which might be found, or the contents of which evidence might be discovered. of the contingent interest at the date of administration only; although if duty had then been paid on the value of the contingency, the Crown would not have been entitled to any further duty by reason of the contingency having subsequently fallen into possession.

It is clearly settled that probate or administration duty attaches upon all the estate of testator or intestate which is of a personal nature at the time of his death, on which, by subsequent events, becomes so (MALINS, V.-C.).

If testator granted a lease of his real estate, & gave the lessee the option of becoming the purchaser, & that option was not exercised for some years after his death, so that the property at his death devolved upon his heir as real estate; yet on the option being afterwards exercised, it would operate as a conversion of the property as from the date of the lease, & probate duty would become payable upon the amount of the purchase-money (MALINS, V.-C.).—LORD v. The comrs. refused to return the sum claimed on the ground that the will created a mixed & general fund to be applied in payment of debts & that the real & personal estate should contribute in proportion to their respective value:—Held: the exors. were entitled to deduct the simple contract debts from the value of the personalty only & were therefore entitled to a return of probate duty claimed by them pursuant to Railway Passenger Duty Act, 1842 (c. 79), s. 23.—PERCIVAL v. 9401. Payable out of general residue — If general residue insufficient.—E. H. V. directed that all the specific & pecuniary legacies given by her will or any codicil thereto should be paid free from deduction for probate duty or otherwise. She devised all her residuary real & personal estate to her trustees upon trust to convert, at their discretion, & to pay all her just debts, & funeral & testamentary expenses & all the expenses incident to the execution of the trusts & together with the legacies thereinbefore given, & to stand possessed of the residue of the moneys for certain charitable objects. By codicils she devised three houses to M. B. & C. absolutely, & directed that the probate duty on this devise should be paid out of the residuary estate.

Certain specific personalty was directed to be sold & the proceeds paid to two charitable objects & M. C. B. in equal shares. The residuary estate was valued at £4,653, less expenses, & debts, costs of administration & probate duty amounting to £2,786: the amount required for pecuniary legacies was £3,080:—Held: as the residuary estate was insufficient to pay the State probate duty & the pecuniary legacies & the intention of the will was that all beneficiaries other than the ultimate residuary beneficiaries were to get their benefits in full, the direction to pay the probate duty was to be treated as a legacy to the several beneficiaries of the amount which would, but for such direction, have been

b. Annuity — Fund appropriated thereto.—An annuity is a series of legacies payable at intervals during the life of the annuitant, & the duty under Duties on the Estates of Deceased Persons Statute, 1870 (No. 388), s. 11, should be deducted by the exors. from those payments, & from any funds appropriated to their security; & not from the residuary estate.—In the Will of MOFFATT (1872), 3 V. R. 166.—AUS.

c. Property given during donor's life — In absence of directions for payment out of another fund.—The duty payable under Administration & Probate Act, 1903, s. 11, in respect of property transferred colourably or by way of gift during the donor's life is to be borne by the property so transferred, unless the donor expressly provides for the payment of such duty out of some other fund.

A provision in a donor's will for "payment of testamentary & administration expenses & all probate legacy & other duty payable on my estate" out of a specified fund does not exonerate the transferred property.—NATIONAL TRUSTEES, EXECUTORS & AGENCY CO. v. O'HEA (1904), 29 V. L. R. 814.—AUS.

d. Property transferred in consideration of marriage.—On July 8, 1903, G. by indenture purported to grant & transfer to his son A. in consideration of his then intended marriage with E. certain land to hold the same for G.'s benefit until the marriage, & afterwards for A.'s benefit absolutely. By the same indenture G. covenanted that immediately after the marriage he would execute all transfers for the better transferring of the said land. The marriage took place on July 14, & G., on the same day, executed a transfer of the land to A. G. died on Dec. 8, 1903:—Held: neither the indenture nor the transfer came within Administration & Probate Act, 1903 (No. 1813), s. 11, so as to make the property to which they related chargeable with the payment of duty.—Re MEARES, [1905] V. of, in each case, "so much & such part of" the trust funds as should be of the "clear" value of a specified sum of money in each case, & lastly made an appointment of "all the residue" of the trust funds. The will disposed of no other property except that subject to the power, & contained no direction for payment of testamentary expenses, probate or legacy duty:—Held: the testamentary expenses & probate duty, & the legacy duty on the specified portions of the trust funds, must be paid out of that part of the trust funds which was lastly appointed as residue.—*Re CURRIE, BJORKMAN v. The administrator had wasted the assets, & the widow, who was entitled to one-third, had not been paid:—Held: the application was premature, & the petition was dismissed.

By a subsequent Act the Comrs. of Inland Revenue are substituted for the Comrs. of Stamps & Taxes. On an application by an administrator for a mandamus to the Comrs. to pay to appct. the amount of duty overpaid by him, on the ground that he had supplied evidence of overpayment & had no other legal remedy:—Held: the mandamus ought not to issue, for the statute created no duty between the Comrs. & appct. whose remedy, if the decision of the Comrs. could be reviewed was by petition of right.—*R. v. The will contained no direction that the specifically appointed sums should be paid free of duty:—Held: the account duty payable in respect of the trust funds on C.'s death, under the Customs & Inland Revenue Act, 1881 (c. 12), s. 38 (2) (c), & the Customs &

956. ———.]—Testator domiciled in England, whose assets consisted of considerable personalty in England & also of realty leaseholds, & personalty in Australia, by his will, after bequeathing pecuniary legacies of considerable amount, gave his residuary real & personal estate upon trust for such of his five children as should be living at his death in equal shares, the share of each child being settled upon him or her for life with remainder to his or her children, with power for his trustees to manage & cultivate his real & leasehold estates until sold:—Held: the duties due to the Govt. of South Australia were not, like the duties due to the English Govt., payable out of the share of each child; but were part of the costs of realisation, & were therefore payable out of testator's general assets before distribution.—*Re MAURICE, BROWN v. She devised & bequeathed the residue of her real & personal estate to her English trustees upon trust to sell & convert the same into money & thereout to pay (inter alia) her "debts" & to stand possessed of the residue thereof upon certain residuary trusts:—Held: (1) the direction to pay debts out of residue referred to actual debts & did not include local death duty on the Melbourne property, though "deemed to be a debt of the testatrix" by the local law; (2) the local death duty & other expenses of realising the Melbourne property fell on that property & not on residue.

959. ——— Direction to pay "free of legacy duty."—Testator, a domiciled Englishman, by his will bequeathed to Lady S. "free of legacy duty" all his pictures, engravings, furniture, busts, silver plate, & "works of art" of every description wheresoever situate, except at his two London houses or except those bequeathed specifically by his will. At his death he was possessed of a number of valuable tapestries which were attached to the walls of his house in Paris, which the ct. held, upon the facts, passed to Lady S. under the specific bequest of "works of art." According to French law a mutation duty was payable by the legatee on these chattels; & if the duty was not paid within eight months of testator's death certain penalties were incurred. By reason of litigation which arose with reference to the proving of the will & the administration of the estate the French duty was not paid, & Lady S. was not put into possession of the tapestries until two years after testator's death, & heavy penalties for delay became payable to the French fiscal authorities:—Held: (1) on the construction of the will the expression "legacy duty" was used by testator in its strict legal sense as meaning the duty imposed by the Legacy Duty Act, 1796 (c. 52), & amending Acts, & not as meaning all duties in the nature of legacy duty, & it did not therefore include the French mutation duty; (2) there was no obligation on the exors. to pay the mutation duty in order to get possession of the tapestries & deliver them to the legatee, & consequently the mutation duty must be borne by the legatee; (3) the penalties were in substance an extra mutation duty & must also be paid by the legatee.—*Re SCOTT, SCOTT v. ## Part I.—Nature and Classification.

SECT. 1.—NATURE OF ESTOPPEL.

1. General rule.]—An estoppel is an admission, or something which the law treats as equivalent to an admission, of an extremely high & conclusive nature, so high & so conclusive, that the party whom it affects is not permitted to aver against it or offer evidence to controvert it (LUSH, J.).—ORD v. ORD, No. 140, post.

2. —.]—In an action upon a covenant to pay £6,800 subject to deductions to the extent of £4,800 upon a certain event to be ascertained by an arbitrator, deft. pleaded in bar that the arbitrator had awarded that a deduction should be made of £4,800 :—Held : that award was properly pleaded in bar, & not by way of estoppel.

This is no estoppel. The deduction depends upon a fact to be ascertained by an arbitrator, & the arbitrator has ascertained it (PATTESON, J.).

A plea in bar must show that there was no cause of action, or accord & satisfaction. The principle of a plea in estoppel is, that whether pltf. has a cause of action or not, he is estopped from asserting it : but this plea shows that he has no cause of action (COLERIDGE, J.).—PARKES v. SMITH (1850), 15 Q. B. 297 ; 19 L. J. Q. B. 405 ; 15 L. T. O. S. 223 ; 14 Jur. 761 ; 117 E. R. 470.

3. —.]—The general definition of estoppel is given in Les Termes de la Ley, title Estoppel : "Estoppel is, when one is concluded & forbidden in law to speak against his own act or deed, yea, though it be to say the truth." This is what deft. attempted to do. There is a distinction between estoppel by matter of record or deed & by matter in pais : in the latter case it arises on the evidence itself, & need not be pleaded ; in the others it must be pleaded, if there be an opportunity (WIGHTMAN, J.).—ASHPITEL v. BRYAN (1863), 3 B. & S. 474 ; 1 New Rep. 265 ; 32 L. J. Q. B. 91 ; 7 L. T. 706 ; 9 Jur. N. S. 791 ; 11 W. R. 279 ; 122 E. R. 179 ; on appeal (1864), 5 B. & S. 723, Ex. Ch.

4. —.]—SIMM v. ANGLO-AMERICAN TELEGRAPH CO., ANGLO-AMERICAN TELEGRAPH CO. v. SPURLING, No. 1113, post.

5. Rule of evidence.]—(1) Although it is the duty of a trustee to give his cestui que trust, on demand, information with respect to the dealings with & position of the trust fund, it is no part of his duty to assist his cestui que trust in selling or incumbering his beneficial interest by telling him what incumbrances he, the cestui que trust, has created, nor which of his incumbrancers have given notice of their respective charges ; & it follows that the trustee is under no obligation to answer the inquiries of a stranger about to deal with the cestui que trust.

If the trustee takes upon himself to answer the inquiries of a stranger about to deal with the cestui que trust, he is not under any legal obligation to do more than to give honest answers to the best of his actual knowledge & belief ; he is not bound to make inquiries himself. Provided he answers honestly, he incurs no liability to the inquirer, unless he binds himself by a statement amounting to a warranty, or so expresses himself as to be estopped from afterwards denying the truth of what he has said.

(2) A statement to operate as an estoppel must be clear & unambiguous.

(3) Estoppel is not a cause of action, it is a rule of evidence which precludes a person from denying the truth of some statement previously made by himself (LANDIEY, L.J.).

PART I. SECT. 1.

of evidence.]—The law of estoppel is contained in Evidence Act, s. 115.—ASMUTUNNESSA KHATUN SAHEBA v. HARENDRA LAL BISWAS (1908), 1 L. R. 35 Calc. 904 ; 12 C. W. N. 72.—IND.

Estoppel is only a rule of evidence ; you cannot found an action upon estoppel. Estoppel is only important as being one step in the progress towards relief on the hypothesis that deft. is estopped from denying the truth of something which he has said (BOWEN, L.J.).—Low v. BOUVERIE, [1891] 3 Ch. 82 ; 60 L. J. Ch. 594 ; 65 L. T. 533 ; 40 W. R. 50 ; 7 T. L. R. 582, C. A.

6. —.]—WILLIAMS v. PINCKNEY, No. 798, post.

7. —.]—Estoppel being a rule of evidence can only apply in a case where it is sought to make a man liable by preventing him proving the true facts, his conduct having been inconsistent with those facts, & having induced others to alter their position (VAUGHAN WILLIAMS, L.J.).—OLIVER v. BANK OF ENGLAND, [1902] 1 Ch. 610 ; 71 L. J. Ch. 388 ; 86 L. T. 248 ; 50 W. R. 340 ; 18 T. L. R. 341 ; 7 Com. Cas. 89, C. A. ; on appeal, sub nom. STARKEY v. BANK OF ENGLAND, [1903] A. C. 114, H. 8. —.]—The grounds . . . on which a decree for dissolution can be made are set forth in sect. 27 the Act of 1857. [Matrimonial Causes Act, (c. 85).] It is sufficient to say that a decree for judicial separation is not made available by the Act on one of such grounds. If such a decree is available at all, it is by virtue of the ordinary rules of evidence. I do not doubt that as between the parties the ordinary doctrine of estoppel applies . . . but estoppel is only a rule of evidence, & the duty imposed on the judge by sect. 29, which emphasises the necessity for the ct. being satisfied as required by sect. 31, is not restricted by any such rule (FARWELL, L.J.).—HARRIMAN v. HARRIMAN, [1909] P. 123 ; 78 L. J. P. 62 ; 100 L. T. 557 ; 73 J. P. 193, C. A.

9. —.]—There is no such thing as quasi estoppel. Estoppel is not a cause of action, but a rule of evidence. If a man makes a statement he cannot afterwards be heard to say it is not true (FARWELL, L.J.).—LIVERPOOL & NORTH WALES S.S. CO., LTD. v. MERSEY TRADING CO., LTD., [1909] as reported in 1 Ch. 209, C. A.

10. —.]—Estoppel is not a cause of action, but a rule of evidence by which A.'s statements or conduct to B. alleging one state of circumstances, if relied on & acted on by B. prevent A. from proving against B. the truth, namely, that the state of circumstances alleged does not exist. But if A.'s original allegation is caused by B.'s misrepresentation of the state of circumstances, B. cannot take advantage of an allegation based on his own misrepresentation (SCRUTTON, L.J.).—RUSSIAN COMMERCIAL & INDUSTRIAL BANK v. COMPTOIR D'ESCOMPTE DE MULHOUSE, [1923] 2 K. B. 630 ; 92 L. J. K. B. 1053 ; 129 L. T. 706 ; 39 T. L. R. 561 ; 68 Sol. Jo. 12, C. A. ; on appeal, [1925] A. C. 112, H. L.

Annotation :—Mentd. Banque Internationale de Commerce de Petrograd v. Goukassow (1924), 93 L. J. K. B. 1084.

11. Not cause of action.—Goods were in 1875 stored by brokers with wharfingers, who issued a warrant for the same. In 1885 the servants of deft., who had taken over the wharf & business, delivered the goods by mistake to certain persons instead of goods to which they were entitled, & deft. was not made aware of the mistake. The warrant had been negotiated & was in Jan. 1886 in the possession of B. & E. In that month, no rent having been paid for the goods since 1880 deft. wrote two letters to pltf. who had previously taken over the business of the brokers, & carried it on under their name, informing him, as the supposed owner of the warrant, & as the person presumed interested in the goods, that the goods were in hand, that rent was due, & that, unless it was paid, the goods would be sold to cover the amount due. Pltf. made no reply, but afterwards, & in consequence of receiving these letters, he bought the warrant from B. & E., & applied to deft. for the goods, when deft. first discovered that they were no longer in his possession :—Held : deft. was liable, being estopped from denying that he had the goods specified in the warrant because he had by his negligent misrepresentation led pltf. to believe that the goods were in his possession, & such misrepresentation was the cause of pltf.'s loss.

An estoppel does not in itself give a cause of action ; it prevents a person from denying a certain state of facts (LORD ESHER, M.R.).—SETON v. LAFONE (1887), 19 Q. B. D. 68 ; 56 L. J. Q. B. 415 ; 57 L. T. 547 ; 35 W. R. 749 ; 3 T. L. R. 624, C. A.

The statement of claim alleged that deft. had represented to pltf. that her husband desired a settlement to be drawn up providing an annuity for his son's future wife ; that pltf. had prepared the settlement accordingly & it was executed by the settlor, whose hand was guided by deft. owing to his physical condition ; that the marriage took place on the faith of the settlement, & the settlor died three days later ; & that, in probate proceedings, deft. had since challenged the validity of the settlement on the ground that the settlor was incapable of approving

20. Distinguished from admission.]—In covenant on an indenture of lease which purported to be granted by J. S., in exercise of a power given by the will of P. S. :—Held : deft., by holding under the lease & executing a counterpart, admitted the due execution of the will of P. S.

In the lease under which deft. takes, there is a recital that the lessor demised in exercise of a power given him by the will of P. S. ; then, at the trial the will of a P. S. is put in, which corresponds with the recital in the lease. . . . I do not put the admission so high as an estoppel ; but it has its effect on the principle laid down in *Shelley v. 25. “Estoppels are odious” — Extent of maxim.]—Trespass for imprisoning pltf. Plea : justification under ca. sa. at the suit of W., to the sheriff of Y., under which pltf. was arrested, & remained in the sheriff's custody, till he was brought up on habeas corpus & committed by order of a judge to deft. as keeper of the Queen's prison, with the cause of his detention aforesaid. New assignment : That pltf., whilst in custody at Y., petitioned the ct. for the relief of insolvent debtors ; that his petition was transmitted to the judge of the county ct. of Y., who adjudicated that for fraud he should be remanded for one year from Apr. 12, 1851, & then discharged : that the judge of the county ct. made a warrant, directed to the gaoler of Y., ordering his discharge from the detainer of W. at that date ; & that the warrant, as well as the detainer, was delivered to deft. on pltf.'s committal : & pltf. new assigned imprisonment after Apr. 12, 1852. Plea : That deft. had not the warrant. Replication : That he had the warrant. Issue thereon. On the trial it appeared that deft. had only a copy of the warrant : but the jury found that he led pltf. to believe he had the original. It appeared that pltf. was placed in the remand ward, & also that he had applied without success to a judge, & to the ct. for the relief of insolvent debtors, for a warrant addressed to deft. to authorise his discharge pursuant to the adjudication, & that he was detained three days after Apr. 12, 1852 :—Held : there was nothing to preclude deft. from showing that his representation that he had the warrant was erroneous, as there was no evidence either that he intended pltf. to act upon the faith of the representation, or that pltf. did so act upon it to his prejudice ; & without both these ingredients there could be no conclusion by a representation.

If a party wilfully makes a representation to another, meaning it to be acted upon, & it is so acted upon, that gives rise to what is called an estoppel. It is not quite properly so called ; but it operates as a bar to receiving evidence contrary to that representation as between those parties. Like the ancient estoppel, this conclusion shuts out the truth, & is odious & must be strictly made out (LORD CAMPBELL, C.J.).

I do not think that an estoppel of this kind is always odious ; in many cases I think it extremely equitable to act upon that doctrine (CROMPTON, J.). —HOWARD v. HUDSON (1853), 2 E. & B. 1 ; 1 C. 28. ———.]—Pltf. was surveyor to the trustees of certain turnpike roads. It was his duty to make all contracts, & pay the amounts due for labour & materials required for the repair of the roads, he being permitted to draw on the treasurer to a certain amount. His expenditure was not strictly limited to that amount, & in the yearly accounts, which it was his duty to present to the trustees, a balance was generally claimed as due to him & was carried to the next year's account. He rendered accounts for the years 1856, 1857 & 1858, showing certain balances due to himself. These accounts were audited, examined & allowed by the trustees at their general annual meeting & a statement, based on them, of the revenue & expenditure of the trust, was published as required by the 3 Geo. 4, c. 126, s. 78. The trustees, believing the accounts correct, paid off with moneys in hand a portion of their mtge. debt. Pltf. afterwards claimed a larger sum in respect of payments which had in fact been made by him, & which he ought to have brought into the accounts of the above years, but knowingly omitted. Pltf. also rendered an account for the year 1859, which, on inquiry by the trustees, he stated did not include all the payments, & he subsequently rendered another account for that year in which he claimed a larger sum as due to him:—Held: pltf. was estopped from recovering the sums omitted in the accounts for the years 1856, 1857 & 1858, since the trustees had acted upon the faith that those accounts were true.

A man shall not be allowed to blow hot & cold, to affirm at one time & deny at another, making a claim on those whom he has deluded to their disadvantage, & founding that claim on the very matters of the delusion. Such a principle has its basis in common sense & common justice, & whether it is called "estoppel" or by any other name, it is one which cts. of law have in modern times most usefully adopted (per CUR.).—CAVE v. MILLS (1862), 7 H. & N. 913; 31 L. Plea, that A., B. & C., from the time of making the demise until the death of B., & A. & C. afterwards, had a reversion for a longer term of years, expectant on the lease, & that after B.'s death, & before any breach of covenant, A. & C. assigned such reversion to D., & thenceforward ceased to have any reversion or interest in the demised premises. Replication, that A. B. & C. were not until the death of B., nor were A. & C. afterwards, possessed of the said reversion in the demised premises, in manner & form as alleged in the plea:—Held: bad, as being a departure from the declaration.

The declaration imports a giving up to the lessors at the end of the term which implies a reversion. [It is said] that we are to infer that this was a mere equitable estate. There is nothing from which we can infer that; & if there were, still the estoppel must be mutual (ALDERSON, B.).—GREEN v. JAMES (1840), 6 M. & W. 656; 10 L. J. Ex. 73; 151 E. R. 575.

months' interest in it, & granted a mandamus to the magistrate to assess, under sect. 121, the amount of compensation due. In truth the proper course for resp., if he insisted on this larger claim, was to have appealed against the order for a mandamus in order to have had his claims assessed, not by a magistrate under sect. 121, but by arbitration or by a jury in the ordinary way under sect. 68 of the Act. 54. ———.]—A return to a writ of error set out the record of an indictment found against deft., & stated that he was tried upon the said indictment by a jury of the country at the next session holden before the Lord Mayor, several of the judges, aldermen, recorder, & others, assigned by certain letters patent under the Great Seal directed to them, or any two or more of them, to inquire of certain offences; that he was, by the verdict of such jury, found guilty; & that thereupon judgment was given by the ct. against him. Upon this return deft. assigned as errors in law, that the judgment was insufficient, & that it should have been for deft.: & as errors in fact, first, that when the jury gave their verdict there was but one of the justices named in the commission present in ct.; & secondly, that the verdict was not, at the time it was so given, entered of record. The King's coroner & attorney answered "in nullo est erratum," & prayed that the judgment might be affirmed:—Held: (1) as it appeared by the record, that the verdict was given at a session holden before several of the comrs. & justices, pltf. in error could not be allowed to aver, in contradiction to the record, that only one of the justices was present when the jury gave their verdict; & the answer, in nullo est erratum, is no admission of the fact assigned for error, unless it could lawfully be assigned, & is well assigned in point of form; (2) the second error in fact assigned, was no error, inasmuch as it was impossible that a verdict should be recorded at the time when it was given, the recording of it being necessarily an act subsequent to the delivery of the verdict by a jury.

A party cannot be received to aver as error in fact, a matter contrary to the record (LORD TENTERDEN, C.J.).

A minute of the verdict should be entered forthwith by the officer of the ct., & entered of record at some subsequent time . . . & the minute so entered is considered by the ct. in which the proceeding takes place as evidence of the verdict (LORD TENTERDEN, C.J.).—R. v. CARLILE (1831), 2 B. & Ad. 362; 2 State Tr. N. S. 459; 9 L. J. O. S. K. B. 250; 109 E. R. 1177.

55. ———.]—After a trial by special jury, the postea recited that a jury came & on their oath said deft. was not guilty. Pltf. thereafter brought error on the judgment, alleging as error that some of the jurors had not been summoned; that a tales has been prayed & added without default of the original jurors struck; that the names of the jurors had not been called over at the hour named in the summonses, etc.:—Held: (1) after verdict & judgment, pltf. was precluded from raising any question of fact which is inconsistent with the record; (2) the record impliedly stated the contrary of the errors alleged, & that his remedy, if any, was by applying to the ct. within four days to set aside the verdict.—IRWIN v. GREY (1867), L. R. 2 H. L. 20; 36 L. J. C. P. 148; 16 L. T. 74; 15 W. R. 593, H. L.

56. ———.]—Petitioner established his wife's adultery in a suit for dissolution of marriage, but the co-respondent established petitioner's adultery, & on that ground his petition was dismissed. He afterwards presented a fresh petition, alleging subsequent adultery with other co-respondents. The Queen's Proctor intervened, & alleged the judgment against petitioner in the previous suit, & further alleged the fact of petitioner's adultery. The jury found that petitioner was not guilty of the adultery charged:—Held: the judgment in the former suit was conclusive evidence of the fact of such adultery having been committed.

There is a clear distinction between estoppel & conclusive evidence. An estoppel is set up by the pleadings, & where there is an estoppel the issue does not go to the jury. But if there is no estoppel, the issue goes to the jury . . . & they are bound to find the fact according to the evidence laid before them (LORD PENZANCE).—CONRADI v. CONRADI (1868), L. The hospital consists partly of the Governor's house, & other distinct houses or apartments, & partly of the pensioners' wards & the chapel of the hospital & the dining room of the pensioners; also courts & buildings used for common purposes within & by the said hospital. There had been assessments by the comrs. of sewers in respect of the former parts of the hospital, which had been paid by the Governor & other residents. In respect of the latter part, one of the clerks of the works was assessed "for buildings not hitherto rated, chapel & wards, & for land." Such assessment was made upon a presentment by the jury, which presentment was traversed, & a verdict found confirming the presentment. The clerks of the works are appointed by the comrs. of woods & forests, who superintend the repairs of the buildings of the hospital:—Held: the comrs. of the hospital, having traversed the presentment, were not estopped by a verdict confirming the presentment, but might bring trespass against the collector for taking goods on the premises in respect of which the assessment was made.—*NEAVE v. 66. —.]—In an action on 2 & 3 Edw. 6, c. 13, by pltf., as owner of tithe-hay, against deft., as occupier of a close, for not setting out the tithe:—Held: copies of a bill & answer, in a suit by the vicar for tithe-hay, against S., then occupier of the close, & from whom deft. purchased, denying the vicar's right, & setting up a right in the ancestor of pltf., on which the vicar abandoned the suit, were evidence against deft.

Where the question in dispute is, whether the tithe belongs to the rector or the vicar, it is competent evidence for the rector to show that in a proceeding between the vicar & rector, the vicar set up a claim, & in the result abandoned that claim, & that tithe has ever since then been paid to the rector (LE BLANC, J.).—DARTMOUTH (LADY) v. B. withdrew his claim, & the bill was, on motion, dismissed. Sixteen years afterwards, when the witnesses were dead, B.'s exors. raised the same question of priority, in regard to the plantation itself:—Held: they were concluded by the transactions of 1834.—BUSHBY v. ELLIS (1853), 17 Beav. 279; 51 E. R. 1041.

70. Confession of defence.]—(1) In an action by the lord of a manor against a copyholder for trespassing on the free warren of pltf., a judgment on a quo warranto, brought against a former owner of the manor, in which deft. pleaded, & A.-G., confessed, a prescriptive title to the franchise of free warren, as appurtenant to the manor, is evidence for pltf. in support of the right of free warren by prescription; (2) such a record was held to be evidence of a prescriptive right over the lands of tenants, as well as demesne lands, where the information charged an usurpation of the franchise over both; & the ct. gave judgment for deft. as to both, although the plea, probably by an accidental omission on the record, set forth a title only over demesne lands, & A.-G. only confessed the title as pleaded.

(3) So a judgment for pltf. in a former action against another copyholder for a trespass on pltf.'s free warren, is also admissible.—CARNARVON (EARL) v. VILLEBOIS (1844), 13 M. & W. 313; 14 L. J. Ex. 233; 153 E. R. 130.

72. By consent of parties.]—An action having been brought by the owners of ship K. against ship A. for damages arising out of a collision, an agreement was drawn up between the parties that the action be "discontinued without costs on the ground of inevitable accident," & an order in those terms was drawn up in the Admlty. registry. The owners of the cargo of ship K. having afterwards brought an action against the owners of ship A. for damages arising out of the same collision, both ships were held to blame, & the cargo owners were held entitled to half their damages. The owners of ship A. having obtained a decree limiting their liability, & having paid a sum into ct., the cargo owners filed their claim in the limitation action. The owners of ship K. having afterwards, with the consent of the owners of ship A., obtained a rescission of the order for discontinuance, claimed against the fund in the limitation action:—Held: the agreement & order for discontinuance, upon their true construction, did not amount to a release of all claims, & the owners of ship K. were not precluded from claiming against the fund.—KRONPRINZ (CARGO OWNERS) v. KRONPRINZ (OWNERS), THE ARDANDHU (1887), 12 App. Cas. 256; 56 L. J. P. 49; 56 L. T. 345; 35 W. R. 783; 6 Asp. M. L. C. 124, H. L.

73. —.]—An order by consent, in the absence of an agreement to compromise the cause of action, to dismiss an action for want of prosecution is no bar to the institution of a fresh action. In this respect the practice of the old Ct. of Ch. remains unchanged.

Pltfs. in an action wherein the same parties were respectively pltfs. & defts., & the same relief was sought as in the present action, had paid defts.' costs & consented to an order, made on summons taken out by defts., dismissing the action for want of prosecution. Pltfs. subsequently brought the present action, whereupon defts. moved that the question of law might first be tried whether pltfs. were not estopped from bringing the present action by reason of the consent order made in the previous action:—Held: pltfs. were not estopped.—MAGNUS v.

81. By consent of parties.]—In an action for damages by collision between the owners of the A. & the B., the ct., by consent of the parties, made a decree dismissing the action. Subsequently another action was brought by the owners of the cargo on the A. against the B. in respect of the same collision, & the ct. found both vessels to blame. The owners of the B. then commenced an action against the owners of cargo on the A.

for the purpose of limiting their liability in respect of all claims arising out of this collision, & paid the amount of their statutory liability into ct. Subsequently, again by consent of the owners of the A. & the B., the assistant registrar rescinded the decree by consent in the first action, & the owners of the A. then brought in a claim in the limitation action against the fund in ct. The registrar held such claim to be inadmissible. On motion to confirm the report:—Held: (1) the report should be confirmed, as the owners of the A. & the B. could not by consent rescind the decree of the ct.; (2) the decree by consent was a bar to a claim against the fund in ct., as it estopped the owners of the A. from bringing any further action against the B.—THE BELLCALRN (1885), 10 P. Grounds of decision not clear—Several issues raised—General dismissal.]—An urban sanitary authority served deft. & other frontagers of a new street with notices requiring them to execute certain works, including a particular work which could not legally be included in such notices. The notices not being complied with, the urban authority did the works, & apportioned the expenses incurred by them in so doing on the frontagers. A summons to recover from deft. £650, the amount charged to him under the apportionment, having been dismissed by the magistrates, the urban authority made a second apportionment, deducting the expense of the work which had been wrongly included, the amount charged to deft. therein being £579. They then brought an action to establish a charge on deft.'s premises for £579, or, in the alternative, for £650:—Held: (1) the urban authority had power to make a second apportionment; (2) notwithstanding the dismissal of the summons, they were entitled to a charge on the premises for £579.—MANCHESTER CORPN. v. iii. Judgment by Default.

83. Default generally — By infant.]—A., an infant, sues out an assize of novel disseisin against B., returnable in the King's Bench; but between the teste & return of the writ, B. sues out an assize against A. in the Common Pleas, & obtaining judgment by default, pleads the recovery in bar of the first assize. A. replies that he was an infant at the time, that he was not the terre-tenant, & that the recovery was by default:—Held: A. being an infant, & the judgment against him by default, the recovery was no bar to the action.—HOLFORD v. Replication, by way of estoppel, as to so much of the pleas as related to the trespasses complained of in the count since Oct. 26, 1853—that pltf. on that day sued out a writ of ejectment for the recovery of the premises in question; that E. K. in the writ mentioned was deft. in this action, & was at the time of the issuing of the writ the tenant in possession of the premises in question; that the premises in the writ & in this action were the same, & that pltf. in the writ named was now pltf.; that no appearance was entered or defence made to the writ; that, after the issuing of the writ, & whilst the ejectment was pending, & in pursuance of the Act of Parliament in that behalf pltf., by the consideration & judgment of the ct. obtained possession of the premises, etc. that the judgment was still in force; & that, afterwards & before the commencement of this suit, & by virtue of the judgment, pltf. entered into & upon the possession of the premises—wherefore pltf. prayed judgment if deft. ought to be admitted against the said recovery record & proceedings to plead the pleas, or either of them, as to the trespasses in the count complained of since Oct. 26, 1853:—Held: (1) a good replication by way of estoppel to both pleas; (2) it was not necessary to aver notice to deft. of the proceedings in the ejectment or the issuing or execution of a writ of possession; (3) if it were necessary, the replication contained a sufficient averment of entry by the pltf.; (4) pltf.'s title by estoppel related back to the date of the writ of ejectment & would be presumed until shown by rejoinder to have been determined.—WILKINSON v. Defts. by inadvertence, failed to appear upon an interpleader summons taken out by pltf. in the action concerning which pltf. was obeying the writ of fi. fa., & defts. were barred. They subsequently attempted to rescind the order, but failed, & their appeal was also dismissed. This action was brought to recover the proceeds of the sale:—Held: defts. could not set up as a defence to the action the facts by which they claimed to be entitled to the goods upon which pltf. had levied.—WILLIAMS v. Deft., by failing to appear in the original action, must be taken to have admitted that she had in her hands sufficient property of the deceased to meet pltf.'s claim. She was now estopped from denying the truth of that admission. It must be taken that she had in her hands sufficient to satisfy pltf.'s claim, & had failed to satisfy it (BIGHAM, J.). —THOMPSON & SONS v. CLARKE (1901), 17 T. L. R. 455.

96. Default of defence.]—To an action for rent under a building agreement dated Sept. 29, 1853, deft. pleaded that, after the making of that agreement it was agreed between the parties that a tenancy from year to year should be created in substitution for the former tenancy under the agreement; that notice to quit was duly given, which notice expired at Michaelmas, 1858; that deft. quitted accordingly; & that no rent ever became due from deft. to pltf. in respect of the premises after the last-mentioned day. To this plea, pltf. replied, by way of estoppel, that he brought an action against deft. for the recovery of rent as having accrued due from deft. to pltf. under the agreement in the declaration in this cause mentioned after Sept. 29, 1858; that deft., being under terms to plead issuably, pleaded to that action pleas which were not issuable, but not the defence now set up; & that pltf. thereupon signed judgment, & thereby recovered the rent sued for in that action:—Held: the replication was bad, deft. not being estopped by his omission to set up on the former occasion, from availing himself of the defence alleged in his plea.

Without adopting the old maxim that estoppels are odious it is enough to say that the doctrine is not to be extended beyond what there is authority for (WILLIAMS, J.). —HOWLETT v. TARTE (1861), 10 C. B. N. S. 813; 31 L. J. C. P. 146; 9 W. R. 868; 142 E. R. 673.

Defts. made default in pleading, & the injunction was granted in due course. Later it appeared that a similar article to that complained of was being put upon the market by N., for whom defts. were acting as agents for sale. On a motion for attachment of defts. for breach of the injunction no direct evidence was forthcoming, & the case was rested on admissions by defts., which the ct. held to be insufficient, & on the fact that defts., having allowed judgment to go against them by default, were estopped from saying that the goods complained of were not an imitation of those of pltf.'s manufacture:—Held: in these circumstances an attachment could not issue.—RIPLEY v. ARTHUR (1902), 86 L. T. 735; 19 R. P. C. 443, C. A.

EVANS (1831), You. 276; 159 E. R. 996.

The reference to the master was by consent, & it was upon condition that pltf. should sign judgment, & that deft. should pay the costs of the action. If deft. complained of the arrest, he ought before the order was made to have taken his stand, & required that provision should be made upon that subject (PARKE, B.).—WATKINS v. An action was brought against a co. to recover an instalment of a debt alleged to be due under an agreement, the existence of which was denied by the co.:—Held: that judgment by consent for plffs. precluded the liquidator in the winding up of the co. from denying the existence of the agreement on a proof being sent in for the total amount due under the agreement.—*Re SOUTH AMERICAN & MEXICAN CO., Ex p. ----- for relief against forfeiture—On payment of costs in several actions for recovery of houses—Only one action necessary.]—Pltf. was the assignee of four leases, each lease comprising a certain number of houses, & deft. was the assignee of four sub-leases of the houses. The leases & sub-leases contained the usual covenants by the lessees to repair. Deft. sub-let all the houses to weekly tenants. The houses becoming out of repair, the original lessor served notices on pltf. requiring him to repair, & pltf. served similar notices on deft. The object of pltf. in serving the notices & in bringing the subsequent actions was to have the repairs to the houses executed & not to recover possession thereof. Pltf. subsequently brought four actions against all the weekly tenants to recover possession of the houses comprised in the four sub-leases respectively, & served a copy of the writ upon each of the tenants. Deft. obtained leave to defend as landlord, & the repairs having been executed, an order was made by consent in each action giving deft. relief from forfeiture, & staying all further proceedings, deft. to pay to pltf. his costs of the action as between solr. & client. Upon taxation, the master allowed the costs of the four actions:—Held: the object of the action being to enforce execution of the repairs & not to recover possession of the houses, it was only necessary to sue deft.; but deft. having by the consent orders in which he agreed to pay the costs of each action, precluded himself from setting up that only one action was necessary, & must pay the costs of each action.—*GEEN v. At that time G. was an infant, of which fact pltf. was not aware. Soon afterwards the co. was wound up voluntarily, & G. then brought an action by his father, as next friend, against pltf., who was an auditor of the co., charging him with fraud in selling the shares, knowing that the co. was in an insolvent condition, & claiming damages. The action was compromised on the terms that all charges of fraud should be withdrawn, & that the purchase-money should be repaid to G. The liquidators, on discovering that G. was an infant, substituted the name of pltf. for his as a contributory of the co. Pltf. then filed a bill against deft., charging that he was the real purchaser of the shares, & that pltf. was not aware of that fact when he entered into the compromise with G., & claiming to be indemnified by deft. against all loss in respect of the transaction:—Held: the compromise was an effectual bar to pltf.'s claim to relief, & the fact of his ignorance that deft. was the real owner of the shares was immaterial.—*MAYNARD v. The daughter brought an action against the exors. for an account & to recover certain sums alleged to have been improperly paid by them, but this action was compromised. She afterwards married, & a second action was brought against the exors. on behalf of her children:—Held: (1) the residuary gift could not be treated as a trust, but that there was nothing in the will which could be construed as debarring the daughter from the inheritance as the heir by birth of testator until she attained 25 or married, & after that time as the heir burdened with a fidei-commissum; (2) where a fidei-commissum is conditional, the fidei-commissary may be bound by a compromise made by the fiduciary, if he acts bond fide in respect of a doubtful right, as long as such compromise does not effect an alienation of property, the children were bound by the compromise entered into in the former action, & the second action was not maintainable.—*DE MONTMORT v. 120. Matters not raised in suit.—In 1874 A. settled certain funds upon trust for himself for life, & after his death upon trust as to one-fifth for W. & his children. By the settlement A. reserved to himself for life the power to direct the investments of the trust funds as though he were absolute owner; & after his death the trustees were empowered to invest the trust funds upon freehold, leasehold or chattel real securities "including equitable mtges. by a deposit" with the usual power to vary investments. The settlement also contained the usual power to invest in the purchase of freeholds or long leaseholds. In 1877 A. died, & at that time £6,400, part of the trust funds, stood invested on second mtge. of certain freeholds & leaseholds, S. being the mtgor. In 1878 S. became financially embarrassed & foreclosure or sale by the first mtgees. was imminent, which would have resulted in the total loss of the £6,400 & thereupon the trustees, acting bond fide & with a view to save the trust estate, purchased of S. his equity of redemption for £2,000. In 1879 L., a beneficiary, commenced an action against the trustees & W., alleging improper investments & claiming administration & accounts on the footing of wilful default. The trustees in their answers to interrogatories set out clearly the circumstances attending the purchase of the equity of redemption. In 1880 the usual judgment for administration was obtained including an inquiry as to the improper investments. In 1881, before the chief clerk made his certificate a compromise of the action was sanctioned by the ct. on petition, to which all parties interested, including W.'s children, were parties, under which L.'s share of the trust estate was raised & paid out to her & all further proceedings in the action were stayed. The petition did not refer to the alleged breaches of trust. In Apr. 1888, W.'s children commenced an action against the same trustees alleging that the purchase of the equity of redemption was a breach of trust & claiming usual relief. Defts. denied the breach of trust & asserted that under the circumstances the purchase was prudent & proper. They also pleaded the order of compromise in the first action in bar of pltf.'s claim:—Held: (1) the purchase of the equity of redemption was an unauthorised investment & a breach of trust; (2) the compromise was not a bar to pltf.'s claim, the breach of trust not having been by negligence, inadvertence, or e. A controversy which arose subsequently was settled by the heirs of A. conveying to N. one portion of the land, & N. executing to the heirs of A. what was intended as a release & quit-claim of all his interest in the other portion of the land, including that in question:—Held: although the release was badly drawn & failed to express in clear & distinct terms the nature of the transaction between the parties, as this was the clear inference to be drawn from the documentary evidence & the surrounding circumstances, the ct. would give effect to it.—*MCQUEEN v. Pltf. became lessee of land in England, & after some years he assigned the balance of the term to deft., who assumed covenants contained in the lease for maintenance & repair, & undertook to indemnify pltf. At the expiration of the lease the lessor demanded from deft. £486 in respect of dilapidations, which deft. disputed, while admitting liability for £75. The lessor then demanded payment from pltf., who settled the claim by paying £450, & demanded indemnity from deft., who had left England. Pltf. sued deft. & obtained a judgment by default in England, the writ being served in Minnesota, U.S.A. Deft. ultimately resided in Manitoba, where pltf. sued him on the English judgment. On the facts:—Held: deft. estopped from disputing the settlement made by pltf., & his own obligation to indemnify.—MARSHALL v. HOUGHTON, [1922] 3 W. W. R. 65; 68 D. L. R. 308; affd., 33 Man. L. #### vi. Nonsuit.

122. General rule.]—A pltf. cannot now elect to be nonsuited; if he offers no evidence at the trial deft. is entitled to a verdict.

The sole question on this appeal is whether the old system by which a pltf. at his own election could lose his writ, as it was said, & at his election bring another action for the same cause, is still a system which exists in our law. I am very clearly of opinion that it does not. Our whole system has been changed, & the reason why the word “nonsuit” itself is not now to be found in the rules is that it was determined that the power of a pltf. at the common law to claim a nonsuit, or pltf. in equity to dismiss his bill at his own option, should no longer be permitted, & it is probable that the word “discontinuance” was supposed to apply to both forms of procedure both at common law & in equity. Accordingly by R. S. C., Ord. 26, r. 1, the only mode by which a pltf. can submit to defeat is under that Ord., unless he allows the proceedings to go on until the verdict is recorded against him (LORD HALSBURY, C.).—FOX v. At the next meeting of the ct., the judge was ready to pronounce his opinion, but deft., without assigning any reason, withdrew his consent, & the judge consequently did not give any decision:—Held: the withdrawal of a juror had not put an end to the action, because deft. had not performed his part of the arrangement under which pltf. consented to such withdrawal; & the ct. made absolute a rule calling upon the judge of the county ct. to appoint a day for a rehearing.—NORBURN v. s. Abortive appeal — Appeal withdrawn.]—In a suit brought against her husband's nephew, a Hindu widow alleged that certain property was her husband's separate property. The ct. held that the property was joint property. The widow appealed, but subsequently withdrew the appeal. On the widow's death, the nephew filed the present suit to recover possession of the property from the daughter, who resisted the claim on the ground that the decision in the first suit was not binding on her:—Held: (1) the first decree operated as res judicata against deft., inasmuch as it was a decree against the widow as representing her husband's estate; (2) the withdrawal of the appeal by the widow was not sufficient to deprive the decree of its operative character in law.—GHCLABHAI v. BAI JAVAR (1912), I. The guardians of the U. Union appealed to quarter sessions against the said justices' order, but the appeal was dismissed on technical grounds & the order was confirmed. L. subsequently became chargeable to the W. Union as a lunatic, & an order of justices was obtained on Nov. 13, 1903, against the U. Union, the grounds of which order set up the before-mentioned order of Mar. 3, 1896:—Held: an abortive appeal against an order of removal not heard on its merits does not affect the order so as to rob it of its in rem effect.—UXBRIDGE UNION v. WINCHESTER UNION (1904), 91 L. 137. Judgment not given on merits — Insufficiency of pleading.]—If A. brings an action of covenant against B. & a special verdict is found, but upon the perusal of the declaration a fault therein appears, this judgment shall not be a bar in another action; because special & not given upon the verdict, but upon the insufficiency of the declaration; otherwise it had been, if given generally, for it should have been intended upon the verdict & merits of the cause.—EALLES v. LAMBERT (1650), 2 Hale, P. C. 393.

no bar to decision of appeal.]—Where cross-suits between the same parties on the same facts were tried together & judgment was given on the same day, but separate decrees were passed & an appeal was preferred against one of the decrees alone:—Held: the decree unappealed did not operate as a bar under Civil Procedure Code, s. 13, so as to preclude the appellate ct. from dealing with the decree appealed against. The doctrine of res judicata has no application when the very object of the appeal is to get rid of the decision, which is pleaded in bar.—PANCHANANDA VELAN v. VAITHINATHA SASTRIAL (1905), I. L. R. 29 Mad. 333.—IND.

c. — — —.]—From the decree in a suit for adjustment of accounts both parties appealed. Both appeals were decided by one & the same judgment. Two decrees were framed; but these were in substance identical. Pltf. appealed from the decree in one appeal only:—Held: his appeal was not barred by reason of his not having appealed also from the decree in the other appeal.—DAMODAR DAS v. SHEORAM DAS (1907), I. 140. ———.]—Absence of principal witness—Adjournment proper course.—(1) In an action by a wife for arrears of an annuity the husband claimed that the deed of separation under which the annuity was payable should be cancelled having, as he alleged, been obtained by fraudulent concealment of the previous adultery of the wife with F. No particulars of acts of adultery were pleaded. The judge found that the adultery was not proved. In a subsequent action for further arrears the husband raised the same plea, again giving no particulars of acts of adultery. It was stated by counsel & on affidavit that fresh alleged acts of adultery with F., also committed before the execution of the deed, but discovered since the first action, would be relied on. The county ct. judge, without hearing evidence, held that the issue of adultery was res judicata, & refused to try it:—Held: inasmuch as the issue in the first action was, in the absence of particulars of adultery, such acts of adultery as should appear in evidence, & in the second action, again in the absence of particulars, such acts as should similarly appear, the matter was not necessarily res judicata, & the case must go back for a new trial to ascertain the nature of the present allegations of adultery.

(2) There is no difficulty in seeing what, in its strict & proper sense the plea of res judicata means. If the res, the thing actually & directly in dispute, has been already adjudicated upon, of course by a competent ct., it cannot be litigated again. There is a wider principle often treated as covered by the plea of res judicata, that prevents a litigant from relying on a claim or defence which he had an opportunity of putting before the ct. in the earlier proceedings & which he chose not to put forward (LUSH, J.).

Parliament having subsequently been dissolved, & the late Member of Parliament not having been re-elected at the ensuing general election, the motion for his committal was renewed within forty days after the dissolution:—Held: the privilege of the late Member of Parliament extended over a period of forty days after the dissolution, & in the circumstances, the refusal of the former motion was no bar to the subsequent application grounded on the same contempt.—Re ANGLO-FRENCH CO-OPERATIVE SOCIETY (1880), 14 *Ch. G. afterwards, & during the lifetime of his mother, suffered a recovery of the same lands to the use of himself in fee. He died, in 1779, without issue, having by his will devised the lands to trustees, in trust to pay an annuity to his nephew, & subject thereto to his great nephew B. for life, with certain remainders over. The trustees entered into & continued in possession until the death of the annuitant in 1790, when they gave possession to B., who continued in possession of the rents & profits of the entirety up to the time of his death in 1824, & did various acts showing that he claimed & held under the will. On the death of G. without issue, the estate tail would have descended in moieties to two co-parceners; & at the time of the entry of B., in 1790, was vested as to one moiety in B., & as to the other in A.:—Held: G. was not remitted to his title under the estate tail, the recovery suffered by him having estopped him.—*WOODROFFE v. Pending the inquiry, defts., having discovered further instances of prior user, petitioned for revocation of the patent, & obtained an order for its revocation:—Held: for the purpose of the inquiry as to damages, defts. were estopped by the judgment in the action from alleging that the patent was invalid, & therefore, pltf. was entitled to substantial damages notwithstanding the revocation of the patent.

The order of revocation is in the nature of a judgment in rem which terminates the res, i.e., the letters patent, at the date when the order is made. . . . As regards the world at large, every one is bound by the fact that the patent ceased to exist at the date of the making of the order of revocation (FLETCHER MOULTON, L.J.).

That [R. v. Hutchings, No. 631, post] is no real authority as to the effect of an estoppel upon an estoppel, as it is called. It is true that the textbooks apparently do suggest that where that state of affairs does exist, the matter may be at large, & that Lord Selborne does instance the possibility of a judgment in rem having that effect, but, as far as any real decision goes, no such decision has been called to my attention. . . . The question, therefore, for me to decide is whether or not I can apply that principle of an estoppel upon an estoppel in the present circumstances. . . . I think I am not justified in deciding that I ought to apply a principle for which I can find no authority (PARKER, J.).—POULTON v. ADJUSTABLE COVER & BOILER BLOCK CO., [1908] 2 Ch. 430; 77 L. J. Subject thereto, A. was absolutely entitled to the estate. In a suit for the performance of the trusts, the estate was sold, & a fund was set apart to provide for the widow's dower, which was ordered to be charged with the legacies payable at her death, & A. was declared entitled to the remaining fund. The widow died, & no provision having been made for the children's maintenance under the discretionary direction, a younger child sought to obtain payment out of the dower fund:—Held: whatever his rights might be they had been concluded by the previous orders made in this cause.—*LIVESEY v. cession duty, & that they should pay her until further order an annuity of £1,500 free of all deductions except income tax; but no express declaration of her rights was made. This order was acted upon until 1882, when a petition was presented by the widow asking that the income tax which had been deducted might be paid to her, & that in future her annuity might be paid free of income tax:—Held: the order of 1861 amounted to a declaration of the right of the widow to receive the annuity free of all deductions except income tax, notwithstanding the words “until further order,” & the matter was res judicata & could not now be reconsidered.—*PEARRETH v. To proceed on execution—“Under which sheriff is in possession.”]—P. having recovered judgment against F., the sheriff, on Apr. 15, seized F.'s goods in Hampshire, under a fi. fa. in that action, & left a man in possession. On the same day F. executed a bill of sale to W., & a writ of fi. fa., in an action by W. against F., was lodged with the sheriff for execution. On May 1, F. was taken in Middlesex under a writ of ca. sa. issued at the suit of P., & thereupon P.'s attorney, at Southampton, immediately wrote to request the sheriff to withdraw from possession under the fi. fa. The officer received the letter, but his man continued in possession of the goods & did not in fact withdraw. The officer however told W. that he would hold for him under his writ. A summons to set aside the writ of ca. sa. on the ground that it had been irregularly issued “no return to the fi. fa., under which the sheriff now holds deft.'s property having been made,” was taken out on May 3, & on May 4 F. was discharged out of custody, & an order was made by consent that “P. should be at liberty to proceed on the fi. fa. under which the sheriff is in possession.” The summons was taken out & the consent to the order given by R., the London agent of W., who was the attorney for F. in the action of P. v. F., upon F.'s instructions. W. knew nothing about the terms of the order at the time it was made, & when he heard of it took no steps to inform P. that he objected to it, or that it was made without his authority:—Held: W. was bound by the statement, that the sheriff was in possession, contained in the order made in the cause of P. v. F., & consented to by R. as the London agent of W.—WITHERS v. PARKER (1860), 5 H. & N. 725; 29 L. J. Ex. 320; 2 L. T. 602; 6 Jur. N. S. 1033; 8 W. R. 550, Ex. Ch.

201. In administration suit—Disallowance of part of creditor's claim—Subsequent suit for account of disallowed balance.]—A claim was carried in by a creditor under a decree for the administration of the estate of A., a portion of which claim was disallowed by the chief clerk. The creditor subsequently after the assets had been distributed paid further monies on account of the estate & then filed a bill against the residuary legatees for an account of what was due to him under his original claim, as well as in respect of that which had subsequently accrued:—Held: the creditor was not precluded by the decision of the chief clerk from having an account taken of

B. having purchased the trustee's interest, commenced a second action for the same relief as that asked by the former action. Upon motion to dismiss the second action, as an abuse of the process of the ct. & as frivolous & vexatious:—Held: the action ought not to be dismissed in a summary way as frivolous & vexatious, as the motion gave rise to a question that required consideration, namely, whether the order staying the proceedings in the former action was equivalent to a judgment for debts.—*BEAN v. 209. Order made under mistake—Of law.]—A will proved in 1874 gave an immediate legacy of £200 to a chapel building fund, & also a reversionary bequest, payable after the death or remarriage of testator's widow. The exors. believed that these legacies transgressed the then operative Statutes of Mortmain, & an order was made in chambers dated May 8, 1876, directing that the £200 should fall into the residue. Testator's widow died in 1909:—Held: the representatives of the building fund were entitled to the reversionary bequest, inasmuch as the fund had other objects than those involving the purchase of land, to which the money might be applied, & the order of 1876 did not constitute an estoppel by res judicata, as such order had been in respect of another bequest, & had been based on a belief which was erroneous.—*Re SURFLEET'S ESTATE, RAWLINGS v. The file of the proceedings in a bkpcy. is not of a nature of a record, & does not create an estoppel.—Re BOND, Ex p. BACON (1881), 17 Ch. D. 447; 44 L. T. 831; 29 W. R. 574, C. A.

SECT. 3.—EFFECT OF RES JUDICATA.

SUB-SECT. 1.—AS AN ESTOPPEL.

A. In General.

213. General rule.]—(1) From the variety of cases relative to judgments being given in evidence in civil suits, these two deductions seem to follow as generally true; first, that the judgment of a ct. of concurrent jurisdiction, directly upon the point, is as a plea, a bar, or as evidence, conclusive, between the same parties, upon the same matter, directly in question in another ct.; secondly, that the judgment of a ct. of exclusive jurisdiction, directly upon the point is, in like manner, conclusive upon the same matter, between the same parties, coming incidentally in question in another ct., for a different purpose. But neither the judgment of a concurrent or exclusive jurisdiction is evidence of any matter which came collaterally in question, though within their jurisdiction, nor of any matter incidentally cognisable, nor of any matter to be inferred by argument from the judgment (per CUR.).

(2) A sentence in the Spiritual Ct. against a marriage in a suit of jactitation of marriage is not conclusive evidence, so as to stop the counsel for the Crown from proving the marriage in an indictment for polygamy (per CUR.).

(3) Admitting such sentence to be conclusive upon such indictment, the counsel for the Crown may be admitted to avoid the effect of such sentence, by proving the same to have been obtained by fraud or collusion (per CUR.).

(4) Fraud is an extrinsic, collateral act, which vitiates the most solemn proceedings of cts. of justice. Lord Coke says, it avoids all judicial acts, ecclesiastical or temporal (per CUR.).

(5) In civil suits all strangers may falsify, for covin, either fines. or real or feigned recoveries; & even a recovery by a just title, if collusion was practised to prevent a fair defence; & this, whether the covin is apparent upon the record, as not essoining, or not demanding the view, or by suffering judgment by confession or default; or extrinsic, as not pleading a release, collateral warranty, or other advantageous pleas (per CUR.). —KINGSTON'S (DUCHESS) CASE (1776), 1 East,

213 i. General rule.]—In order that the authority of chose jugée may be invoked, the litigation must not only be between the same parties & for the same causes or reasons, but must also be for the same thing or object.—STANSTEAD CORPN. v. BEACH (1899), Q. R. 8 Q. B. 276.—CAN.

213 ii. —.]—To establish plea of res judicata there must be a decision on the subject-matter of the litigation & between the same parties.—DUNLOP v. HANEY (1900), 7 B. C. R. 307.—CAN.

213 v. —.]—A finding to become res judicata as between co-pltfs. must have been essential for the purpose of giving relief against defts.—RUKHMINI v. DHONDO MAHADU (1911), 1 L. R. 36 Bom. 207.—IND.

213 vi. —.]—Pltf.'s father, claiming to be the trustee of a temple, demised temple lands in 1866 on kanom to first deft., & second deft. was the ultimate assignee of the kanom interest at the date of suit. Pltf.'s claim to the trusteeship was negatived by decree of ct. in 1894 when a third party was declared to be the trustee. It was found that pltf. was not the trustee at the date of the present suit instituted by pltf. for recovery of possession of the kanom lands from second deft.:—Held: second deft. was not estopped from denying pltf.'s right on the ground that he was no longer the trustee, though he would be estopped from denying the title of the temple.—THUPPAN NAMUDRIPAD v. ITTICHIRI AMMA (1914), 1 L. R. 37 Mad. 373.—IND.

213 vii. —.]—The three requisites of a plea of res judicata are that the action in respect of which judgment has been given must have been between the same parties or their privies concerning the same subject-matter, & founded upon the same cause of complaint as the action in which the defence is raised.—HIDDINGH v. DENYSSEN (1885), 3 S. C. 424.—S. AF.

213 viii. —.]—The requisites of a valid defence of res judicata are that the new demand must be for the same thing that has already been finally adjudicated upon, that it must be for the same cause & between the same parties.—BERTRAM v. WOOD (1892), 10 S. C. 177.—S. AF.

213 ix. —.]—In order to sustain a plea of res judicata it must be clear that the parties to the suit are the same as those to the previous suit.—PRETORIUS v. BARKLY EAST DIVISIONAL COUNCIL (1914), App. D. 408.—S. AF.

h. Foreign judgment.]—A foreign decree founded on for execution in this country affords only prima facie evidence of the truth & justice of the claim of pursuer, & is liable to be impugned on cause shown by defender.—SOUTHGATE v. The note was sued in the first instance before two justices of the peace. At the trial deft. demanded a jury, & on the jury failing to agree they were dismissed by the justices & judgment given ordering each party to pay his own costs. Pltf. afterwards commenced proceedings in the county ct. to recover the amount of the note with interest:—Held: the first suit was not res judicata. The magistrates when they discharged the jury were functi officio; at all events they did not finally settle the matter in issue between the parties.—CREELMAN

215. ——— Grounds of decision.]—By an agreement between two cos., one co. was to buy the business of the other co., the consideration to be paid in shares of the buying co., to be issued to the selling co. & divided amongst its shareholders. Resolutions approving of this agreement & also authorising the creation of the requisite new shares, all the shares authorised by the arts. of assocn. having been already issued, were passed at one extraordinary general meeting of the buying co., & were confirmed at a second meeting. A large majority of the shareholders of the selling co. assented to the agreement, & applied for & received what purported to be new shares of the buying co. Certain dissentient shareholders, however, filed a bill in Chancery & obtained a decision that the agreement was void. These shareholders were, afterwards, by way of compromise, paid a sum of money by the official liquidator of the buying co., then in liquidation, & the suit in Chancery was stayed. Certain former shareholders of the selling co., holders of what purported to be new shares in the buying co., then applied to be repaid the money which they had paid to the buying co. for premium & on calls upon their shares:—Held: (1) as the buying co. did really acquire, by a title which, though originally defective as against the dissentient shareholders, had been in the end confirmed, the property of the selling co., & as the shares were issued bonâ fide, the holders of the new shares could not now repudiate them; (2) the directors of a co., after a resolution to increase the capital of a co., by the issue of new shares had been approved of by two meetings, according to Companies Act, 1862 (c. 89), ss. 50, 51, could proceed to issue the shares, & it was not necessary, under sect. 12, to have the articles varied at two meetings & the issue of the shares authorised by two other meetings.

(3) The buying co. had brought against one of the holders of new shares an action to recover calls, in which action judgment had been given for debt:—Held: the judgment was conclusive, & this holder of shares must be repaid what he had paid for premium & calls on the shares.

(4) A judgment is not only conclusive with reference to the actual matter decided, but also with reference to the grounds of the decision, provided that the grounds of the decision can be clearly discovered from the judgment itself.—Re BANK OF HINDUSTAN, CHINA & JAPAN, CAMPBELL'S CASE, HIPPISEY'S CASE, ALISON'S CASE (1873), 9 Ch. r. Motion to set judgment aside—On ground of fraud & discovery of new evidence.]—An action in the supreme ct. of Sask. was tried by a judge of that ct., who gave judgment in favour of pltf. Defts. appealed from that judgment to the supreme ct., which affirmed the judgment & refused to order a new trial. Defts. launched a further appeal, to the supreme ct. of Canada, & before it was heard, moved to set aside the original judgment & for a new trial, on the grounds of fraud & the discovery of new & material evidence:—Held: the matter was res judicata.—WILLOUGHBY v. b. ———.] Res judicata ousts the jurisdiction of the ct., while estoppel does no more than shut the mouth of a party. c. Declaratory decree.]—A suit for partition of land was withdrawn as against one debt. who was entitled to part of the land. Pltf. & remaining debts. entered into a compromise in the terms of which the ct. passed a decree for delivery of a share of the land to pltf. The decree-holder having died without executing the decree, his heir now sued for partition of the land & delivery of the above share, joining as debts. the various persons entitled to shares:—Held: the decree in the former suit could only operate as a declaratory decree, & did not preclude pltf. from bringing the present suit.—BEEMABAI v. Some of the debts. in both families admitted pltf.'s claim & asked that their shares also should be awarded to them on partition. It was contended that the

B. In respect of What Matters.

(a) Matters of Law.

219. General rule—Reasons for decision.]—Before the passing of Local Government Act, 1894 (c. 73), pltf. was duly elected assistant overseer of the poor of a certain parish by the inhabitants of the parish in vestry assembled at a salary, in the events which happened, of £85 a year, & was duly appointed by a warrant of justices. In 1896 the Local Govt. Board, acting under sect. 33 of that Act, made an order conferring on the council of the urban district in which the parish was situate the power of appointing & subject as mentioned in Art. 6, of revoking the appointment of the assistant overseer of the parish. Art. 6 provided that "Nothing in this order shall apply to the revoking of the appointment of any person now holding office as assistant overseer in any parish to which this order extends, nor, without his consent, to his re-appointment, & every such assistant overseer shall continue to hold office upon the same terms as at present." In Sept. 1905, the inhabitants of the parish, without revoking pltf.'s appointment, & without his resigning, passed a resolution increasing his salary by £115 a year, & in Aug. 1906, two justices issued a warrant which, after reciting that the inhabitants had nominated & elected pltf. & had fixed the yearly sum of £200 as his salary together with such a sum as he might be allowed for work in connection with the registration of voters, proceeded to appoint him assistant overseer to perform the duties & receive the salary fixed by the inhabitants. In an action by pltf. against the overseers of the parish, who refused to pay the increased salary, it was held on Mar. 23, 1907, that pltf. had not been duly appointed at the increased salary, because, among other reasons, the power of re-nomination & re-election, which were necessary before the salary of an assistant overseer could be increased, had been vested in the urban district council. In Sept. 1912, the inhabitants, without any resignation of pltf. or revocation of his appointment, resolved that he should be paid a salary of £250 a year for performing the duties of overseer of the poor with certain exceptions; & in Oct. 1912, two justices issued a warrant which, after reciting that the inhabitants had nominated & elected pltf. & had fixed his yearly salary at £250, proceeded to appoint him assistant overseer to execute the duties & receive the salary fixed by the inhabitants. In 1916 the inhabitants again, without any resignation of pltf. or revocation of his appointment, resolved that pltf. should be paid a salary of £250 a year for performing the duties of overseer of the poor with the same exceptions as before, & again two justices issued a warrant reciting his nomination & election by the inhabitants & appointing him to be overseer of the poor & empowering him to perform the duties & receive the salary fixed by the inhabitants. In an action by pltf. against the overseers of the parish claiming a declaration that he was entitled under the warrant of 1912, or alternatively under the warrant of 1916, to salary at the rate of £250 a year:—Held: pltf. was not estopped by the judgment of Mar. 23, 1907, from contending that the power of revoking claim of the Desai dofts. to obtain their share in the village, was barred as res judicata in virtue of the decree of 1854, which awarded to them half a share in the village:—Held: the first decree was a declaratory decree & did not operate as res judicata in the present suit.—JAGU BABAJI v. BALU LAXMAN (1912), 1 L. L. R. 37 Bom. 307.—IND.

e. Effect of civil procedure code.]—While Civil Procedure Code, s. 11, prevents the re-trial of issues directly & substantially in issue in a previous suit, the plea of res judicata still remains, apart from the limited provisions of the code.—HOOK v. BENGAL ADMINISTRATOR-GENERAL (1921), 37 T. L. R. 378.—IND.

f. Action for possession of land.]—Although a judgment in an action of ejectment could not always be relied on as an estoppel because of its form & its fictitious parties, the judgment in an action for the possession of land, under the present procedure, may be pleaded as an estoppel.—KELLY v. BENTINCK, CRAIG v. BENTINCK (1902), 22 N. Z. L. R. 235.—N.Z.

g. Judgment in special case put hypothetically.]—The fact that a judgment has been given on a statement of facts in a special case put hypothetically is no ground why it should not operate as an estoppel.—KELLY v. BENTINCK, CRAIG v. BENTINCK (1902), 22 N. Z. L. R. 235.—N.Z.

h. Must be raised at trial—Cannot be decided on pleadings alone.]—The exceptio rei judicatae is a plea in bar, & can only be raised at the trial, & cannot be decided on the pleadings alone.—LAMB v. COLONIAL SECRETARY (1902), T. S. 319.—S. AF.

B. (a).

219 i. General rule.]—Pltf., on a motion by deft. for a new trial, submitted, in the belief that the case was concluded by a recent decision of the ct. On the new trial a verdict was returned for deft. Pltf. now moved for a new trial on a ground which involved a point substantially the same as that on which he had previously submitted:—Held: he was estopped from arguing the point, although he might, on the previous motion, have been mistaken in supposing that the case was concluded by any decision of the ct.—M'ROBERTS v. CARTER (1888), 9 N. S. W. L. R. 458.—AUS.

219 ii. —.]—Pltfs. owned land adjoining the yards of a ry. co., who in 1888 constructed a siding for pltfs.' use in their business. In 1901 dofts. succeeded to the rights of the co., & in 1904 removed the siding. Pltfs. applied to the Dominion Board of R. Comrs. for an order that the siding be replaced, & in February, 1906, the Board made an order restoring the spur track facilities formerly enjoyed by pltfs. The Supreme ct. of Canada held that the Board had jurisdiction to make the order:—Held: the finding as to the jurisdiction of the Board was binding upon dofts., & the question of jurisdiction, was res judicata.—ROBIN-

SON v. CANADIAN NORTHERN RY. CO. (1910), 13 W. L. R. 8.—CAN.

219 iii. —.]—Pltf.'s traction-engine having been injured by reason of the collapse of a township bridge over which it was being driven, & this action being brought against the township corpn. to recover damages for the injury:—Held: the question of deft. corpn.'s liability was concluded by a previous case which arose out of the same occurrence.—PIPHER v. WHITCHURCH TOWNSHIP (1917), 39 O. L. R. 244; 34 D. L. R. 702.—CAN.

k. — Construction of will.]—Testatrix by her will gave a sum to trustees upon trust to pay the income to her husband for life, & after his death to pay & divide the income equally between her five children for their respective lives, with a power to appoint the capital of their respective shares by deed or will. On an originating summons to which three sons were parties, an order had been made declaring that the children took life interests after the death of their father in their respective shares, with a power of appointment superadded, "the said respective shares to remain in the hands of the trustees during the respective lives" of such children. Subsequently, by an originating summons taken out by those sons, the question was asked whether in the event of the sons appointing their respective shares to themselves by deed they would be entitled absolutely to those shares subject only to the life interest of their father:—Held: the his appointment & re-electing him at an increased salary remained in the vestry after the order of the Local Govt. Board made in 1896.

No question of fact which was directly in issue between the parties to the action before BRAY, J., & which was decided by him, could be further litigated by either party, & the same would apply to the exact point decided by BRAY, J., whether it were a point of law or of mixed law & fact. But the reasons which led the learned judge to his decision upon the precise point do not bind the parties in a subsequent litigation (BANKES, L.J.).

The present applts., as overseers of the poor for the time being of this parish, are as privies bound by the actual decision of BRAY, J.; but neither party is estopped by the reasons on which he based matter was res judicata by reason of the former order of the ct.—ROOM v. BAIRD (1915), 19 C. L. R. 283.—AUS.

l. — Decree for foreclosure — Subsequent suit to try validity of mortgage.]—In a suit against a mtgor. who had mtged. reversionary interests in residuary real & personal estate to a co., a decree for foreclosure was made absolute in 1895, & the co. subsequently sold the properties. A suit was subsequently instituted against the co. by the mtgor., who alleged that the mtge. transactions were ultra vires the co. & the mtge. therefore invalid:—Held: the mtgor. was estopped by the decree for foreclosure from disputing the validity of the mtges.—GOLDRING v. NATIONAL MUTUAL LIFE ASSOCN. OF AUSTRALASIA, LTD. (1916), 22 C. L. R. 336.—AUS.

m. — Validity of will admitted to probate.]—The last will of deceased was duly admitted to probate by the ct. of probate for the county of C. There was no appeal from the decree & no application to have the will proved in solemn form. The widow of deceased brought an action against the exor. to have the will declared null & void & to cancel the probate granted:—Held: the question of the validity of the will was res judicata.—DICKSON v. DICKSON (1920), 52 N. S. R. 365.—CAN.

n. — Construction of decree by court.]—In reference to an application for execution of a decree, a ct. made an order between the parties construing the decree to award interest at a certain rate till payment:—Held: no contrary construction could be placed upon the decree in a subsequent application in the execution proceedings.—BENI RAM v. NANHU MAI. (1884), 1 L. R. 7 All. 102; 1 L. R. 11 Ind. App. 181.—IND.

o. Effect of order for new trial.]—As to the question whether an agreement was an enforceable contract a prior decision ordering a new trial does not operate as an estoppel.—GRAY v. DALGETY & CO., LTD. (1916), 21 C. L. R. 509.—AUS.

p. —.]—To a demand by F. for payment of an account, K. replied by pointing out errors & demanding payment of the amount of a cheque drawn by a third party, in the felonious conversion of which, he alleged, F.'s wife took part & that the rights in the said cheque had been transferred to him. The supreme ct. of Nova Scotia held that the whole letter was privileged, but ordered a new trial of the whole case:—Held: as the order was for a new trial without restriction & the evidence given on the former trial is not before the ct., the question of privilege is not res judicata by the decision of the provincial ct.—KINNEY v. FISHER (1921), 62 S. C. R. 546.—CAN.

221 i. Matter of mixed law & fact.]—On a previous suit a particular stipulation contained in a particular Kabuliyat having been held to be valid as between the parties, it is not open to the ct. subsequently to try the issue whether that particular stipulation is valid or not, the question being a mixed question of law & fact.—BISHNU PRIYA CHOWDHURANI v. BHABA SUNDARI DEBYA (1901), 1 L. R. 28 Calc. 318.—IND.

221 ii. —.]—A judgment in a previous suit between the same parties not based on a misapprehension as to a general rule of law, but deciding a question of mixed law & fact is binding as res judicata in a subsequent suit.—KOYYANA CHITTEMMMA v. DOOSY GAVARAMMA (1905), 1 L. R. 29 Mad. 225.—IND.

q. Order overruling demurrer—Not appealed against.]—A defence setting up non-compliance with a condition in a contract having been demurred to, & pltf. not having appealed against a judgment overruling the demurrer, the question as to the sufficiency in law of the defence was held to be res judicata.—GRAND TRUNK RY. CO. v. McMILLAN (1889), 16 S. C. R. 543.—CAN.

r. —.]—McKEAN v. JONES (1891), 19 S. C. R. 489.—CAN.

s. Order on objection to status of petitioner—Not appealed against.]—The preliminary objection was to the status of petr., & copies of the voters' preliminary objection was to the lists were filed but no other evidence offered. The ct. set aside the objection "without prejudice to the right of resp. if so advised to raise the same objection at the trial of the petition." No appeal was taken from this decision & the case went to trial, where the objection was renewed but was overruled by the trial judges who held that they had no right to entertain it, & on the merits they allowed the petition & voided the election:—Held: the objection raising the question of the qualification of petr. was properly raised by preliminary objection & disposed of, & the judges at the trial had no jurisdiction to entertain such objection.—PRESCOTT ELECTION CASE (1892), 20 S. C. R. 196.—CAN.

t. Decision admitting will to probate—Subsequent action to declare will invalid—Plaintiff not party to first contest.]—The high ct. has jurisdiction to entertain an action for a declaration of the invalidity of the will, notwithstanding the decision of a surrogate ct. admitting the will to probate, after a contest to which pltf. in the high ct. action was not a party, & the validity his decision (BANKES, L.J.).—JONES v. LEWIS, [1919] 1 K. B. 328; 88 L. J. K. B. 657; 120 L. T. 200; 83 J. P. 61; 17 L. G. R. 105, C. A.

220. Court in which estate to be administered.]—It would be a scandal upon the administration of justice, if, after we have stopped the suit in Ch., & prevented the receiver in Ch. from interfering with the assets, we were then to say, There are a great quantity of assets which we will not administer, but will send them back to be realised & administered in the Ct. of Ch. on principles which the Ct. of Ch. has borrowed from the Ct. of Bkpcy. of the will was not res judicata by the decision of the surrogate ct.—BADENACH v. INGLIS (1913), 29 O. L. R. 165; 4 O. W. N. 1495.—CAN.

a. — Subsequent action to declare confirmation of deed contained in will invalid.]—The will of a Mahomedan lady, which confirmed a deed of release of testatrix's property to debt., was admitted to probate under Probate & Administration Act, 1881, though pltf., who were her heirs, had entered a caveat against it. Pltfs. then brought an action to compel debt. to account for two-thirds of testatrix's property, a Mahomedan having only power to dispose of one-third of his property by will. It was admitted that, apart from the effect of the probate, the deed of release & the confirmation thereof in the will were of no effect, as having been obtained by undue influence, but it was contended that pltfs. were estopped by the probate from denying the validity of the confirmation of the deed contained in the will:—Held: probate granted under the Act of 1881 did not create an estoppel as contended.—KURRATULAIN BAHADUR (MIRZA) v. PEARA (SAHEB) (1905), 21 T. L. R. 650.—IND.

b. Judgment upholding validity of debentures—Debenture holder suing on his own behalf—Subsequent action against other debenture holders of same company.]—By a deed executed in 1895 property of a co. was conveyed to trustees for the holders of second debentures to be thereafter issued. The arts. of assocn. of the co. provided that no director should vote in respect of any matter in which he was individually interested. They fixed the quorum of directors at two. At a meeting of directors held on May 12, 1903, at which three directors (two of them being D. & K.) were present, it was resolved that certain second debentures should be issued in trust for D. & K. as security for advances made by them to the company, which debentures were subsequently issued.

At a meeting of directors, held on May 16, 1903, at which five directors (including C. & T.) were present, each of the directors present agreed to advance a certain sum to provide new plant, & it was resolved to issue certain second debentures in trust for those making such advances, as security for the same. At a meeting of directors held on June 25, 1903, at which C. & T. were not present, these debentures were issued.

At a meeting of directors held on January 20, 1904, at which K., D., & H. were the directors present, it was resolved to issue certain second debentures in trust for persons making advances to the co., as security for such advances, & in pursuance of this resolution second debentures were

As far as the record is concerned, the Assizes may be regarded as of one day; but that day is a legal day, which may, & often does consist of more than one natural day of 24 hours. The ct. will itself take judicial notice that the Assizes are continued from day to day (MAULE, J.).—WHITAKER v. WISBEY (1852), 12 C. B. 44; 21 L. J. C. P. 116; 19 L. T. O. S. 156; 16 Jur. 411; 8 Cox, C. C. 109; 138 E. R. 817.

issued in trust for C. & T. (directors). In pursuance of the same resolution second debentures were also issued to K. & D.

In the course of the present action, which was brought by a holder of first debentures, D. & K. applied to the judge for liberty to institute a joint action to establish their rights in respect of the second debentures issued to them. An order was made giving D. liberty to proceed with an action against the trustees of the second debenture holders & the co., for the purpose of establishing the rights of the appets. The action was brought by D. alone, & dealt with his rights only. It resulted in a judgment in his favour as regarded his debentures. The validity of the debentures issued to K., C., & T. having been challenged in the present proceedings by the other second debenture holders & by the liquidator of the co.:—Held: the judgment in D.'s action could not be relied on by K., C., or T., by way of estoppel.—COX v. c. Judgment for instalment of purchase-money—Due on contract for sale of land—Subsequent action for balance—Proof of title.]—The fact that in a former action for an instalment of purchase-money the deft.-purchaser raised no question as to title & pltf. vendor recovered judgment raises no estoppel against deft. pleading want of title in a subsequent action for the balance of the purchase-money.—MACKAY v. d. Order made in execution proceedings—Allowing claim based on deed of sale—Subsequent action on deed of sale.]—Pltf. purchased two distinct plots of land (A & B) from G. by a deed of sale. In 1884, in execution of a decree against G. plot A was attached & sold as his property & purchased by deft. Pltf. did not intervene & at that time took no steps to establish his alleged right to this land. In 1885 deft. obtained another decree against G. & in execution, attached plot B. Pltf. intervened, & claimed the property attached as his own under the sale-deed. Deft. disputed the sale, but the ct. allowed pltf.'s claim. Deft. did not file a suit to set aside this order. Pltf. then filed a suit to establish his title to plot A, relying on his sale-deed. Deft. again disputed the sale:—Held: the order in the execution-proceeding did not operate as res judicata, & did not estop deft. from contesting the validity of the sale-deed.—DINKAR

Default was made in payment of the instalments, & the decree-holder applied for execution of the decree from time to time & obtained partial satisfaction. In the meantime, the ct. of Wards took the management of the estate from A. & in the course of execution proceedings the original decree-holder died, & on an appln. for execution, N. then a minor, was substituted as decree-holder, & B. was substituted as judgment-debtor in the place of A.:—Held: B. was precluded by the previous proceedings from questioning the order of substitution.—NORENDRA NATH PAHARI v. The Order of the Medical Council was tendered in evidence:—Held: (1) (COZENS HARDY, M.R. & BUCKLEY, L.J.) the order was admissible as prima facie evidence of the fact that the Cliffords were guilty of acts "infamous or disgraceful in a professional sense," & there being no rebutting evidence, that fact was proved; (2) (GORELL BARNES, P.) the order was admissible as evidence & conclusive evidence of the fact that defts.' names had been erased from the register by order of the council, & might be admissible against defts. for some purposes other than the truth of the fact of misconduct to show the grounds upon which it was made, & that there was other sufficient evidence that the Cliffords had been guilty of professional misconduct.

c. Action on promissory note—Question of warranty.—In an action in the division ct. against the now pltf., on notes given by him for the price of a machine, the question of the warranty was tried, & decided against the now pltf.:—Held: the matter was res judicata, & the judgment in the division ct. was therefore a good defence, by way of estoppel, to the present action.—RADFORD v. MERCHANTS' BANK (1883), 3 O. R. 529; 3 S. C. R. 366.—CAN.

d. Mortgage decree—Subsequent inquiry as to order of liability of several defendants—Defendants estopped from denying priority of plaintiff's mortgage.—The usual mtge. decree with a reference as to encumbrances was made. Subsequently the master made a report finding that the pltf. & certain of the defts. had encumbrances upon the whole land. This was not appealed from. Afterwards an order was made referring it to the master to inquire whether as between themselves any one or more of the defts. was or were entitled to be relieved from the payment of pltf.'s mtge., & to fix the order of liability:—Held: defts. were estopped from denying the priority of pltf.'s mtge.—RENEWICK v. BERRYMAN (1886), 11 Man. L. R. 387.—CAN.

e. Injunction in action for infringement—Subsequent infringement—Defendant estopped from denying validity of patent—Or former infringement.—Pltf., in 1876, patented improvements in the mariners' compass, the chief features of which were an exceedingly light compass card. In 1885, deft., who had previously patented certain improvements of the mariners' compass constructed a compass card, & sold the same, admittedly an infringement of pltf.'s patent, & proceedings having been commenced consented to a for foreclosure—On ground that deed of first incumbrancer void—Suit by mortgagor against first incumbrancer for redemption.]—A second incumbrancer filed a bill in Grenada, to which the mtgor. & first incumbrancer were parties defts., impeaching one of the deeds under which the first incumbrancer claimed, & praying that the equity of redemption of the mortgaged premises might be sold. By a decree made in that suit, the ct. in Grenada declared the impeached deed void, the effect of which was to reduce considerably the claim of the first incumbrancer; he, therefore, appealed from that decree to the Privy Council, who reversed the decree of the ct. in Grenada, & established the deed in question. Before that suit was finally concluded, the mtgor. filed a bill here against the first incumbrancer for redemption, praying that the same deed might be declared void, which had been affirmed by the Privy Council:—Held: he was concluded by the decree of the Privy Council from raising, in a new suit, the question as to the validity of that instrument.

If a subsequent incumbrancer in this country files a bill for redemption of the prior incumbrancer & foreclosure of the mtgor., who are both parties defts., & in that suit the debt of the prior incumbrancer is established at a certain sum by the decree of the ct., it cannot be argued, that the mtgor. is not bound by that decree as to the extent of the debt of the prior incumbrancer, so long as the decree remains unimpeached. In the West Indies the relief given to a mtgee. is not foreclosure, but a sale of the equity of redemption; & such was the nature of the suit in Grenada. But the form of relief can make no difference in the principle, that the mtgor., being deft. in the suit in the same interest with pltf., the subsequent incumbrancer, must be equally bound by the decree which establishes the amount of the debt of the first incumbrancer (LEACH, M.R.).—FARQUHARSON v. SETON (1828), 5 Russ. 45; 38 E. R. 944.

perpetual injunction. In 1888, deft. constructed another card resembling pltf.'s in some respects, but differing in others, but the same combination of results were obtained in both cards, thought not in the same degree. Pltf. charged defts. new compass card as a fresh infringement & a breach of the injunction, & moved for an attachment:—Held: deft. was estopped by the injunction from questioning either the validity of the patent or the fact that his previous card was an infringement.—*THOMSON v. i. Acquiescence in judgment.—In an action en bornage between M. & B. a surveyor was appointed by the superior ct. to settle the line of division between the lands of the respective parties, & his report, indicating the position of the boundary line, was homologated, & the ct. directed that boundaries should be placed at certain points on said line. M. appealed from that judgment to the ct. of Review on the grounds that the report gave B. more land than he claimed & that the line should follow the direction of a fence between the properties that had existed for over thirty years. The ct. of Review gave effect to this contention & ordered the boundaries to be placed according to it, in which judgment both parties acquiesced & another surveyor was appointed to execute it:—Held: the judgment of the ct. of Review in which the parties acquiesced was chose jugée between them.—*MEROIER v. h. Motion of Crown for extension of time to appeal.—At the trial judgment was given for the suppliants, & the order for judgment was duly entered. An application by the Crown to extend the time of appealing from the judgment was refused. After passing of Supreme Ct. At the trial of the action the judge of the county ct. refused to receive evidence from deft. that the hereditaments were of greater value than £20 a year, & he gave judgment for pltf.:—Held: the decision of the judge of the county ct. was right; for by the dismissal of the summons the value of the hereditaments was conclusively ascertained for the purposes of the action, which therefore must be assumed to be within his jurisdiction.—SYMONS v. The plea in the present action then alleged the identity of the indenture in this & in the former action mentioned, & of the £600 & interest in this & in the former action mentioned:—Held: no estoppel, inasmuch as the existence of a usurious agreement was not directly in issue in the former action, but only the question whether the bond was given in pursuance of the agreement alleged in the plea, & the admission of the usurious agreement on the record in that action was not sufficient to estop pltf. from contesting it in this action.—CARTER v. 258. ——Matter not material.]—A native of Chili made his will in London & died. A caveat having been entered on behalf of his daughter, the exors. propounded the will in solemn form, alleging that testator was domiciled in England. The daughter pleaded that the deceased was at the date of the will & until his death domiciled in Chili, & that the will was not duly executed according to the law of Chili. The judge of the Probate Ct. made a decree by which he pronounced for the validity of the will, found that the deceased was at the date of the will & at his death a domiciled Englishman, & decreed probate to the exors. The daughter afterwards filed a bill against the exors., alleging that testator was a domiciled Chilian, that his will being executed in England according to English law was good by the law of Chili but so far only as testator could by the law of Chili dispose by will of one-fourth of his personal estate, & that the other three-fourths belonged to the daughter. The exors. by answer set up the decree of the Probate Ct. as a bar. An order having been made for inquiry as to testator's domicile, in an administration suit under circumstances which, it was contended, made it equivalent to an order in the suit by the daughter against the exors., the question whether the order was right was litigated between the daughter & the residuary legatee:—Held: (1) the decree of the Probate Ct. was not conclusive in rem as to the domicile, because the finding as to the domicile was not necessary to the decree; (2) the decree of the Probate Ct. was not conclusive inter partes as to the domicile, as between the daughter & the residuary legatee, for the exors. could not, by litigating in the probate suit a question of domicile which it was not necessary to decide for the purposes of that suit, conclude the residuary legatee as to testator's power of disposing of his property, & that as the residuary legatee was not bound the daughter could not be bound, since estoppel must be mutual.—CONCHA v. In an action by pltf. against deft. for indemnity, the declaration alleged & it was proved, that towing vessels was a dangerous business & that the danger was much increased by the loss of the rudder. It was also proved that pltf. might have replaced the rudder, & need not have entered the harbour in the night:—Held: pltf. was estopped by the judgment recovered against him by the owner of the schooner, from dis-

Judgment in action for trespass—Suit to discover title—Extent of estoppel.]—A judgment in favour of

O. to the corp'n. of G. for charitable purposes, subject to a covenant by the corp'n. that whenever a certain term of 99 years then vested in certain parties in respect of a particular farm should expire, then if any one of the heirs of M. should make request to the corp'n. within one year after the farm should "fortune to be void" then & so often as any such chance should fall the corp'n. should grant a new lease of the farm to such heir for 31 years reserving 20 marks rent & 20 marks fine, & to continue from time to time for evermore if any such request within that time should be made at the end of every lease. In 1723 a decree of the Ct. of Ch. was made ordering the corp'n. to grant a new lease according to the covenant, & in 1731, another decree of the Ct. was made supplementary to the former, but in these suits no question of perpetuity was dealt with, the A.-G. was no party, & the corp'n. did not dispute the right renewal. Successive leases were made by the corp'n., the last being granted in 1815:—Held: the decrees of 1723 & 1731 being made in suits not raising the question of perpetuity & to which the A.-G. was not a party, did not establish the validity of the covenant.—*HOPE v. 262. Recovery in ejectment—Action of trespass for mesne profits—Whether defendant estopped from denying trespasses before date of writ or after judgment.—To a plea of "not possessed" to a declaration in trespass for mesne profits, pltf. replied by way of estoppel a judgment for him in ejectment, in which his title was laid alternatively at the date of the writ, or on & since a prior day; & the replication stated that the action was brought for trespasses committed on & after such prior day:—Held: the replication was bad, as deft. was not estopped from denying trespasses before the date of the writ or after the judgment.—SCOTT v. REYNELL (1856), 26 L. T. O. S. 256; 4 W. R. 249.

263. ——— Estoppel as to duration of plaintiff's title.—To trespass for mesne profits defts. pleaded title to the lands in themselves during the time for which mesne profits were claimed. Pltf. replied, by way of estoppel, as to so much of the mesne profits as had accrued since a certain day named, that he sued out a writ of ejectment, for the purpose of recovering possession of the lands, wherein he claimed to be entitled from such day, & that thereupon such proceedings were had that he recovered the lands & possession of them:—Held: the judgment in ejectment did not operate as an estoppel with respect to the duration of pltf.'s title, & the replication was therefore bad.—HARRIS v. MULKERN (1875), 1 Ex. D. 31; 45 L. J. Q. B. 244; 34 L. T. 99; 40 J. P. 24; 24 W. R. 208.

264. Unsuccessful suit in equity—Suit dismissed for want of equity in plaintiff to displace legal estate—Action by defendant to restrain ejectment.—Deft. filed a bill against pltf. claiming a prior legal estate in certain mortgaged hereditaments, & that bill was dismissed upon equitable grounds alone, leaving deft. to pursue his remedies at law. Deft. then brought an action of ejectment, & pltf. filed the present bill to restrain him from proceeding with that action, alleging that deft. intended to raise at law the same questions as had been already decided in the suit:—Held: bill could not be sustained on the ground that the former bill had been dismissed only because there had not been shown to be any equity in the then pltf. to displace the legal estate.—WAINE v. CROCKER (1862), 3 De G. F. & J. 421; 31 L. J. Ch. 285; 5 L. T. 702; 10 W. R. 204; 45 E. R. 941.

The matter was referred to an arbitrator, who by his award decided by inference, but by inference only, that pltf. was the true & first inventor, & therefore the letters patent were not void. This might be collected from the award, although in the award it was not so stated directly & positively. In an action afterwards by pltf. against deft.:—Held: (1) deft. was not estopped by that award from denying that pltf. was the true & first inventor, & therefore the patent was void; such an award in that form was no estoppel.

He took proceedings against them in the county ct. At the hearing no counterclaim or set-off was filed or set up, but evidence was produced to show that he had been guilty of negligence. A verdict was given in his favour:—Held: resps. were not precluded from preferring a claim before justices against him for wrongfully & negligently damaging their materials, for the only matter decided by the county ct. was whether there was such negligence pltf. in an action for trespass to lands upon pleas (amongst others) of lands not pltf.'s & liberum tenementum, is not a complete estoppel, preventing deft. in another suit from questioning the pltf.'s title to any part of the lands. 267. Judgment for execution of agreement—Action by defendant to rectify agreement.]—After money has been paid under a judgment founded on the construction of an agreement, an action to rectify the agreement on the ground that such construction was contrary to the intention of all parties is barred.

C. & co. built a ship for B., & a considerable sum remained due to them, for which they had a lien on the ship. M. had made advances to B. An agreement was made between the three parties for sale of the ship by C., & for the distribution of the proceeds. The agreement was very obscure, & left it doubtful in what order the claims of C. & of M. were to be paid. After the sale M. sued C. for an account of the proceeds, & judgment was given in the Ct. of the County Palatine for carrying into execution the trusts of the agreement, & for the requisite account. On taking the account before the registrar, C. claimed to be allowed his debt, but the registrar held that M. had priority. The proceeds were amply sufficient to pay M.'s claim, but not C.'s also. The V.-C. affirmed the view of the registrar, & made an order for C. to pay M.'s claim. C. appealed, but the appeal was dismissed & the money was paid to M. After this C. brought an action to rectify the agreement by making it provide that C.'s claim should have priority over that of M. M. pleaded that the agreement having been executed & the money paid under the order of the Palatine Ct., C. was not entitled to any relief:—Held: the action must be dismissed, for that although, the question of rectification not having been before the Palatine Ct., there was no res judicata, C. could not come to have the agreement rectified after it had been worked out, & the fund distributed, under the order of the Ct. in the Palatine action.—CAIRD v. The owner of the trawler brought an action in the Admlty. Ct. & recovered a sum of money for salvage. Ct. from setting order was made for his personal arrest; but the order was not executed. Subsequently a fresh application was made for execution against the person of the judgment-debtor:—Held: the question as to the personal liability of the judgment-debtor to satisfy the decree was not concluded by the order made in the previous execution-proceedings for execution to issue against his person.—BUDAN v. up that the loss did not arise from any of the perils insured against.

As to a judgment being only conclusive as to the point decided, there is as to this in our opinion no distinction between a judgment in rem & a judgment in personam, excepting that in the one "the point" adjudicated upon, which in a judgment in rem is always as to the status of the res, is conclusive against all the world as to that status, whereas in the other "the point," whatever it may be, which is adjudicated upon, it not being as to the status of the res, is only conclusive between parties or privies (per cur.).—BALLANTYNE v. 270. Discharge of order nisi for habeas corpus—Order nisi obtained by fugitive offender—Subsequent application to Court of Appeal under Fugitive Offenders Act, 1881 (c. 69), s. 10.]—An order nisi for a habeas corpus was obtained in the K. B. Div. on the application of a person in custody under Fugitive Offenders Act, 1881 (c. 69), but was afterwards discharged. The affidavit upon which the order nisi was obtained stated (inter alia) matters material as grounds for the exercise of the power given by sect. 10 of the Act, but the order nisi was in form simply for a habeas corpus, & not, in the alternative, for relief to the prisoner under sect. 10. On the argument of the order nisi, the matters referred to in the affidavit as aforesaid were discussed, & the ct. pronounced them insufficient as grounds for the exercise of the powers given by sect. 10 of the Act in favour of prisoner. The order ultimately drawn up was, however, simply for discharge of the order nisi for a habeas corpus. An application was subsequently made to the Ct. of Appeal to exercise the powers given by sect. 10, as having original jurisdiction in that behalf under the Act concurrently with the High Ct. A preliminary objection was taken to the hearing of the application on the ground that the matter had been previously adjudicated upon by the K. B. Div.,

Subsequently proceedings were commenced by C. & H. against the P. co. to set aside certain appointments made under a power in the settlement in favour of L. who had assigned his interests to the co. for value, subject to a mtgc.:—Held: (1) C. & H. were not debarred from raising the question of the validity of the appointment on the ground that they had been parties to the compromise in the previous action, for the recitals showed that the questions "now in dispute" only were the subject of the settlement; (2) it is not in accordance with principle or authority to construe deeds of compromise of ascertained specific questions so as to deprive any party thereto of any right not then in dispute, & not in contemplation by any of the parties to such deed.—*CLOUTTE v. d. Order disallowing objection in execution proceedings—Subsequent suit for declaration of title.—G. brought a suit against I. for the establishment of her rights as purchaser of certain immovable properties sold in execution of a decree obtained against I. After the settlement of issues, but before the suit was finally disposed of, I. died, & his brother J. was made deft. as his legal representative.

J. consented to the suit being tried on the defence raised by I. & upon issues already settled. The suit was decreed, it being held that G. was the purchaser. In execution of this decree, under which G. sought to obtain possession, J. objected that he was entitled to a half share of some, & to the entire sixteen annas of the other, properties, & that his brother I. had no right whatever in the same. This objection was disallowed by the ct. executing the decree on the ground that it had not been raised in the original suit, & that, as the decree had been passed in the presence of J., he was not entitled to urge it.

Thereupon J. brought a suit against G. to establish his rights:—Held: the order passed in the execution proceedings disallowing J.'s objection was no bar to the suit under Code of Civil Procedure, s. 244.—GOURMONI DABBE v. JUGUT CHANDRA AUDHIKARI (1889), 1 L. R. 17 Calc. 57.—IND.

The N. E. Ry. Co. were, prior to Apr. 1881, liable to repair a certain highway ratione tenuræ. In Apr. 1881, an order was made under Highway Act, 1862 (c. 61), s. 35, & the co. paid a fixed sum under that order. In Aug. 1881, they were rated to the highway rate of their parish, & on appeal the rate was quashed. In June, 1897, they were rated again in respect of the repairs of the highways in the parish, & forthwith, appealed against the rate:—Held: the question was not res judicata, & the quarter sessions were not estopped from deciding otherwise in the appeal, for judgment in a concurrent or exclusive jurisdiction was neither evidence of any matter that came collaterally into question though within the jurisdiction of the ct., nor of any matter incidentally cognisable, nor of any matter to be inferred by the argument of the case, & therefore, although the judgment of 1881 was that the rate be quashed, & the question as to that rate could never be brought into question again, the construction of the Act was only incidentally cognisable.—NORTH EASTERN RY. 276. General rule.—The next of kin of an intestate filed their bill in equity in the Supreme Ct. of Newfoundland, against A., the brother & deceased partner of intestate, for an account of the estate of the father of A., & of intestate, possessed by A., & an account of the partnership transactions, & the dealings of A. with the estate since the death of intestate. The bill was taken, pro confesso, against A. in the colonial ct., & on a reference, the master reported that certain sums were due to the several next of kin on the account of the estate of intestate's father possessed by A.; but that no account between A. & intestate had been laid before him: the Supreme Ct. decreed that the sums found by the master to be due to the next of kin & the costs should be paid to them by A. The next of kin brought their actions in this country against A. upon the decree. A. then filed his bill against the next of kin & personal representative of intestate, stating that intestate's estate was indebted to him on the partnership accounts, & on private transactions; alleging various errors & irregularities in the proceedings in the Supreme Ct., & that A. intended to appeal therefrom to the Privy Council; & praying that the estate of intestate might be administered, the partnership accounts taken, the amount of the debt due to A. ascertained & paid, & the next of kin restrained by injunction from proceeding in their actions:—Held: (1) demurrer, for want of equity, would be allowed on the ground that the whole of the matters were in question between the parties, & might properly have been the subject of adjudication in the suit before the Supreme Ct. of Newfoundland; (2) as the Privy Council was the Ct. of Appeal from the Colonial Ct., & had jurisdiction to stay the execution of the decree pending the appeal, the Ct. would not interfere by injunction on the ground of error or irregularity in the decree of the Colonial Ct.

The plea of res judicata applies, except in special cases, not only to points upon which the ct. was actually required by the parties to form an opinion & pronounce a judgment, but to every point which properly belonged to the subject of litigation, & which the parties, exercising reasonable diligence, might have brought forward at the time (WIGRAM, V.-C.).—HENDERSON v. After the child's birth, the wife took proceedings against her husband before a magistrate, under the Act, for the maintenance of the child:—Held: the existence of the decree of judicial separation, whether as regarded as the foundation for the plea of res judicata, erroneously rejected by the inferior ct., or as ousting the jurisdiction of the inferior ct., was a bar to the proceedings inasmuch as the relief sought by the wife, was relief which she might have obtained & might still obtain from the supreme ct.—BROWN v. On Jan. 10, 1922, pltf. co. served notice of objection to the valuation list in so far as it concerned their property, & on Mar. 2, 1922, the assessment committee amended the valuation list with the result that the rates payable by pltf. co. were reduced. On Mar. 23, a new demand note was served on pltf. co. but no payment was made by them. Subsequently, a petition to wind up pltf. co. was presented by a creditor, but on Jan. 4, 1923, the withdrawal of the petition was sanctioned by the ct., & the ct. also sanctioned a scheme of arrangement which contained a clause providing (inter alia) that "all debts which on a liquidation of the co. would be entitled to any preference or priority in payment shall to the extent of such preference or priority & in so far as they shall not have been paid be paid in full by the co." On Jan. 10, 1923, defts. took out a summons, dated back to May 19, 1922, to pltf. co. to show cause why they should not be proceeded against in default of the payment of the rates. Pltf. co. did not appear on the hearing of the summons, & the magistrates, on defts.' applications, issued distress warrants. Pltf. co. claimed an injunction to restrain defts. from taking any further proceedings by distress to recover the rates:—Held: pltf. co., on the hearing of the summons for a warrant of distress for non-payment of the rates, could have raised before the magistrates the defence that the rates had ceased to be due by reason of the scheme which was binding on defts., as the magistrates, whose duties were not merely ministerial, had jurisdiction to consider the scheme as a defence to the summons, & the decision of the magistrates although given in the absence of pltf. co. was binding on pltf. co. in respect of all defences which might have been raised before the magistrates, & pltf. co. were, therefore, precluded from contending that the distress which was levied under the warrant granted by the magistrates was unlawful by reason of the provisions of the scheme.—*KERSHAW, LEESSE & Co. v. Board by order. Jurisdiction is by the Act given to the county ct. to make an order restraining the further commission of the offence, & ordering the offenders to execute the necessary sewage works to render the sewage harmless & to inflict penalties for disobedience to such order. Proceedings having been taken in a county ct. under the Act against defts. for permitting sewage to flow into a certain river, & neglecting to use the best practicable means to render the sewage harmless, defts. consented to an order declaring them to have committed the alleged offence & ordering them to execute the necessary sewage works to prevent its continuance. At the date of that order defts. were under the belief that the part of the river into which the sewage flowed was non-tidal. Subsequently defts., having been summoned for penalties for disobedience of the order, sought to show that the part of the river into which the sewage flowed was tidal water, & that as there had been no order of the Local Govt. Board declaring it to be a stream, they had committed no offence:—Held: the order of the county ct. was equivalent to a judgment, & defts. were estopped from disputing that they had committed the alleged offence, or from contending that the order of the ct. in so far as it applied to the locus in quo was without jurisdiction.—*RIVER RIBBLE JOINT COMMITTEE v. The trusts of the term were declared to be, by felling timber & setting the same, except ornamental timber, of which enough should always remain to "preserve the beauty of the place unimpaired"; or by sale or mtge. of the hereditaments, except the mansion house, to raise three sums of £10,000 each, & pay the same to three persons named. A bill was filed by a tenant for life, for the opinion of the ct. whether the estate comprised in the term, or the timber, was the primary fund for the payment of the sum of £10,000. To this bill demurrers were allowed. A bill was then filed by the trustees of the term, praying a declaration that they had a discretion which to resort to, & that the power of the tenants for life to cut timber was subservient to their powers. A motion was made in this suit for an injunction to restrain the tenant for life in possession from felling 700 oak trees, but it was refused, & the sale was completed. A bill was then filed by all the tenants for life in remainder against the tenant for life in possession, who was also the party entitled to two of the sums of £10,000, the trustees of the term, & the persons entitled to the third sum of £10,000 praying an injunction against the felling of the 700 oak trees, or any other ornamental timber in the terms of the settlement of the estate:—Held: (1) infant defts. who appeared by the same solr. as they did as plffs. in a former suit, were not bound by the allegations in such former suit, on the mere ground of being so represented by the same solr.; (2) acquiescence by one of several plffs. in an act complained of & proposed to be done by a deft., was a sufficient answer to a motion for an injunction against such act, so far as that plff. was concerned, but parties could not be held to acquiesce in the claims of others unless they were fully cognisant to their right to dispute them.—*MARKER v. A co. entered into a contract with a business firm to indemnify them against a particular claimant, the co. being at liberty to use the name of the firm in defending any action brought by claimant, & the firm agreeing to give all assistance required. At the time when this contract was entered into an action had been commenced by the particular claimant; it was defended by the co. in the name of the firm, & in their pleadings the co. stated that E. had become the surviving partner of the firm. Judgment was given in the action against the firm, & execution was threatened. E., who was a married woman,

Resps. again removed the paupers to the applt. parish, which appealed again, relying upon the former judgment in Q. B. as an estoppel. On a case stated by the sessions, confirming the latter order subject to the opinion of this Ct., it appeared that, in the former case, the sessions had stated that, if this Ct. held the objection good, the order of removal was to be quashed "for deficiency in the examination": it appeared also that the judgment of this Ct. was, simply, that the orders should "be severally quashed":—Held: (1) resps. were not estopped by the former judgment in Q. B., but might have shown, if they had been able, that it proceeded on matter of form only; (2) appls. were at liberty, if necessary, to show by evidence, which the sessions had not allowed them to do, that the judgment turned on matter of substance; (3) the objection, admitted on the present case to have been as above stated, was substantial & valid; (4) the quashing of the former orders by this Ct., being general in terms, & not explained by evidence, must be deemed a quashing on the merits; (5) if the provisional judgment of the sessions in the first special case could be looked to, the words "for deficiency of the examination" might have been explained by evidence, or by a special entry, to mean a deficiency merely formal, but unexplained they must be taken to import a substantial defect.—*R. v. It appears that the judgment-roll, as is frequently the case, had not been formally made up at the time of the trial, & was not in fact made up until after the suit in equity had been commenced, when it was required for the purposes of the case which pltf. was then setting up. In 1830, the trustees, by deed reciting that the debts & legacies were paid, conveyed the estate to C. for his life. C., shortly afterwards, suffered a common recovery, & then mortgaged the estate in fee to W. C. & W. afterwards filed a bill against the heir of the surviving trustee & against the eldest son of C. praying for a declaration that C. took an equitable life estate tail under the will, & for a conveyance of the legal fee to W. The son put in an answer submitting that C. took only an equitable life estate, & that the conveyance by the trustee in 1830 was a breach of trust, & asking for a declaration to that effect. A decree was made without any declaration, directing the heir of the trustee to convey his estate under the will to W., subject to C.'s equity of redemption, & was inrolled. After the death of C. his eldest son filed his bill against W. to recover the estate, on the ground that the limitation to the heirs of the body of C. was a contingent remainder, & that the trustees had committed a breach of trust in conveying so as to enable C. to destroy it by the recovery. W. by answer insisted on the inrolled decree as an adjudication on the question:—Held: (1) the trustees took a legal fee under the will; (2) the rule in Shelley's Case, therefore, applied, & C. acquired a good equitable fee by the recovery, because a general devise to trustees & their heirs under a will, the purposes of which required them to have some legal estate of freehold, prima facie gave the fee, & it lay on the parties alleging that they took a less estate to show what less estate would serve the purpose; (3) the trust to set & let, which could not be confined to an authority to let from year to year, & the direction as to the timber, were grounds for not cutting down this estate; (4) assuming the trustees not to have taken the fee, the estate for the life of C., which in that view of the case was in 1830 their only estate, was held in trust for C. only, & not upon any implied trust to preserve contingent remainders, & they were justified in conveying to C., though their doing so enabled him to destroy the contingent remainders; (5) as pltf. had not asked to be dismissed from the suit instituted by W. & C., but had raised the question of construction in that suit, he was bound by the decree, the direction in which to the trustee to convey his estate was a decision that he had an estate & that the trustees had taken the fee under the will.—*COLLIER v. B. was again dispossessed by C. & again brought ejectment against him, claiming the same premises as in the former action, & by the same title. On the trial, B. offered to prove the deposition made by a witness, since deceased, upon the trial of the former ejectment between A. & C.:—Held: the evidence was inadmissible.

I also think that the evidence was not receivable. A passage has been cited from the Com. Dig. In this suit resp. set up the indemnity given him by J., but it was held not to be available, & judgment was given against him. Resp. then sued applt. on the indemnity in a fresh suit, & judgment was given in his favour therein:—Held: the question was not res judicata by reason of the previous suit, for the defence was there held not to be available, because pltf. in that suit was suing in a different capacity from that in which he was now sued, & resp. had not, therefore, been before heard on the merits.—HACKING v. locality was prepared; D. lodged objection to the scheme, in so far as it localised minister's stipend on eighty-one acres of his land, alleging that these eighty-one acres were held under titles cum decimis inclusis, et nunquam antea separatis, & that in respect of certain judicial proceedings in 1795 & 1807 it was res judicata that these lands were so held. The proceedings relied on were as follows: In 1795 the then minister of B. raised an action of augmentation, etc., & produced a rental of the whole lands in the parish, in which he included the eighty-one acres in question as liable for teinds. The ancestor of D. " & the other heritors " lodged a minute stating (inter alia), that these eighty-one acres were held cum decimis inclusis, & craving that they might be struck out of the rental. On Dec. 2, 1795, the Teind Ct. pronounced an interlocutor ordering them to be struck out. Rectified schemes of locality were prepared, & objections lodged by other heritors, but the proceedings were not carried out to a final decree. In 1807 the same minister raised a new action of augmentation, etc., which, after certain objections were disposed of, proceeded to a final decree. In none of the schemes of locality since 1795 were the eighty-one acres included:—Held: the plea of res judicata was well founded.—DUNDAS v. WADDELL (1880), 5 App. Cas. 249, H. L.

R., the incumbent of a living, sent in his resignation of the benefice to the bishop, on the understanding that the resignation was not to be formally accepted, nor the benefice declared vacant, until a date agreed upon between himself & the bishop. Before this date arrived R. withdrew his resignation, but the bishop refused to accept the withdrawal, & at the time agreed upon declared the benefice vacant, after which the patrons appointed another incumbent, who was duly instituted & inducted into the benefice. R. brought an action against the bishop to have his resignation declared null & void. To this action the patrons of the living were parties, & the sole question was whether the resignation was effectual, & it was decided against R. that the resignation was effectual & complete. R. refused to give up the parsonage-house & glebe lands, & in an action brought against him by the new incumbent, for an injunction to restrain him from continuing in wrongful possession of the premises & for trespass, R. set up, substantially, the same defence as in the former action, namely, that his resignation was not effectual:—Held: as the question of the effectuality of the resignation was raised & disposed of in the former action, to which the patrons purposes. The co. then commenced foreclosure proceedings against the exors., C. & his mother, for whom C., without her authority, entered an appearance. The statement of claim alleged that the mtge. money had been raised by the exors. for exorship purposes & had been duly executed by C. as exor. & with the knowledge & consent of his mother, & alternatively that the two exors. had been guilty of fraud. No defence was delivered & the subsequent proceedings were served at an address for service given by C., which was not the address of his mother's residence, & she did not have any actual cognisance of them. The co. obtained judgment, & after the order for foreclosure absolute was made, the co. was entered on the Land Register as proprietor of the leaseholds in question, & put the property up for sale. The children of the testator, other than C., who, subject to their mother's life interest, were, with C., the ultimate beneficiaries under testator's will, then commenced this action for a declaration that the mtges. & foreclosure order were invalid as against them. New trustees of the will had been appointed before the trial of the action & were co-pltfs.:—Held: pltf. beneficiaries were not in fact represented by the exors. in the foreclosure action & were not bound by the judgment therein or, by virtue of R. S. C., Ord. 16, r. 8, estopped from establishing their rights.

The present action was instituted in 1905 by pltf. on behalf of himself & all other holders of first debentures claiming a declaration that certain first mortgage debentures were well charged on the property of the co., & a liquidator was subsequently appointed. In 1909 D. instituted an action for a declaration as to his rights against the co. in liquidation & the trustees for the second debenture-holders. In Mar. of the same year the husband brought an action in his own & his wife's name against the trustees of her father's will for an account of the said share. The trustees in their defence pleaded that pltf.'s right to an account depended upon the facts which were in issue in the first action. Before the hearing of the second action judgment was delivered in the first action establishing Mrs. N.'s right to a specific performance of the agreement to settle:—Held: (1) the second action must be regarded as that of the husband alone, & the judgment against him in the first action was an estoppel in fact to his setting up any right to an account of the share which that judgment had decided did not belong to him; (2) the pleading of the pendency of the action prevented any failure of the estoppel from the judgment not having been pleaded.—*Re DEFRIES, NORTON (OR NORDON) v. The exors. had also been registered as proprietors of the houses in question & were described in the register as "exors." of testator. When obtaining the loan C. produced the documents which his father had registered but did not produce the probate of his father's will or the land certificates, & fraudulently represented himself to be the person to whom the leases had been assigned. The co. advanced the money to C. without inspecting the register, believing that he was the absolute owner of the leaseholds, & in executing the mtges. C. in fact personated his father. Upon the instalments falling into arrear the co. made inquiries of C. & obtained the land certificates from him, & discovered that he was one of two exors. & had personated his father, but he assured the co. that the money was borrowed for exorship.

R. S. C., Ord. 16, r. 8, applies where the exor. or trustee in fact represents the beneficiaries whose interests it is his duty to protect, but does not apply where the beneficiaries have solid grounds for impeaching a transaction between a fraudulent exor. or trustee & pltf.—*Re DE LEEUW, JAKENS v. By another decree of June, 1853, when the A.-G. was present, it was ordered that the accounts should be taken, & that the testatrix's personal estate not specifically bequeathed should be applied in payment of her debts & funeral expenses in due course, & then in payment of legacies. The chief clerk's certificate of Dec. 1853 certified, amongst other things, that all the pecuniary legacies given by the testatrix's will, which were payable at her death, had been paid, & were allowed in the account of personal estate.

It being found afterwards that the legacies were a charge on both the real & personal estate:—Held: the A.-G. was not bound by the decree of 1853, & by the certificate which followed.—CRADOCK v. OWEN (1854), 2 Sm. & G. 241; 2 Eq. Rep. 381; 23 L. T. O. S. 19; 2 W. R. 319; 65 E. R. 382.

384. —.]—As a general rule, where one person's goods are lawfully seized for another's debt, the owner of the goods is entitled to redeem them, & to be reimbursed by the debtor against the money paid to redeem them, & in the event of the goods being sold to satisfy the debt, the owner is entitled to recover the value of them from the debtor; & the right to indemnity exists although there may be no agreement to indemnify, & although there may be in that sense no privity between the owner of the goods & the debtor. Deft. bought the business of an ironmonger in his own name for his two sons; he paid the greater part of the purchase-money. The banking account of the business was kept by him, & he drew the cheques on that account. A society having obtained judgment in an action against deft., certain goods of his sons were seized by the sheriff; the sons claimed the goods; but upon an interpleader summons taken out by the sheriff, the claim of the sons was barred, & the goods were sold. They realised £1,300, & this sum was paid into ct. in the action by the society against deft. as a security for what might be found due to the society from deft. upon taking certain accounts. Deft.'s sons were afterwards adjudicated bkpts., & pltf. was appointed their trustee. The defendant agreed with the plaintiff that, in consideration of his sons' goods having been seized & sold on behalf of the society in respect of an alleged claim against him, he would pay £300 per annum to pltf. until he should have paid a sufficient sum to pay the trade creditors of his sons in full. Pltf. having brought the present action to recover £1,200 due by virtue of the above-mentioned agreement, or in the alternative £1,300, the value of the goods seized:—Held: even if deft.'s express promise to pay £1,200 was not legally binding upon him, nevertheless the action was maintainable, for although the decision upon the interpleader summons did not estop deft. from showing that the seizure by the sheriff was unlawful, nevertheless he had by his conduct led to the seizure, & the goods of his sons had been legally taken for his debt, & deft., therefore, was bound to indemnify his sons, & pltf., as their trustee in bkpcy., was entitled to have judgment entered for him for the sum of £1,200, which he was willing to accept instead of £1,300, the value of the goods seized.

In order to bring the case within the general principle, it is necessary that the goods seized shall have been lawfully seized. In this case, it has been decided between the owners of the goods seized, i.e. the sons, & the sheriff seizing them, that the goods were rightfully seized; & although deft. is not estopped by this decision, & is at liberty, if he can, to show that the seizure was one

It was alleged that the equitable title was in other persons who were not parties to the action. The owner of the legal estate was not a party to the action:—Held: under the circumstances pltf. could not maintain the action.

It is true that D. was a witness in the action, but he is not estopped against anybody by what he has sworn; so that his being a witness is not equivalent to his being a party to the cause, & he might claim—I do not at all say that he would do so—the property himself, notwithstanding that he had sworn that it was not his. 391. — That land disgavelled.—(1) In ejectment for lands in Kent, pltf.'s case depended upon showing that the lands in question had been disgavelled by a private Act, which was alleged to have been passed in 2 & 3 Edw. 6. The Act, after proper search, could not be found. As secondary evidence of its contents, there was produced an office copy of a special verdict returned upon the trial of a feigned issue in 13 & 14 Car. 2, wherein the jury found that at a Parliament, etc., holden, etc., it was enacted, etc., in these words following to wit, etc.; the Act was then set out, whereby certain lands in Kent, including some held by one W. were disgavelled. There was evidence to identify the lands in question with those held by a person of that name at the time the Act was stated to have passed:—Held: the special verdict, being res inter alios acta, was not admissible per se, & it was not receivable as containing an authenticated copy of the Act, inasmuch as it was strictly the finding of a matter of fact, not professing to set forth a copy of the Act accordingly to its tenor, nor stating the title of the Act, so as to identify it with the lost Act.

(2) In order to show that the Act in question had been passed, a calendar was put in, purporting to contain sixty titles of Acts passed in 2 & 3 Edw. 6, of which that which was number 40, purported to be "An Act for disgavelling lands in Kent." It was proved to be the practice to enter upon this calendar, Acts of Parliament with their respective numbers, as soon as they received the royal assent. on a bond entered into jointly & severally by B. & C. to A. in the penal sum of £5,000, the condition, set out on oyer, after reciting that C. had been appointed collector of taxes, & that A. had consented to become one of his sureties, was stated to be that B. & C. should keep harmless & indemnify A. from & against all costs, charges, etc., which he should incur in consequence of his becoming such surety. B. pleaded, that A. had not, at any time since the making of the bond, been in anywise damnified by reason or means of any matter, cause, or thing in the condition mentioned. To this plea A. replied, that C. continued collector until, etc.; that, during the said time that C. continued such collector, & after the making of the bond, etc., there came to the hands of C., as such collector, "divers large sums of money, amounting in the whole to a large sum of money, exceeding £500, to wit, £2,006 7s. 10d."; & that C. did not pay over the same, or any part thereof to the receiver-general: & A., for assigning a breach of the condition of the bond, said, that, by reason of such default, he was called upon by the receiver-general, & forced & compelled to pay, & did pay to the receiver-general a large sum of money, to wit, £500, parcel of the moneys so received by C. as such collector, etc. To this B. rejoined, that A. was not forced or obliged to pay the said sum of money in the replication in that behalf mentioned, or any part thereof, in manner & form as alleged:—Held: (1) by this rejoinder, the receipt of £500 by C. was not admitted, & in the absence of evidence to show that some money had been received by C., nominal damages only could be assessed on the breach assigned; (2) the mere production of a judgment signed against A., under a judge's order, for £500. at the suit of the receiver-general, was not evidence of the amount of the damage sustained by A. in consequence of his suretyship.—*KING v. 395. —.]—Testator, in 1807, executed a deed of tailzie of his Scottish estates, limiting the same to various relatives, with clauses rendering the estates of the successive heirs substitute inalienable. In 1808, testator devised his English estates to three trustees in strict settlement, & gave them his residuary personal estate in trust, to lay out the same in the purchase of estates in England or Scotland, & to settle the purchased English estates to the uses contained in his will, & the purchased Scottish estates to the uses expressed in the deed of tailzie. By the will, power was given to the person entitled to the actual possession of the devised estates to appoint new trustees, on any of the trustees dying or declining to act. Testator died in 1812. On the death of D. the first party beneficially interested in the estates, there was a very large residuary personal estate, & he was succeeded in the estates by his son J., the heir substitute in possession under the deed, & tenant in tail under the will. A very considerable part of the residuary personal estate was invested by the trustees in the purchase of Scottish estates, & a small part only in the purchase of English estates, & these estates were respectively settled to the uses expressed in the deed & will. The trustees having died, & the representative of the last surviving trustee desiring to be discharged, a bill was filed in 1833 by the next friend of J., an infant, complaining that the trusts had not been properly executed, & amongst other things, seeking the appointment of new trustees, & a declaration of the ct. that the residue of the personal estate ought to be invested in the purchase of real estates in England. The earliest of the heirs substitute after J. interested in the estates were not parties to the suit, though others more remotely interested therein were, as also the representative of the last surviving trustee. A decree was made in 1833, whereby a reference was directed for the appointment of new trustees, & it was declared that the personal estate remaining uninvested ought to be invested in the purchase of real estates in England. J., having attained his majority in 1836, executed a disentailing deed, & shortly afterwards the uninvested personal estate was ordered to be transferred to him. He died in 1840 without issue. In 1841, a bill was filed by F., the next substitute heir in possession under the Scotch deed of tailzie, praying that the decrees & proceedings in the suit instituted on behalf of J. might be declared irregular, & that pltf. might be relieved therefrom:—Held: F. was not bound by the decree in the suit of J.—*FORDYCE v. 399. —]—By the law prevailing in Natal, the registered title of an innocent purchaser clothed with the legal estate, prevails over the title of a claimant of a mere equitable estate, although such equitable estate may be of priority of time. A. purchased from B. lands in the Colony of Natal, & registered same. A. afterwards mortgaged the lands to C., & delivered to him the grosse, or copy, of his registered title deed. This mtge. was also registered. Default having been made in payment of the principal & interest of the mtge. money, C. brought a suit in the nature of a foreclosure suit, & obtained a provisional sentence, by which the same was declared executable in satisfaction of the mtge. debt, & the lands attached for the amount due upon the mtge. Before any sale took place under such attachment, D. & E. obtained an interdict from the Supreme Ct. against the transfer, on the allegation that previously to the sale to A., B. had sold the lands to them, & that A. had notice of such previous sale. D. & E. afterwards instituted a suit against A., without making C., the mtgee., a party. The object of the suit was to set aside the original sale from B. on the ground that the sale & registration was a fraudulent transaction between A. & B., & D. & E. obtained a judgment, whereby the Supreme Ct. adjudged the transfer to A. to be cancelled & set aside. In consequence of the interdict restraining the sale, C. instituted a suit against D. & E. & A. to set aside the interdict & enforce the provisional sentence obtained by him. In this suit the only evidence of the alleged fraud between A. & B. was the judgment in the suit by D. & E. against A. The Supreme Ct. at Natal, acting upon that judgment, decreed in favour of D. & E. Upon appeal to the Judicial Committee:—Held: such judgment would be reversed on the ground that the judgment in the suit by D. & E. against A. was not admissible in evidence, being, so far as respected C., res inter alios acta, & binding only on the parties to that suit, & in the absence of any evidence of fraud in the original transfer between A. & B., the interdict obtained by D. & E. could not be sustained.—*NATAL LAND, ETC., CO. v. The return, being amended, stated that the committal was "by an order of the Ct. of Ch., made by H. Lord L., Master of the Rolls, of which the following is a copy," setting it out as before. The order stated that, prisoner being brought to the bar of the ct. under a commission of rebellion for not putting in an answer, & persisting in his contempt, it was ordered, on motion by counsel, that he be turned over to the Fleet prison, & remain there till he had answered, & cleared his contempt, & the ct. made further order:—Held: the order appearing by this statement of the Master of the Rolls to be made in due exercise of his jurisdiction, this ct. would not receive affidavits to show that the order was made in a private room & not in ct.

When the Master of the Rolls pronounces the place at which prisoner comes before him to be the bar of his ct., that is an adjudication which we must credit, & hold conclusive (LORD DENMAN, C.J.).—Re CLARKE (1842), 2 Q. B. 619; 2 Gal. & Dav. 780; 11 L. J. Q. B. 75; 6 Jur. 757; 114 E. R. 243.

416. ——— Boundary of highway.]—By 34 Geo. 3, c. 64, when the boundary of two parishes lay along the centre of a highway, justices were empowered, on information of the fact, to summon the surveyors of the respective parishes, near the parties & their witnesses, & finally determine the matter by order, apportioning the highway between the parishes for the purpose of repair. Forms of information, summons & order were given. By an order under this Act, the justices recited an information laid before them that one side of a certain highway was in, & repairable by, parish H. & the other side in, & repairable by, parish W., paying an apportionment; that they had summoned the surveyors, who attended, & that they had examined witnesses; & they ordered that the highway should be apportioned between H. & W., dividing it by a transverse line. The order contained no direct finding that the sides of the highway were respectively in H. & W.; but the statute form was correctly followed. On indictment for non-repair of the part allotted to H.:—Held: the justices must be taken to have considered the question, whether or not part of the highway was in H., & to have decided by their order that it was; & the fact could not be questioned on trial of an indictment, the subject matter being within the jurisdiction of the justices, & their finding of the fact conclusive.—*R. v. 418. ———.]—Indictment for non-repair of a highway, against the inhabitants of the township of H. averring them to be liable by prescription to repair such highways in the township as the inhabitants of the parish, but for the prescription, would have been liable to repair, with averment that the highway was in the township. Plea: not guilty. The prosecutors gave in evidence a record of a presentment by a justice, under 13 Geo. 3, c. 78, on his own view, that the road in question was out of repair; averring that it was in the township of H., & that the inhabitants of that township ought to repair it; the record showed a plea of guilty by two inhabitants of the township of H., a conviction before the sessions, & a sentence of fine:—Held: (1) this conviction was conclusive evidence against H., that the road was in that township, & though the presentment might be bad on error, for not showing how the township was liable, the conviction, before a competent tribunal & being unreversed, was not the less an estoppel; conviction not being impeached on the ground of fraud or collusion.

(2) By a local & personal Act it was recited that the highway in question was in the township of D.:—Held: the recital in the Act was not conclusive & did not open the estoppel.—*R. v. 419. ——— Encroachment on carriage way.]—Trespass for pulling down a cottage. Plea: Not guilty, by statute. Pltf. was convicted by three justices under Highway Act, 1835 (c. 50), for an encroachment on a highway. Deft., who was surveyor of the highways, pulled down pltf.'s cottage, which was what the conviction referred to, but which was not in fact an encroachment within the Act. No warrant issued directing deft. to do the act:—Held: above Act, sect. 69, required the surveyor to execute a conviction under that Act, by pulling down the encroachment though there was no warrant, & consequently, the conviction, though not itself correct, was a defence to this action, as deft. was shown to be in the position of a person bound to execute the judgment of a tribunal of competent jurisdiction.—*KEANE v. 430. Conviction of clerk of peace under 1 Will. & Mar. c. 21—& dismissal from office—Subsequent action by dismissed clerk of peace—To try successor's right to fees of office.—A clerk of the peace having received fees to which the justices thought he was not entitled, they withheld a portion of his salary, & upon a mandamus unsuccessfully resisted his claim, & thereby incurred costs, for the payment of which the quarter sessions made an order, which it was the duty of the clerk of the peace to enter on the records of the ct. & certify to the county treasurer for settlement. The clerk of the peace, conceiving that the order was illegal, because no full bill of costs had been brought before the ct., & also because he thought the costs were not such as ought properly to be charged upon the county rate, but should have been paid by the justices who by disputing his claim had improperly incurred them, declined to record the order or to give the necessary certificate. The quarter sessions, thereupon, referred it to the finance committee, to consider & report what ought to be done under the circumstances: & upon their report a charge was preferred against the clerk of the peace, in the name of the county treasurer, under 1 Will. & Mar., c. 21, s. 6, of having "mis-demeaned himself in the execution of his office." The matter was heard before the justices at the next ct. of quarter sessions, & they unanimously found that the clerk of the peace had been guilty of the offence charged against him, & adjudged him to be dismissed from his office, & appointed deft. to succeed him. In an action by the clerk of the peace, for money had & received, to try deft.'s right to the fees of the office:—Held: the justices in quarter sessions, being a competent tribunal to hear & determine the charge, & having determined it, this ct. could not question the propriety of their decision, & no such interest appeared in the justices, or in any of them, as to disqualify them from acting as judges in the matter.—

435. —.]—In 1842 a suit for declarator of marriage was brought against a lady, but after trial was dismissed in 1846. In 1875, after the lady's death, a second suit was brought for declarator of the same marriage, & for reduction of the former decree. In 1876 the second suit was held to have been barred by the plea of res judicata. On appeal:—Held: this decision would be affirmed.

Appl't. has not alleged any new matter whatever coming to his knowledge, which should entitle him to get rid of the former proceedings (LORD CAIRNS, C.).

I do not apprehend that we need go further than to say that this gentleman—who had the opportunity of having his case fairly heard thirty years ago—cannot now, after the death of the person principally concerned, be in a position to ask that the principle of res judicata shall not be pressed to its fullest & furthest results (LORD HATHERLEY).

When there is res judicata the original cause of action is gone; & it would be destructive of all certainty in the administration of law, in the status of families, & in the enjoyment of rights, if it were not held incumbent on any one attempting to get rid of a solemn judgment to show that he comes forward to do so with a reasonable promptitude & diligence (LORD SELBORNE).

The object of the rule of res judicata is always put upon two grounds: the one, public policy, that there should be an end to litigation; the other the hardship on the individual that he should be vexed twice for the same cause. It seems to me that nothing is here alleged that would have been ground for a new trial before, & a multo fortiori there is nothing alleged that would be ground for a new trial after judgment pronounced thirty years ago (LORD BLACKBURN).

It would be lamentable for the law of Scotland, especially with reference to the marriage law, if it were competent for parties to come forward again after a lapse of thirty years, & ask for a new trial with reference to matters which must have a mill by accidental fire, the term should cease, & the rent be apportioned; that upon such destruction on Oct. 30, 1869, the term ceased, & the lessor became liable to refund to the lessee such part of the rent paid in advance as on a just apportionment should be found due, & the lessee alleged in such action that $137.50 thus became due to him, for which he sued therein; that the lessor, the now pl'tf., pleaded in such action that the lease was not his deed, & issue being joined thereon the lessee recovered judgment for the sum of $137.50. The plea then alleged that the judgment remained in force, & that the rent sued for in this action was rent accruing due after Oct. 30, 1869:—Held: such judgment was a bar, for though the plea of non est factum did not put in issue the destruction of the mill & consequent determination of the term, yet these facts being necessarily averred in that action, & not denied, the lessor was now estopped from disputing them.—TAYLOR v. In an action brought by pl'tf. against deft. for damage done to the horses during the time they were in his possession, the jury, under the direction of the judge, found a verdict for pl'tf. & $80 damages, which verdict the judge subsequently refused to set aside:—Held: the finding of the judge on the interpleader proceedings formed no ground of defence to the suit for damages for the alleged injury to the property.—FARROW v. 457. Agreement to give promissory note & provide mortgage—Judgment in action for non-delivery of note—Action for failure to provide mortgage.]—Pltf. & deft. agreed that the former should give up to the latter a business which they had carried on in partnership, in consideration of pltf.'s receiving from deft. a promissory note for £730, payable by instalments; & it was further agreed that in case a certain mtge. of £2,000 on pltf.'s property should be called in before the note should be paid off, deft. should immediately pay the balance remaining due on the note, or find a like mtge., free of expense to pltf. Pltf., after the mtgees. had called in the mtge., but before the same was paid off, brought an action in the Exchequer on the agreement, alleging for breach the non-delivery of the note, which action terminated under a judge's order, by deft.'s giving pltf., among other things, a note for £505. Pltf. having brought a second action in this ct. upon the agreement, in which the breach assigned was, that although the mtge. money had been called in, deft. had neither paid the balance due to him nor provided a fresh mtge., whereby pltf. had been put to great expense in procuring the loan from other parties:—Held: a plea which set up in the division ct. for the Nov. wages, to which deft. entered a special dispute, denying pltf.'s claim & setting up the recovery of judgment in the bar. Thereupon action; & in Apr. 1913, began this action, in a county ct., claiming $225 damages for breach of contract:—Held: pltf.'s claim was not barred by the judgment in the first division ct. action, & he was the recovery in the former action afforded no answer to the declaration, the former action having been brought for a different breach of the agreement.—BRISTOWE v. FAIRCLOUGH (1840), 1 Man. & G. 143; 1 Scott, N. R. 161; 9 L. J. C. P. 245; 133 E. R. 281.

They subsequently offered to do what was necessary under the contract to complete the contract as being at an end. Resps. brought a second action for work & materials:—Held: the first action had not put an end to the contract, & resps.

First plea, as to £43 6s. 9d., payment; third plea, as to the residue, £356 13s. 3d., that pltf. impleaded deft. for the residue of the said cause of action, & that such proceedings were had that pltf. recovered in the said action £314 8s. as well for their damages in the said action, & in respect whereof pltf. had impleaded defts., as for their costs. Replication, that the residue of the causes of action in the declaration mentioned were not the causes of action in the third plea mentioned in respect of which the judgment was recovered. The jury found, that the residue of the causes of action in the declaration mentioned, were the residue of the causes of action in the said plea mentioned, & for & in respect of which the judgment was recovered. On motion for judgment non obstante Veredicto:—Held: (1) the plea must be taken to mean that pltf. had a judgment of the ct. in respect of all the damages which he sued for; that was, the same causes of action as constituted the residue of the causes of action, & which was the same as the ordinary plea of judgment recovered; (2) the plea was good in substance, whether the true meaning of it was, that, as to part, pltf. recovered, & as to the residue, it was found that no more was due, the omission to plead the latter part of the judgment by way of estoppel being matter of form, or pltf., having once sued for the same debt, & having had the amount assessed & adjudicated on, could not sue again for the same debt.—*STEWART v. He then brought an action against deft., declaring in a special count for breach of the agreement, & indebitatus assumpsit for the wages due for the year during which he had actually served. Pltf. in this action recovered the wages for the year, & also on the special count damages for the dismissal, but the jury expressly omitted to give any damages for the broken quarter. He afterwards brought indebitatus assumpsit for work & labour to recover a proportional part of the quarter's salary up to the day of dismissal:—Held: (1) the second action could not be sustained, as he had by the previous action elected to treat the contract as existing, & had recovered damages for its non-performance, & could not, afterwards, treat it as rescinded, & recover on a quantum meruit; (2) this defence was open under non assumpsit, as, due, it was agreed between pltf. & deft., that, in the event of the bill being dishonoured, pltf. should receive from deft. a warrant of attorney for the amount of the bill, with interest & expenses, & that judgment should be entered up thereon, but that no execution should issue upon such judgment until Dec. 25, 1848, & that the time for payment of the bill should be extended until that day; that the bill became due on Sept. 22, 1847, & that deft. was ready & willing to give & execute, & then tendered & offered to pltf., his warrant of attorney, pursuant to the agreement, & requested them to accept the same, & to extend the time of payment of the bill until Dec. 25, 1848, but that pltf. refused & neglected so to do, & in violation of the agreement, sought to enforce payment of the bill; that pltf. replied de injuria to such plea; & that deft. obtained judgment in the said action. The plea then proceeded to aver the identity of the bill & the causes of action in both cases; to this plea, pltf. replied, that they did extend the time for payment of the bill until & after the said Dec. 25, 1848, & that they had not, since the said recovery in the said plea mentioned, sought to enforce the payment of the bill, which still remained unpaid, & that deft. had not given or executed to pltf. a warrant of attorney:—On demurrer to the replication:—Held: the plea, though containing unnecessary details of the pleadings in the former action, was a good answer to this action, & the replication was bad.—OVERTON v. HARVEY (1850), 9 C. B. 324; 1 L. M. & P. 233; 19 L. J. C. P. 256; 14 L. T. O. S. 466; 14 Jur. 902; 137 E. R. 918.

463. — Judgment for interest—Action for principal secured by instrument.]—Defts., exors. of R., were sued upon a promissory note made by him more than six years before action whereby R. promised "to pay to pltf., £32 with interest thereon at the rate of 5 per cent. per annum." To take the case out of Stat. Limitations, pltf. relied upon a payment of interest upon the note made by defts. two years before in obedience to a county ct. judgment:—Held: a promise to pay the debt could not be inferred from a payment of interest made under legal process, & the debt was not taken out of the operation of Stat. Limitations.

Semble: pltf.'s right of suing for the principal secured by the note was not barred by the judgment for interest recovered in the county ct.—MORGAN v. ROWLANDS (1872), L. R. 7 Q. B. 493; 41 L. J. Q. B. 187; 26 L. T. 855; 20 W. R. 726.

464. Agreement not to enforce covenants of deed—Judgment in action on agreement—Action to enforce covenants of deed.]—An agreement between the administrator of the covenantor & the covenantor, not to enforce performance of the covenants in the deed provided the latter would pay certain rent, may be a good consideration, for a parol promise to pay such rent; & the enforcement of such promise is not open to the objection that it is seeking to vary by parol the terms of an instrument under seal.

Semble: a recovery in such an action would afford a good equitable plea in bar to an action on the deed for the same rent.—NASH v. ARMSTRONG (1861), 10 C. B. N. S. 259; 30 L. J. C. P. 286; 7 Jur. N. S. 1060; 9 W. R. 782; 142 E. R. 451.

465. Lease—Unsuccessful suit for relief—Second suit claiming same relief—But adding allegations of fraud.]—Pltf., on Nov. 3, 1860, filed a bill praying relief in respect of a lease dated in Apr., 1856, & other matters. A demurrer by deft. for want of equity was, on Dec. 6, 1860, allowed, & fourteen days given to amend, or the bill to be dismissed, with costs. The bill was not amended, & the order made was signed & enrolled. In Mar., 1861, pltf. filed another bill in this ct., setting forth the same documents, & praying for relief in the same terms as in the former bill; but the bill contained allegations of actual fraud in addition to those in the former bill. Deft. pleaded the whole of the former bill & the subsequent proceedings; that the ct., upon the demurrer, clearly decided upon the merits of the question between pltf. & himself, & determined the rights of pltf. & himself in respect of the matter; that this bill was for the same matter, & that the documents set forth in both bills were the same; but the plea did not aver that the allegations in support of the relief prayed by this bill were the same as the allegations in the former bill:—Held: the plea was bad in point of form, & it must be overruled, with costs.—LONDONDERRY (MARCHIONESS) v. BAKER (1861), 3 De G. F. & J. 701; 30 L. J. Ch. 895; 4 L. T. 538; 7 Jur. N. S. 811; 9 W. R. 763; 45 E. R. 1050, L. JJ.

466. — Judgment in action for breaches of covenants—Action to recover amount necessary to put premises in repair—On expiry of sub-lease.]—Certain premises were demised to the predecessors in title of pltf. for 61 years from Michaelmas, 1837, subject to covenants to repair & deliver up in repair. The premises were sub-demised to the predecessors in title of deft. subject to the same covenants. On Apr. 4, 1894, an action was commenced by pltf. against deft. for damages for the breaches of the covenants, & £1,305 was recovered, none of which was expended in repairing the premises. On Sept. 19, 1898, the term of the underlease expired, & pltf. claimed the sum that it would cost to put the premises into such state of repair as deft. would be bound to leave them at the end of the term, making due allowance for the sum of £1,305 they had received:—Held: the previous action was no estoppel, & the true measure of damages of the breaches of covenant was the cost of putting the premises into the state of repair in which the tenant was bound to leave them at the expiration of the said term, less the owing to pltf.'s personal default, & the order of dismissal became final:—Held: pltf. could not thereafter sue deft. on the basis of entries in pltf.'s books of account to recover the same money.—MUNDAR BIBI v. BAIJ NATH PRASAD (1919), I. L. R. 42 All. 193.—IND.

467. Promise to make settlement on marriage—Decree in administration suit on death of promisor—Suit for specific performance of promise.—On Apr. 1, 1845, J. wrote as follows to H.: "I will still adhere to my last proposition, viz., to allow Elizabeth, J.'s daughter, £100 per annum; & if you like the situation, one of my houses to reside in; & that at my decease she shall be entitled to her share in whatever property I may die possessed of." H. married the daughter, & received the £100 per annum during the life of J., who died in 1859, leaving his widow, one son & the daughter surviving. By his will he devised & bequeathed certain real & personal property upon trusts giving his daughter a life interest in one-third of all the property, & a contingent interest only in the other two-thirds. By a codicil he bequeathed her an annuity, but less than those which he gave to his son & widow. A bill was filed by the daughter & her husband, praying a declaration that, by virtue of the letter of Apr. 1, 1845, she was entitled to one equal third of testator's real & personal estate:—Held: inasmuch as testator had used a videlicet in the letter, parol evidence as to it was inadmissible; the words "her share" meant "her legal share," & all she was thereby entitled to was one-third of testator's personal estate, after payment of his debts & funeral & testamentary expenses, & costs of an administration suit.

A bill for specific performance was filed after the suit had been instituted between the same parties for the administration of testator's estate. The usual administration decree had been made, but no certificate issued in it:—Held: plffs. in the specific performance suit were not precluded from instituting it by reason of the decree in the administration suit & there had not been any acquiescence on their part.—LAVER v. FIELDER (1862), 32 Beav. 1; 1 New Rep. 188; 32 L. J. Ch. 365; 7 L. T. 602; 9 Jur. N. S. 190; 11 W. R. 245; 55 E. R. 1.

Mortgage—Judgment for principal & interest—Action on covenant to pay future interest.—A mtgor. covenanted to pay principal & interest on a day certain, & after that day to pay interest so long as any part of the principal remained due on the security:—Held: the liability on the covenant to pay future interest was not destroyed by a judgment for the principal sum & interest.—POPPLE v. 469. — Judgment in action on series of charges—Action on charge not included in first action.—Deft. charged her property with repayment of £100 & interest to pltf., & subsequently gave him four supplementary charges to secure further advances. She then gave him another supplementary charge to secure a further advance & his professional costs. Pltf. brought an action on the first five charges, omitting the sixth, which was mislaid, & obtained an order for foreclosure nisi. He afterwards found the sixth charge, & applied for an order extending the relief to that charge, but his application was dismissed with costs. He then brought a fresh action for foreclosure on all the six charges. Deft. took out a summons asking that the proceedings might be stayed on the ground that pltf. was estopped by the foreclosure order:—Held: the subject-matter of the fresh action was not the same as that in the first action, & in the circumstances pltf. was not estopped from setting up his present case, & deft.'s application must be dismissed with costs.—BAKE v. 472. Defamation—Judgment in action for words imputing felony—Second action for words slandering plaintiff in way of trade.—The declaration in an action for slander alleged pltf. to be a trader, & that the words were spoken of him as a trader. The words were "He cheated me," meaning that pltf. in the way of his trade was dishonest, "He is a thief & robbed me of £100," meaning that pltf. in the way of his trade had contracted a debt with deft., & in a dishonest manner avoided paying part of it. There were other similar words similarly explained in other counts. There was then an averment of special damage. Plea, judgment recovered for the same grievances. Replication nul tiel record. On the trial by the record, a record of a previous action for slander by pltf. against deft. was produced, in which the words were, "that thief is a villain, a scoundrel & a rascal, & I can prove him a thief any moment." In that action there was no inducement that the words were spoken of pltf. as a trader & no averment of special damage:—Held: the record produced did not support the plea that the grievances for which the judgment had been recovered were the same.—WADSWORTH v. BENTLEY (1853), Bail Ct. Cas. 203; 2 C. L. R. 127; 23 L. J. Q. B. 3; 22 L. T. O. S. 106; 17 Jur. 1077; 2 W. R. 56.

same pamphlet.]—Deft. published, in the form of a pamphlet, a report of the judgment delivered in a former action which pltf. had brought against him. The pamphlet contained no report of the evidence given at the trial, & there were passages in the judgment reflecting on pltf.'s conduct. Pltf. brought an action for libel in respect of such publication, & the jury found that the pamphlet was a fair, accurate, & honest report of the judgment, & was published without malice, & returned a verdict for deft. Pltf., thereupon, brought another action for libel in respect of the same publication, but he relied on other defamatory statements in the pamphlet than those set out in the statement of claim in the former action for libel. On an application to dismiss this action as frivolous & vexatious:—Held: (1) the questions for the jury in the second action for libel being identical with those decided in the first, a plea of res judicata must succeed, & the action ought to be stayed as frivolous & vexatious; (2) even if pltf. could rely in one action on one part of the pamphlet, & in another action on another part, such a course was an abuse of the process of the ct., & the second action should be stayed.

(3) The rule of law is, that the publication, without malice, of an accurate report of what has been said or done in a judicial proceeding in a ct. of justice, is a privileged publication, although what is said or done would, but for the privilege, be libellous against an individual, & actionable at his suit, & this is true, although what is published purports to be & is a report, not of the whole judicial proceeding, but only of a separate part of it, if the report of that part is an accurate report thereof, & published without malice.—*MACDOUGALL v. 474. Fraud—Unsuccessful suit in equity for relief against misrepresentation—Action at law for damages for misrepresentation.]—In an action to recover damages for a fraudulent representation, deft., having obtained leave to demur, & also to plead several legal defences, asked leave to plead, for defence on equitable grounds, under Common Law Procedure Act, 1854 (c. 125), s. 83, that pltf. had filed a bill in Chancery for the very same alleged grievances & causes of action, which Ct. gave judgment in favour of deft., & that pltf. had no right to maintain that suit against him:—Held: this decision in Chancery was no estoppel, & the plea would not be allowed, unless all the rest were abandoned.—COLLINS v. CAVE (1858), 27 L. J. Ex. 146; 4 Jur. N. S. 31.

475. — Unsuccessful suit for relief on ground of fraud—Suit for relief for breach of contract.]—

(1) Where a pltf. seeks relief on the ground of personal fraud, he cannot convert his bill into a title for relief on the ground of breach of contract. Consequently, where pltf. who had entered into an agreement with one of two defts. for the purchase of a business, filed his bill for relief on the ground that the fact of deft. & co-deft. being in partnership in the business was fraudulently concealed from him; & it appeared, as the result of evidence that the agent of pltf. was aware of the fact of the partnership & of a power which deft. possessed under the partnership deed, of buying up the acquiescence of his co-partner & further, that pltf. was contracting on behalf of himself & other persons, the latter of whom were fully aware of the state of the partnership:—Held: the bill should be dismissed, with costs.

(2) Where a pltf. having filed his bill for relief on the ground of fraud, fails, the dismissal of his bill does not prejudice his right to make application for relief on another & a different ground, as, for example, that of contract.—BURDETT v. HAY (1863), 11 L. T. 259, L. C.

In Mar. 1881, pltf. brought this action against deft. for damages for the loss sustained since the commencement of the county ct. action by reason of such fraudulent representation:—Held: pltf.'s cause of action was completely exhausted by the judgment of July, 1880, & the action would be dismissed with costs.—*CLARKE v. 478. — Judgment in limitation action—Action for non-delivery of cargo.]—A cargo was shipped by pltf. on defts.' vessel under a charter-party & bill of lading, not excepting the negligence of the master & crew. During the voyage, & through the negligence of the masters & crews of both ships, the vessel came into collision with another, & was so much damaged as to render it necessary to discharge her cargo at a port of refuge, & after temporary repairs, to complete the voyage in ballast. The master transhipped the cargo with the knowledge but without the assent or dissent of pltf., into three other vessels, under bills of lading excepting the negligence of the masters & crews. Two of these vessels with their cargoes were, through the negligence of their masters & crews lost before reaching the port of discharge. Defts. obtained a decree limiting their liability arising out of the collision to £8 per ton, & the proceeds were distributed to claimants, of whom pltf. was not one. In an action for non-delivery of the portion of the cargo lost:—Held: (1) defts. were liable; for the loss did not arise from an excepted peril, & the transhipment, though justifiable, was for the purpose of earning the freight under the charterparty; (2) judgment in the limitation action was no bar to the present claim, as the loss of the portion of the cargo, the subject of this action, was not caused by the collision in respect of which defts. had limited their liability.—THE BERNINA (1886), 12 P. Secondly, that after the death of L., pltf., as his administratrix for the benefit of herself as his wife ; & of his children, sued defts. in respect of the injury caused to them by his death, & recovered damages. Reply, that defts. were estopped from denying the facts relating to the accident as in the previous action they had pleaded not guilty & that L. was not received by them as a passenger, & those issues were found by the jury in pltf.'s favour :—Held : (1) the second action was not barred by the judgment & satisfaction under the first ; (2) there was no estoppel of which either party could take advantage as pltf. sued in a different right in either action.—LEGGOTT v. GREAT NORTHERN RY. CO. (1876), 1 Q. B. D. 599 ; 45 L. J. Q. B. 557 ; 35 L. T. 334 ; 24 W. R. 784.

money £65,000, with interest, a co. filed a bill of complaint in the English Ct. of Chancery. At the same time they lodged a claim to be ranked, for the same sum, upon the estates of a firm carrying on business in Edinburgh & London, which had been sequestrated in Scotland. In the claim, the co. described the debt as owing under the circumstances set out at length in the bill in Chancery "produced & held as repeated brevitatis causa." To the Chancery suit the trustee of the sequestrated estates was a party. The trustee having rejected the claim, the Lord Ordinary ordered a condescendence & proof. The proof was adduced on June 16, 1874. The Ct. of Session, & ultimately the House of Lords, held that the claimants were not entitled to the debt claimed against the sequestrated estates; & refused to sist the proceedings in the sequestration, pending the issue of the Chancery suit. The bill in Chancery as filed alleged certain indicia of fraud; afterwards additional evidence of fraud was discovered, in time to have it inserted by way of amendment. The bill was finally amended on Mar. 3, 1874. Subsequently a decree was made by the Vice-Chancellor & affirmed by the Ct. of Appeal, rescinding the contract, & ordering repayment of the £65,000; & a declaration was added, that pltf. co. should be at liberty to prove in the sequestration suit in Scotland for the £65,000. Founding on this decree the co. lodged another claim with the trustee in Scotland. Again the trustee rejected the claim, & again a condescendence was made up. The co. this time put their claim upon the allegations contained in the bill in Chancery as finally amended on Mar. 3, 1874. The trustee relied on the plea of res judicata:—Held: (1) the plea of res judicata prevailed because (a) the new allegations of fraud in the amended bill in Chancery did not constitute a new medium concludendi; (b) the alleged facts were within the knowledge of claimants before the proof was adduced in the former action, & might have been inserted by amendment in their closed record in Scotland; (2) no question arose as to the validity, or examinability, of the foreign judgment.

An action being subsequently brought by pltf. in the Ct. of Exchequer against the execution creditor for special damages resulting from the seizure of the goods:—Held: the claim of damages should have been made at the time & in the manner prescribed by the above Act, & Rule, & the order of the county ct. judge being "final & conclusive," the action could not be maintained.—DEATH v. Purchaser pursuant to a judgment in the vendor's favour gave up possession of the premises, but refused on demand to give up possession of the chattels. pltf., lodged the shares with deft.'s firm as security for an advance. Having received notice from the co. that they were about to register the shares in the name of deft., pltf. commenced an action in Ch. Div. of the High Ct. to restrain deft.'s firm & the co. from parting with the shares or registering deft. as transferee, concluding with the usual prayer for "such further or other relief as the nature of the case might require." On Feb. 23, 1882, defts. in that action consented to an order for the delivery up of the shares to pltf. forthwith. The order directed that "upon delivery of the deed or form of transfer & the securities representing the same, & upon payment of costs to pltf. & the mining co., all proceedings in the Chancery action should be stayed." The shares were not delivered up to pltf. until Apr. 28, 1882, when they were sold at a considerable loss. In an action against deft. in Q. B. Div. to recover damages for this detention, the jury found that pltf. did not authorise B. to pledge the shares for his own debt, or lend them to him for that purpose :—Held : pltf. was estopped by the consent order made in the Chancery action on Feb. 23, 1882, from recovering in this action damages for such detention, & the deft. was not responsible for the detention of the shares by the mining co. after the order had been made in the suit in Ch. Div.

Owing to an accident, due to the negligence of defts.' workmen, the work was not completed within the time specified. In 1906 defts. sued pltfs. for work done & materials supplied in respect of the refrigerating machinery of the vessel in question, & pltfs. in turn sued H. Pltfs. in their action with defts. counterclaimed the sum of £618 for penalties alleged to be due to H. Bros. At the trial of these actions judgment was given for H. Bros. for £500, & for pltfs. against defts. for the same amount. In their action against H. Bros. pltfs. incurred costs to the amount of £525 6s. 11d., but pltfs. did not put forward any claim in their action in 1906 with defts. in respect of these costs. Pltfs. now sought to recover the amount of these costs from defts. :—Held : the action failed inasmuch as the matter was res judicata.—FURNESS, WITBY & CO., LTD. v. HALL (J. & E.), LTD. delivery.]—A. brought an action for an attorney's bill against B., but only recovered a small sum for money lent, as there had been no bill delivered:—Held: A. might recover the amount of the attorney's bill in another action, brought after the bill was delivered, although this was a part of his demand in the first action; & it was not necessary that he should have been nonsuited in the first action to entitle him to bring the second.—*HEMING v. 518. — Unsuccessful action on bill of exchange by reason of execution of composition deed—Subsequent default in payment of instalment under deed.—To a declaration on a bill of exchange by pltf., as indorsee, deft., the acceptor, pleaded by way of estoppel, setting out the proceedings in a former action by pltf. upon the same bill of exchange, in which former action deft. had pleaded to the further maintenance a composition deed executed after action, by which deft.'s creditors, including pltf., agreed to release him from their debts in consideration of his agreement to pay a composition by two instalments, with a proviso that, on default in payment of the composition, the release was to become null & void. The plea then set forth that pltf. had replied to such plea in the first action the non-payment of the first instalment under the deed, & that deft. had rejoined, on equitable grounds, a mistake in non-payment on the proper day & a subsequent tender; that, thereupon, pltf. struck out the replication, confessed the plea, & taxed his costs under the rule of Trinity Term, 1853, which were paid, & that such determination of the first action estopped pltf. from bringing the present action. Replication that after the proceedings in the first action, & before the present action, a second instalment under the deed became payable; that deft. had made default in payment of it, & that thereby the release in the deed became null & void:—Held: the replication was good.—HALL v. LEVY (1875), L. R. 10 C. P. 154; 44 L. J. C. P. 89; 31 L. T. 727; 23 W. R. 393.

519. Fresh evidence.—A. filed his bill in the Ct. of Chancery in Ireland, to be relieved against a long lease granted by his ancestors, on the foot of fraud; but not giving sufficient evidence of fraud, his bill was dismissed with costs. Some years after, A. filed a new bill for the same purpose, charging fresh proofs of the fraud, which were not discovered pending the former suit. Upon hearing this second cause, the lease was set aside; & on an appeal, this decree was affirmed, but varied by consent.—COTTER v. BARRYMORE (EARL) (1733), 4 Bro. Parl. Cas. 203; 2 E. R. 138, H. 520. —.]—The jurisdiction given to the ct. by National Debt Act, 1870 (c. 71), s. 55, to decide upon petition as to the validity of a claim for the re-transfer of stock, which has been transferred to the National Debt Comrs. under the provisions of s. 51, is to be exercised in the mode in which the ordinary jurisdiction of the ct. is exercised. Therefore, if a petition for the re-transfer of stock is heard on its merits, & is dismissed on the ground that petitioner has failed to make out his title, he cannot, on the subsequent discovery of fresh evidence in support of his title, present a fresh petition for the same object, without leave of the ct. previously obtained.—Re MAY (1885), 28 Ch. 521. Set-off raised in former action — But not heard for non-compliance with formalities—Action in respect of claim made in set-off.—To a declaration in debt deft. pleaded, by way of estoppel, that he, deft., had sued pltf. in the county ct. for a debt, & pltf. had then attempted to establish as a set-off, the claim for which he now sued, & judgment was given against the now pltf. as to that set-off. Pltf. replied that he had not given any notice of his intention to rely on the set-off, in accordance with County Courts Act, 1846 (c. 95), s. 76, & Rule 17, & that deft. did not consent to his setting off the debt:—Held: the replication was a good answer to the plea of estoppel, since it showed that there had been no decision in the county ct. by which pltf. was concluded.—STANTON v. STYLES (1850), 5 Exch. 578; 1 cents on the dollar:—Held: the position of affairs having altered since the time at which S. had proved his claim, he was not bound thereby, & should not be restrained from prosecuting an action for his debt to recover the full amount.—LEE v. CREDIT VALLEY RY. CO. (1882), 29 Gr. 480.—CAN.

u. — Action to complete purchase of insolvent estate—Special damages—Not ascertainable until after judgment.—A merchant in Ottawa, Ont., purchased the assets of an insolvent trader in Hull, Que., but refused to accept delivery of the same. The curator of the estate brought an action in Quebec to compel him to do so & obtained judgment, whereupon he accepted delivery & paid the purchase money. The curator subsequently brought another action to have been incurred in the care & preservation of the assets from the time of the purchase until the delivery:—Held: these special damages, most of which could not be ascertained until after the purchase was completed, could not have been included in the action brought in the Quebec cts., & the right to recover them was not res judicata by the judgment in that action.—*HYDE v. a. — Action of ejectment—Subsequent action for occupation rent accrued after expiry of term.—In a former action of ejectment brought by pltf. against defts., mesne profits were claimed, but no evidence was given in regard to them:—Held: pltf. was not estopped from recovering in this action occupation rent for the premises since the expiry of the term.—ELLIOTT

(2) The N. E. Ry. Co. were indicted for obstruction of a highway. At the trial the judge directed the jury to acquit them on one of the counts on the ground that they were justified under their special Act in doing what was alleged in such count to be an obstruction. The jury found a verdict for defts. Prosecutors obtained a rule nisi to stay entry of judgment for defts. on the ground that such direction was wrong in law:—Held: such rule must be discharged, since, whether the direction was wrong or not, the entry of the judgment would not prevent prosecutors from bringing a second indictment for the continuance of the alleged obstruction, & therefore their rights would not be altered by it.—R. v. f. Continuing trespass.]—In 1887, defts. entered upon the bed of a stream between pltf.'s & an adjoining owner's lands & deepened it. In consequence of deft.'s acts the water flowed more rapidly & at less depth so that pltf.'s land was liable to trespass from cattle. Pltf. brought an action against defts. for trespass, & in Mar. 1892, judgment was entered. No further acts of trespass had since been committed by defts. The present action was brought in Nov. 1892, for a continuing lowering of the stream & interference with its natural flow: Held: pltf. was entitled to judgment.—CLARKE v. (2) An action of trespass had also been brought under that statute for the trespasses during the six months prior to the decease of the intestate, in which a verdict had been obtained:—Held: pltf. had not thereby precluded himself from the action for money had & received in respect to the previous working.—POWELL v. He then proceeded in the action of covenant for the purpose of recovering some interest which he still claimed to be due:—Held: the effect of the order was to prevent him from doing so.—JACKSON v. creditor levied execution against his debtor, & the sheriff took possession of debtor's goods; but before the sale took place debtor filed a petition for liquidation, & a receiver was appointed, who obtained an injunction restraining the sale on giving the usual undertaking to abide by any order as to damages. The liquidation proceedings became abortive, & a petition for adjudication was presented, under which debtor was adjudicated bkpt., & the sheriff gave up the goods to the trustee. The execution creditor then brought an action against the sheriff for damages sustained by his parting with the goods. The action was determined in the sheriff's favour, on the ground that debtor was a trader, & had committed an act of bkpcy. by suffering the execution. Afterwards, the execution creditor made an application in bkpcy. for damages under the undertaking given by the receiver, in which he relied on the same point as in the action, namely, that debtor was not a trader:—Held: the matter was res judicata, & as the creditor had elected to take his remedy at law against the sheriff, the Ct. of Bkpcy. could not entertain the question.—*Re BREMNER, Ex p. Corpn., who thereupon issued a summons under sect. 20 of above Act, charging defts. with carelessly or accidentally causing the damage. The justices awarded ptfs. the full sum given by way of satisfaction in the sect., viz. £5. Ptfs., then brought an action in the county ct. for £24 11s. 1d., being the balance of £29 11s. 1d., less the £5 awarded summarily before the justices:—Held: the action in the county ct. for the balance could not be maintained. It was essential to give full effect to the words of sect. 20, "by way of satisfaction," which meant full satisfaction.—BIRMINGHAM CORPN. v. ALLSOPP (S.) & SONS, LTD. (1918), 88 L. J. K. 530. In action to recover against executor's money due on accounts—Subsequent suit for payment of legacy—Power of court to inquire on what account money paid into court in first action.

—H. died in 1811, having bequeathed a legacy to a woman who afterwards married pltf. In Dec. 1825, the two exors. of H. gave pltf. a written acknowledgment whereby they separately & jointly acknowledged that they owed pltf. £150 for the legacy, & £50 for interest. In 1835, pltf.'s wife died. Matters of business having occurred between pltf. & the exors., in which mutual demands & accounts arose, pltf., in Sept. 1839, brought his action against the exors. to recover what he alleged to be due on those accounts, including the £200 mentioned in the memorandum, & interest thereon. In this action defts. pleaded separately, & one of them paid £46 into ct., which pltf. received, & abandoned the action as to him. Pltf. then filed his bill against both defts. for payment of the legacy, & in defence to the bill defts., amongst other things, insisted by their answers on Stat. Limitations, & that the action was a bar to the demand in equity:—Held: (1) the written memorandum amounted to an acknowledgment taking the claim to the legacy out of the operation of the statute; (2) whether it amounted to an admission of assets or not, it gave pltf. no right of action; (3) unless equivalent to an admission of assets, it did not create a personal demand against defts., enforceable in a Ct. of Equity; (4) it had not the effect of barring or prejudicing the right of pltf.'s wife in the legacy, or his title in right of his wife as legatee; (5) the proceedings in the action did not necessarily amount to an estoppel of the suit in equity, but, in order to determine the efficacy of the suit, it was competent for this ct. to inquire on what account the £46 was paid into ct., in the action.—HOLLAND v. CLARK (1842), 1 Y. & C. Ch. Cas. 151; 62 E. R. 831.

532. By claimant on interpleader summons—Money paid out to judgment creditor—Subsequent interpleader summons between same parties.—Goods, which had been taken in execution of the judgment of a county ct., were claimed by a person who, under the provisions of County Cts. Act, 1888 (c. 43), s. 156, deposited the value of the goods with the bailiff to abide the decision of the judge upon the claim. On the trial of an interpleader issue the claim was not established, & the money deposited was paid out to the judgment creditor. The money so paid out being insufficient to satisfy the judgment, the judgment creditor caused the goods to be seized again for the purpose of realising the balance of his judgment. Claimant again claimed them & deposited their value with the bailiff. Upon a second interpleader issue between the same parties:—Held: by taking out of ct. the money deposited by claimant on the first occasion, the judgment creditor accepted the money in lieu of the goods, & thereby estopped himself in injured party to sue for damages if a subsequent breach should occur. In the latter event the party may elect whether he will sue for damages or proceed for breach of the injunction, but if he should elect to sue for damages he can no longer rely upon the injunction so far as the particular

535. Parties.—(1) A bill of review, or a supplemental bill in the nature of a bill of review, is necessary where the title or subject-matter of the claim has been directly adjudicated upon in a former suit by a decree declaring or assuming a right, or, in the case of a dismissal of a bill, negating it: but an order of dismissal is a bar only when the Ct. has thereby determined that pltf. had no title to the relief sought by his bill, & therefore, the dismissal of so much of a bill as relates to an issue raised by it which is irrelevant to the relief prayed, is no bar to a new bill by the same party for a different object depending upon the same issue.

(2) The proper test by which to try whether a bill, which recites a decree & proceedings in a former suit, is, in reference to such decree, to be considered a supplemental bill in the nature of a bill of review, is to see whether, if such decree & proceedings were omitted from the bill, they could be effectually pleaded in bar to it: for which purpose it is not sufficient that pltf.'s claim in the second suit depends upon a determination of some issue at variance with the determination of the same issue in the former suit, unless such issue be relevant to the objects of both suits, & be raised between the parties in the same rights & in reference to the same subject-matter of claim.

went to reside with her relatives in England. The husband raised a suit in the Arches Ct. of Canterbury for restitution of conjugal rights, which was met by a responsive allegation by the wife, praying for divorce a mensa et toro, on the ground of cruelty & adultery committed in Scotland. She obtained sentence of divorce. The wife now raised an action of divorce in the Scottish Cts.:—Held: as she was not the mover in the English suit, but had come into Ct. as deft. in that suit, she was not barred from seeking the more extensive remedies open to her by the law of Scotland.—*GEILS v. In 1909 these new trustees suing in their capacity as trustees, brought an action against the representatives of deceased trustee for recovery of funds which they alleged had been lost to the trust estate through his negligence. Defendants pleaded that the pursuers were barred by mora, & by the fact that they had themselves been guilty of negligence which had contributed to the loss:—Held: as the pursuers were suing as trustees for behoof of the beneficiaries whom they represented, the plea of bar stated against them was unavailing.—*SCHUBZ v. His father thereupon brought an action of damages in respect of his son's death against a ry. co., owing to whose fault, he averred, the accident had happened:—Held: pursuer's claim was excluded by sect. 11 of the Act, on account of his son having recovered compensation from his employers.—*GRAY v. (3) A purchaser, from the trustees under a will of 1818, of part of the devised estates, filed a bill against the trustees & the parties beneficially interested, suggesting that the will had been obtained by fraud, & was invalid, but praying no relief on that supposition, but only that the validity of the will might be inquired into, & that, if it should be found to be valid, the contract might be specifically performed. At the hearing, the bill was dismissed as against all defts., except the trustees, & that part of it which went to impeach the will was dismissed as against the trustees also, & the usual reference was directed as to title, & the Master having reported in favour of the title, a decree was ultimately made for specific performance. Some years after, same pltf. filed another bill against the parties in possession of the rest of the estates under the will of 1818, reciting the former decree & proceedings; but charging that the will of 1818 had been obtained by fraud & when testator was incompetent, & praying that it might be set aside, & that pltf. might be declared entitled to the estates under a limitation in a prior will of 1815, under which, supposing the will of 1818 to be invalid, his title had just accrued:—Held: the decree & proceedings in the former suit were no bar to the institution of the second, on the ground: (a) the issue raised by the first suit as to the validity of the will of 1818 was not relevant to the object of that suit; (b) the two suits were not brought by pltf. in the same right; (c) or for the same subject-matter of claim.—*BAINBRIGGE v. Deft. E., who was in charge of one branch, borrowed money from pltf. for the purposes of the business, & gave pltf. a promissory note therefor, signed by E. in the firm's name. The money actually went into the business. Deft. G. set up that he retired from the partnership six months before the note was made. In fact, McN., the third partner, had, about that time, bought G.'s interest in the business; but E. was not aware of it:—Held: the fact that judgment had been entered by default against deft. & several creditor, has concurrent remedies against the estate of a deceased partner & the surviving partner; & it makes no difference which remedy he pursues first. But it is necessary that the surviving partner should be present at taking the accounts of the estate of the deceased partner, & that the partnership creditor should not come into competition with the separate creditors of the deceased partner.

(2) A father & son being in partnership became indebted to pltf. who were bankers. The son died, & the father brought an action, & obtained judgment for the administration of his son's estate. Pltf. carried on a claim for the debt against the separate estate, being at that time unable to prove the existence of a partnership, & were declared entitled to a dividend. Afterwards the father died, & pltf. having obtained proof of the partnership, brought an action to make his estate liable for the partnership debt:—Held: the proceedings in the previous action did not constitute a res judicata or estoppel so as to prevent pltf. from recovering the debt; but they were put under an undertaking to postpone their dividend on the son's separate estate to the claims of his separate creditors.

(3) In order to protect each of the joint-debtors, the law treats the cause of action as being a joint one, & as capable of being merged, whenever it is pursued to a judgment. It is absorbed & merged in the judgment, which is recovered against one of the debtors, not only as against him but as against all the rest (BOWEN, L.J.).—Re HODGSON, BECKETT v. A. signed judgment against B.:—Held: although B., C., & D. were sued as jointly liable, & judgment was signed against B., yet that was not a bar to further proceedings against C. & D., the general rule of law being no longer applicable to cases falling under Ord. 14, r. 5.—*WALTON (FRANCIS) & CO. v. 551. — Whether action maintainable against other contractors on collateral agreement.]—(1) A promise in writing, signed by the party chargeable thereby, to pay his proportion of a joint debt more than six years old, is a sufficient compliance with Statute of Frauds Amendment Act, 1828 (c. 14), s. 1, to take the case out of Stat. Limitations, though no amount is specified in the promise, & a pltf. suing on such promise is not confined to nominal damages, but may recover the whole of such proportion upon proving the amount by extrinsic evidence.

(2) A. & B. were jointly indebted to C. After more than six years had elapsed since the debt accrued, A. promised in writing signed by him to pay his proportion when applied to. Afterwards, C. sued A. & B. jointly, in indebitatus assumpsit, on the original joint cause of action. B. pleaded the general issue, & A. pleaded the general issue & Stat. Limitations. A verdict passed against B. on the general issue, & for A. upon the general issue & upon the issue on Stat. Limitations, & judgment was entered for C. against B., & for A. against C. C. afterwards brought a fresh action against A. & declared specially on the new promise to pay his proportion:—Held: neither the recovery against B. nor the verdict & judgment for A. were any answer to the action against A. on the new promise.—*LECHMERE v. At the trial, by consent, a verdict was found for pltf. for 40s. & judgment entered accordingly. After issuing execution against R., pltf., under the Rules in force before 1883, took out a summons for liberty to amend the judgment (& the pleadings if necessary) by striking the words “R. sued as” from the title of the action; to enter judgment against R. & Co. so as to correspond with the writ, to issue execution against C., on the ground that C. had been since discovered to be a partner in the firm:—Held: (1) that the proceedings having been conducted against R. only, & judgment having been signed by consent against him alone, the judgment could not be converted into a judgment against the firm.

567. — Judgment not in ordinary form—Second action of trover.]—Pltfs. received from a firm abroad a parcel of precious stones to be placed on view at a certain exhibition. The owners instructed pltfs. to sell the stones if not less than the sum of £750 could be obtained for them, but otherwise the same were to be returned to the owners. While at the exhibition the stones were not sold, & therefore were restored to pltfs. Shortly afterwards pltfs. were prevailed upon to allow B., who was a jeweller, to have the stones on approval. B. offered £300 for the stones, but declined to give £750 for them. That offer was communicated to the owners, B. retaining the stones pending the receipt of the owners' instructions concerning them. B.'s offer was refused by the owners, but before their instructions were received B. had sold the stones to defts., who acted bonâ fide in the transaction, for the sum of £300. On pltfs. demanding an immediate return of the stones they discovered that B. had parted with them. Thereupon pltfs. brought an action against B. for £750 or alternatively for the return of the stones & damages. Ultimately judgment for £750 & costs against B. was consented to, but subsequently B. was adjudicated bkpt. Pltfs. consequently brought an action against defts. to recover possession of the stones or £750, their value, or damages, £750, for their detention:—Held: pltfs. were debarred from recovering in their action against defts. by reason of the form of procedure in their action against B., the judgment consented to by them not being an ordinary judgment in detinue, but one that effected a legal transfer of the stones to B.—*BRADLEY & COHN, LTD. v. 568. Two causes of action—Judgment in action for rescission of contract—Claim for damages for fraud.]—(1) Pltfs. in their statement of claim alleged that they were induced by false & fraudulent misrepresentations, made to them by the first debt. acting as the agent & with the knowledge & approval of second defts., the co., to enter into an agreement to become one of the founders of the co., & for that purpose to pay to the co. the sum of £105, & they claimed against both defts. damages for the fraud; & alternatively they alleged that by reason of the false & fraudulent misrepresentations they were entitled to rescind the agreement, & they claimed against the co., rescission of the agreement, & the repayment of the £105 with interest. The co. made default in delivering a defence & upon motion for judgment against the co., on the statement of claim pltfs. recovered final judgment against them on the claim for rescission & the payment of the £105. The co. did not repay the £105. The first debt. delivered a defence & the action proceeded against him. At the trial the jury found a verdict for pltfs. against him for £105 damages. He appealed & contended that, defts. being joint tortfeasors, pltfs. by recovering judgment against the co. were debarred from proceeding with the action against him:—Held: pltfs. were entitled to recover, as there were two causes of action, one against the co. for rescission of the agreement, & the repayment of the £105, in respect of which fraud was not a necessary element, & the other against both defts. to recover damages for fraud; & the judgment against the co. on the claim for rescission was no bar to the claim against the first debt. for damages for fraud.

(2) Pltfs.' claims were in respect of the same object matter, & having recovered judgment against the co., for the repayment of the £105, they could not afterwards recover judgment for the same sum against the first debt. in respect of the same misrepresentation (BANKES, L.J.).

570. —.]—Funds, subject to the trusts of a settlement, were invested in Exchequer bills, on the sale of which the proceeds were paid to the account of a firm of solrs., F., S., & F., at their bankers. The funds were afterwards advanced on a mtge. of house property in a new neighbourhood, & of inadequate value. At that date there were no trustees of the settlement, & the mtge. was taken in the names of S. & two other persons who were then proposed, & shortly afterwards appointed new trustees, & never repudiated the transaction. S. was the member of his firm who acted for them in all the matters, & for the work which he did the firm, by arrangement, received, at the time when the money was advanced, payment for their bill of costs out of the funds. The mtge. proved to be an insufficient security, & in an action against the trustees it was held that they were jointly & severally liable to make good the loss sustained. The property not having been sold, or the trust funds replaced, beneficiaries sought to make the firm of solrs. liable for the loss of the funds on the ground of negligence, though S.'s partners had not had any personal knowledge of the property at the time when the mtge. transaction was completed:—Held: (1) in all that S. had done in the matter of the mtge., he acted within the scope of his authority as a partner, & his firm must be taken to have had knowledge that the security was, for trustees, improper, & consequently, they were implicated in, & jointly & severally liable for the breach of trust; & further, the judgment which had been recovered against S., as one of the trustees, had not discharged his partners from liability; (2) though there had not been an express retainer, the relation of solr. & client might be inferred from the acts of the parties; it subsisted between the firm & the trustees, & the firm were liable in damages for the negligence of S. for failure in discharge of the duty which had been undertaken to the clients; (3) the liability extended to the estate of a member of the firm since deceased.—*BLYTH v. Plea; that pltf. instituted proceedings against B., one of the makers, in a ct. in Scotland, & obtained recovery & satisfaction on the note. A summons was taken out to set aside or amend the plea, as calculated to embarrass. Debt. offered particulars. The ct. refused to make any order.

Although the plea is very bare, when the whole is put in issue, debt. will be bound to prove what will be a defence,—that there was a judgment, & that the judgment was satisfied (ERLE, J.).—LAWLER v. ROBERTSON (1858), 1 F. & F. 307.

The owner of the vessel was then sued in respect of the same cause of action:—Held: (1) the second action was not maintainable; the liability of the master of a ship acting for his owners, & their liability where he acts for them, is not different from the liabilities in ordinary cases of principal & agent.

H. objected that the matter was res judicata. Husband & wife—Judgment against wife—Action against husband—Unsatisfied judgment for debt incurred before marriage.]—A judgment having been recovered by pltf. in an action brought against a married woman under Married Women's Property Act, 1882 (c. 75), s. 13, for a debt incurred by her before marriage, but such judgment remaining unsatisfied because she had no separate estate, an action for the debt was afterwards brought by pltf. against the husband who had acquired property from his wife to an amount exceeding the debt:—Held: (1) the judgment recovered against the wife was no defence to the action against the husband.

in which the wife was petitioner was settled without notice to her solrs., who thereupon brought an action against her in which they recovered judgment on which nothing was realised, & they afterwards applied for an order that the husband should pay them the wife's costs:—Held:

(2) A husband cannot be made liable under the provisions of above Act, ss. 14, 15, for an antenuptial debt of the wife which accrued due against the wife more than six years before the commencement of the action.—BECK v. PIERCE (1889), 23 Q. B. D. 316; 58 L. J. Q. B. 516; 61 L. T. 448; 54 J. P. 198; 38 W. R. 29; 5 T. L. R. 672, C. A. Annotation:—As to (1) Refd. Re Parkin, Hill v. Schwarz, [1892] 3 Ch. 510.

579. — Wife with separate property.]—(1) The facts that a husband & his wife, each having property, have been living together, & that necessaries have been supplied for the household on the orders of the wife, afford no evidence of a joint liability on the part of the husband & wife to pay for the necessaries so supplied. The presumption prima facie arises in such a case of an actual authority impliedly given to the wife by the husband to pledge his credit for necessaries for the household, but that presumption may be rebutted by proof of an arrangement under which a substantial allowance has been made by the husband to the wife for household expenses on the understanding that she was not to pledge his credit.

(2) Where a claim was made in an action for the price of goods against a husband or wife alternatively, & pltf. under Ord. 14, obtained leave to sign, & signed judgment for the amount claimed against the wife, who had separate property:—Held: the signing of judgment against the wife was a conclusive election by pltf. to rely on her liability, & they could not afterwards insist on the liability of the husband.

580. — Judgment for only part of claim.]—An action was brought against a husband & wife, who were living together, for the balance of an account for groceries supplied by pltf. to defts. upon the order of the wife. Upon an application for judgment under Ord. 14, against both defts., the husband denied all liability, while the wife admitted indebtedness for the greater part of the claim, & in view of this admission by the wife the Master gave judgment against the wife for a part of the sum claimed, with leave to her to defend as to the balance & with leave to the husband to defend the action. Afterwards a jury found that there was no joint liability of husband & wife, & that pltf. had given credit to the husband only. Judgment having been given against the husband for the balance of the amount:—Held: the taking of the judgment against the wife for part of the claim was an election by pltf. to accept the liability of the wife for the whole amount & prevented pltf. from afterwards proceeding against the husband for any part of the claim.—FRENCH v. HOWIE, [1906] 2 K. B. 674; 75 L. J. K. B. 980; 95 L. T. 274, C. A.

the judgment obtained against the wife was a bar to any claim against the husband.—SULLIVAN v. SULLIVAN, [1912] 2 I. R. 116.—IR.

581. ———.] — Pltf., who was a milliner & dressmaker, brought an action by a specially indorsed writ against a husband & wife claiming against them jointly to recover the price of goods supplied to the wife. Upon an application under Ord. 14, r. 1, for leave to sign final judgment against both husband & wife for the amount claimed, the Master gave leave, & pltf. signed judgment against both. The husband alone appealed. The Judge in Chambers set aside the judgment against the husband & gave him leave to defend. At the trial the judge found that there was no joint liability in the husband & wife, that the goods being prima facie necessities for the wife, the husband prima facie was the principal & the wife the agent, & he held that pltf. had not, by the judgment against the wife, elected to treat her as principal, & was entitled to recover against the husband:—Held: as the remedy was an alternative one, pltf., having signed judgment against the agent, could not afterwards recover judgment against the principal in respect of the same debt, & therefore, the husband was not liable.—*MOORE v. 583. ———.] — (1) In trover for a bedstead deft. pleaded a former recovery by pltf. for the same bedstead against C., averring that the conversion by C. for which that action was brought was a conversion not later in point of time than the conversion alleged against deft., & that before the alleged conversion, C. being possessed of the bedstead, sold it to deft., who paid for it & received it under such sale, & that the taking under such sale was the conversion alleged:—Held: this plea was a good answer to the action.

(2) The damage to pltf. is the cause of the action & the loss of the chattel is that damage. Though the conversion by deft. is different from the conversion by C. & may make either the one or the other liable to pltf. at his election, yet satisfaction from one is a defence for the other (TINDAL, C.J.).—*COOPER v. (1) Although, in an action of trover, if pltf. obtains satisfaction, he cannot afterwards bring trover in respect of the same chattel against a party to whom deft. has transferred it; yet, if he has not obtained satisfaction, he may do so.

(2) A. sued B. in trover for a chattel, & signed interlocutory judgment, but proceeded no further. B. then sold the chattel to C., whereupon A. waived his interlocutory judgment, & brought trover against C. for the chattel:—Held: he had a right to do so.—*MARSTON v. 585. ———.]—On Sept. 20, 1917, a debtor transferred his assets, including certain furniture, to a co. formed by him. On Sept. 27 he committed an act of bkptcy. upon which a petition was presented on Oct. 8, & a receiving order was made against him on Oct. 24, followed by an adjudication on Dec. 12. After the date of the receiving order part of the furniture was sold by the co. to a bona fide purchaser for value without notice, by whom it was resold to another purchaser in the same position. On Feb. 3, 1919, the transfer of Sept. 20, 1917 was held to be fraudulent & void & an act of bkptcy, & the co. was ordered to deliver to the trustee all the property comprised in that sale. The value of the property having been found by the registrar, a further order was made against the co. to pay the amount of that value to the trustee. No payment having been made under that order the trustee claimed to recover the furniture or its value from the ultimate purchaser:—Held: (1) on the authority of Brinsmead v. Harrison, No. 556, ante, the judgment against the co. being unsatisfied, the trustee was not precluded from proceeding against the purchaser to recover the furniture; (2) the title of the trustee related back to the act of bkptcy. of Sept. 20, 1917, & neither the original nor any subsequent transferee could establish any title as against the trustee.—Re GUNSBURG, [1920] 2 K.
